Hospital seeking state approval for area branch

by LYNN ASINOF

The Franklin Boulevard Community Hospital has applied for state approval for a proposed satellite branch to be built south of Wheeling on Schoenbeck Road.

Hospital consultant Norman Davis said he hopes the project will be considered at the April meeting of the state hospital licensing board.

"If we don't get it in this April, it's going to be much tougher for us," Davis said. "The feeling in the state is that we don't need any more hospitals, I'd say our hopes are based on April."

Davis said he expects to be notified in the next few weeks whether the proposed satellite facility will be on the licensing board's agenda for April 10. He said consideration of the matter depends on whether Franklin Boulevard has provided all the necessary information.

"We've sent the application, and they'll go over that application and check it," Davis said. "They go over that thing with a fine tooth comb. We have to have everything to their satisfaction."

THE CONSULTANT said the application consists of "a bunch of questions," including who will be on the hospital board, financing, construction costs and location. More information will probably have to be provided on the proposed hospital site and zoning, according to Davis.

The hospital is planning to build the facility just south of Wheeling on the east side of Schoenbeck Road. Some of the site negotiations have been completed while others are continuing. Since not all of the land under consideration touches Wheeling boundaries, there is some question whether the hospital will be located in Wheeling.

Davis said he is hoping that some representatives from the community will speak in favor of the satellite branch at the licensing board meeting. "Sometimes it's a good idea to have representatives of the community there," he said.

According to Davis, the licensing board usually votes on a project the same day it is considered. "Ordinarily if your application is in line, if you've got the financing and if you've got the organization to run a hospital, then they approve," he said.

For the most part, the licensing board meeting consists of a presentation, questions and answers, Davis said.

THE NEXT hospital licensing board meeting is not until summer, since the board meets only four times a year. Davis said that if Franklin Boulevard has to wait until the next meeting, opposition will become stiffer.

The consultant noted that at the last meeting the licensing board delayed action on several hospitals, indicating some change in attitude toward the construction of new hospitals.

The recently released Illinois Health Facilities and Service Plan recommends that no new hospitals be built in the Northwest suburbs.

The proposed 223-bed satellite hospital would serve Wheeling and Buffalo Grove as primary area and Mount Prospect, Prospect Heights, Arlington Heights, Northbrook and portions of Lake County as a secondary area. It is estimated to cost $11.2 million.

School board to weigh halt of summer fees

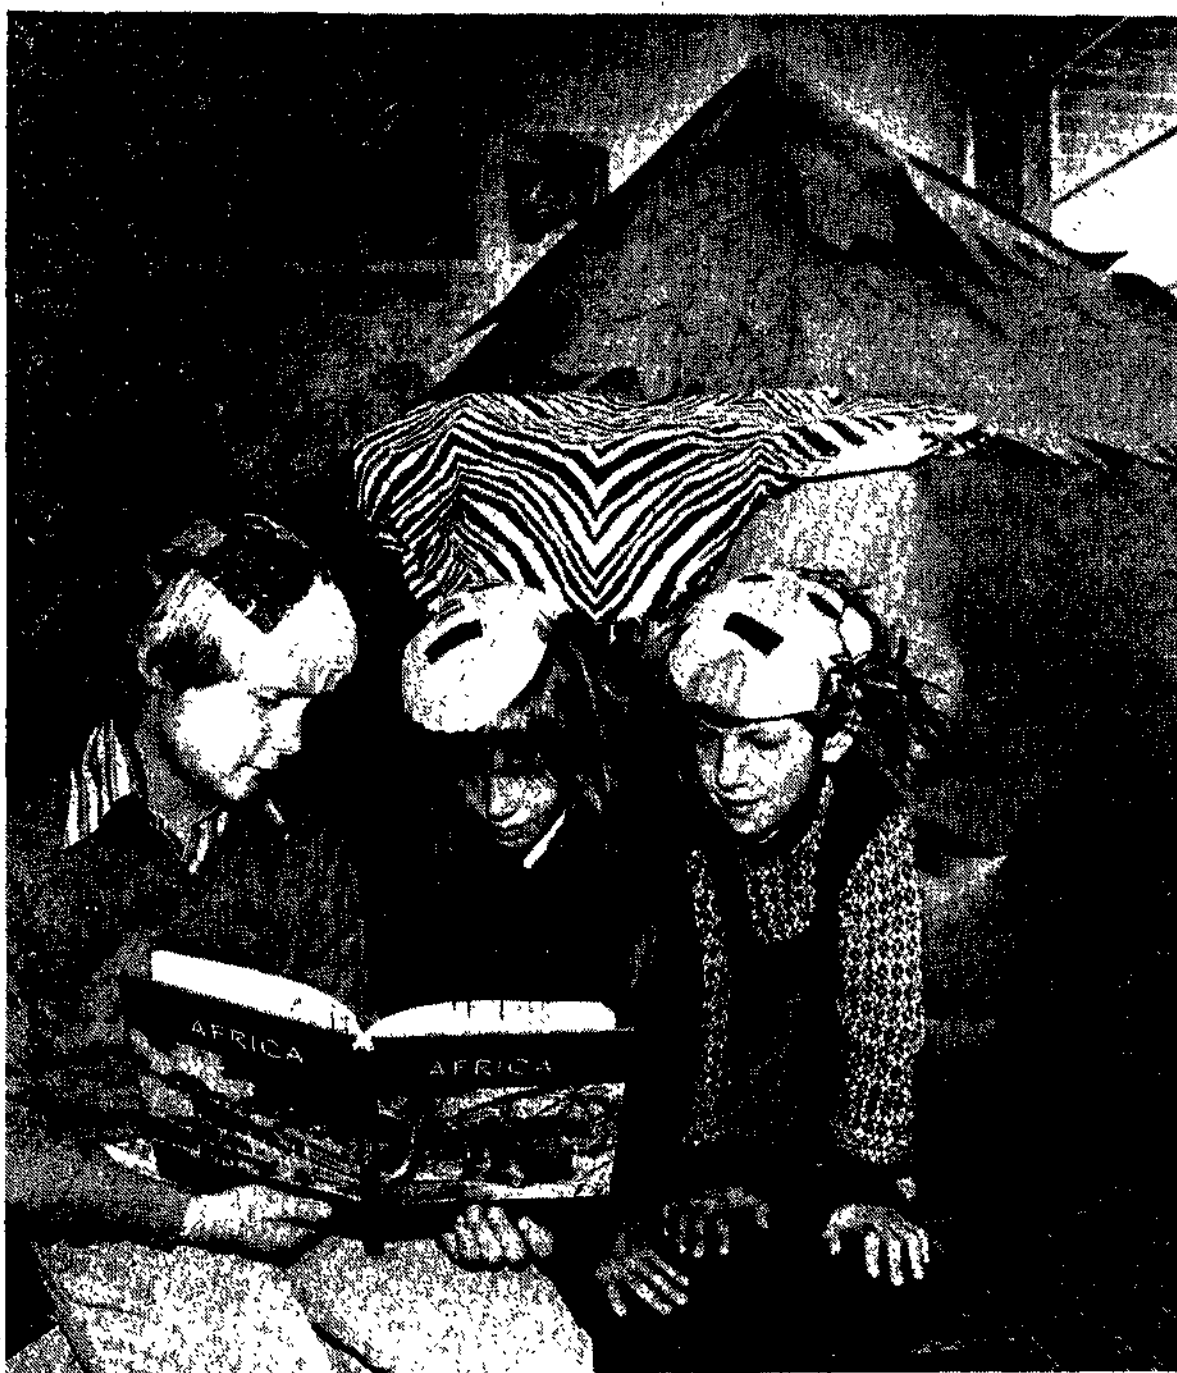

The possibility of abolishing summer school fees will be discussed tonight by the Dist. 21 school board.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 8:15 p.m. at the administration building, 999 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

According to Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill, the board may be able to eliminate the current $5 per student summer school fee because of a recent increase in state aid to the district.

In Cook County Circuit Court

Continue hearing on incorporation vote

The Cook County Circuit Court hearing on whether Prospect Heights residents will be able to vote to form a city began yesterday, but almost immediately was continued to April 8.

During the brief opening hearing,

Judge Harry G. Comerford did accept as evidence two exhibits presented by Donald Kreger, attorney for the incorporation-sponsoring Prospect Heights Improvement Assn. They were certificates stating the required legal notice had been published and that the name "Prospect Heights" was available for adoption by a new municipality.

Attending the hearing were six other attorneys, representing more than a dozen objectors to the incorporation effort. Listed as objectors were the municipalities of Wheeling, Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Northbrook; Kro-Mar Associates, a land company; All-gauer's Fireside Restaurant, 2855 N. Milwaukee Ave.; the owners of Pal-Waukee Airport; and several property owners who live west of Schoenbeck Road and south of Hintz Road.

AS JUDGE COMERFORD begins a two-week vacation on April 10, he also set aside April 29 for a continuation of the incorporation hearing. It is expected evidence will be presented on one of the two dates and a schedule for legal briefs will be determined on the other. Kreger said that several legal objections will have to be decided by Comerford.

Most of the homeowners who are objecting have filed for annexation to Wheeling. However, they filed after the incorporation petition was filed. Thus, Wheeling village officials have postponed consideration of the property owners annexation request until after the incorporation issue is decided. Should the residents become a part of incorporation, they could disannex afterwards as they would be on the periphery of the new city.

Addition weighed

The Wheeling Plan Commission tonight will review plans for a subdivision that would allow an addition to be built onto North Shore Distributors, Inc., 411 N. Wolf Rd.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

Street work to preempt sidewalk jobs

Street repairs will take precedence over sidewalk work in Wheeling this year.

The village is planning to abandon its sidewalk replacement program in order to finance the use of a Cutler repaver for village streets.

The repaver scrapes up the old street surface, fixes it with asphalt and lays a new surface. In the past, the village has used oil and gravel for its street maintenance program, but has found the results unsatisfactory.

Trustee Ed Berger said the use of the Cutler repaver will provide the village with a better street surface that will last longer than the old seal-coating method.

The company that rents the repaver, however, will not allow the machine to be used for less than $50,000 of road work. Since Buffalo Grove is planning to do about $100,000 of repaving, the company has agreed to come into Wheeling for only $20,000 of work.

IN ORDER TO get that amount of work the village is planning to repave Anthony Road and sections of St. Armand Lane, Cedar Drive and Valley Stream Drive.

Members of the public works will make repairs to the street base before the repaver comes in. Village Engineer Larry Oppenheimer said he is planning to make the repairs with concrete since it is questionable whether other base materials will be available this summer.

According to Oppenheimer, the public works department cannot handle both the base road work and the sidewalk replacement program. "With our own forces, we can't do both," he said.

Last year, the village used the public works department to do both the street repairs and the sidewalk replacement. While a substantial amount of sidewalk paving was replaced, little street repair was completed. Oppenheimer said his men did not have the time to handle the street program.

IN ADDITION to the base road work, Oppenheimer said his men will also have to adjust manholes after the repaving is completed.

Village Mgr. George Passolt said he also did not think the village could financially afford both programs this year. He noted that the village's portion of the state motor fuel tax funds may be substantially decreased by the energy crisis.

"The taxes are based per the gallon," Passolt said. "If they are only buying 80 per cent of the gas, we're only going to get 80 per cent of the taxes."

Some of the estimated $160,000 in motor fuel tax funds has already been earmarked for final payments on Wheeling Road and to pay off village street improvement bonds.

PASSOLT SAID he is therefore "a little reluctant to go heavy on the street and sidewalk program this year." He said he expects both the street and sidewalk repairs to increase once the Wheeling Road project has been paid off.

This year, however, the village will repair sidewalks only on an emergency basis. Trustee Ron Bruhn noted that the village is falling behind on its sidewalk program. "It's getting to a point where we can't keep up with it," he said.

Oppenheimer, however, said he thinks the village could repair all of the damaged sidewalks "if we had a year or two going with a contractor."

Bruhn suggested that once the village has all the sidewalks repaired once, the village should consider asking the residents to pay 50 per cent of any further replacement.

GRAVEL, GRAVEL EVERYWHERE is the cry of residents on Berkshire Drive and Mockingbird Lane in Wheeling's Hollywood Ridge subdivision.

Chuckholes in the unpaved streets were filled with gravel earlier this week, but are already beginning to surface. The residents are planning to file a class action suit against developer George Harhen of Preference Homes to get their streets installed. The base has been in without final paving.

Palatine Twp. apartment building gutted by blaze

Several families were left homeless late yesterday by a fire that gutted an apartment building at 2707 Rohlwing Rd., Palatine Township. The blaze, which broke out in the basement of the 10-unit structure, was fought by firemen from the Rolling Meadows, Palatine Rural and Schaumburg fire departments. Most of the tenants lost all of their household possessions in the fire, but no one was reported injured. Palatine Fire Chief Orville Helms said "damage will be extensive" to the building. The state fire marshal's office has been asked to investigate the cause of the blaze, he said.

Hospital asks branch

Franklin Boulevard Hospital of Chicago has applied for a state license to open a branch hospital on Schoenbeck Road in Wheeling. Norman Davis, hospital consultant, said officials are hopeful the state licensing board will consider their application at its meeting next month. "The feeling in the state is that we don't need any more hospitals. I'd say our hopes are based on April," he said. A recent state health service and hospital plan recommends that no new hospitals be built in the Northwest suburbs before 1978.

High-rise plans told

A local banker has announced plans to develop twin nine-story apartment-office buildings in downtown Arlington Heights. Further negotiations with village officials are needed because the proposed buildings don't meet parking or density requirements. In Palatine, officials plan to build three parking garages financed by revenue bonds as part of a downtown redevelopment project. Total cost will be $6 million.

Kickback charge?

A Schaumburg Park District official is one of the targets of an investigation by State's Atty. Bernard Carey's office, which is probing kickbacks to government officials from chemical suppliers. The employee is one of as many as 24 public officials in 10 suburbs who face possible bribery, official misconduct and conflict of interest charges.

Ramp petition short

A campaign to gather 25,000 petition signatures in favor of constructing a Bluestem Road interchange on Interstate 90 in Elk Grove Village has fallen short of its goal with only two weeks left in the campaign. The drive is headed by officials of Alexian Brothers Medical Center, who say the interchange is needed to provide faster access to the hospital for ambulances. The petitions, which bear more than 10,000 signatures so far, will be presented March 26 when hospital officials discuss their proposal with Langhorne Bond, Illinois secretary of transportation.

Palatine pair shoots for $200,000

Mr. and Mrs. George Sorenson of Palatine are hoping to make a killing today when they travel to Kalamazoo and the latest super drawing in the Michigan Lottery.

Assured of at least a $10,000 consolation prize, the Sorensons are among 12 finalists in the 69-week lottery eligible for the top award of $200,000.

Odds on the Sorensons getting this far were estimated at 500,000 to one, according to lottery officials who have paid 68 persons $200,000 each, and nine lucky contestants $1 million.

The Palatine couple became eligible for the drawing by purchasing a series of lottery tickets by mail, the most convenient way Illinois residents can participate in the contest without having to travel to Michigan or appoint friends or relatives to purchase them.

THE SORENSONS were assigned a ticket, at 50 cents each, on Dec. 13. The tickets have two sets of numbers on them which were drawn on Feb. 28. They thus became eligible for today's drawing along with an Ohio couple and 10 other people from Michigan. There will be one top prize winner, two $50,000 winners, six $25,000 winners and three $10,000 winners.

The $200,000 prize is paid off at the rate of $20,000 per year for 10 years beginning the day of the drawing. There are no Michigan state or local taxes to be paid on the sum but the federal government will ask for its share at income tax time.

The drawing will be held at 9:45 a.m. at Maple Hill Mall, a shopping center in Kalamazoo. A few hundred spectators are expected, which has been the average crowd attending most of the Michigan drawings.

Whatever the outcome, Mrs. Sorenson said, the thought of instant riches and the dreams they could fulfill have been quite an experience.

"It's getting to the point we don't think that much about the money but we're having a lot of fun," she said.

Ogilvie to visit area, urge RTA voter approval

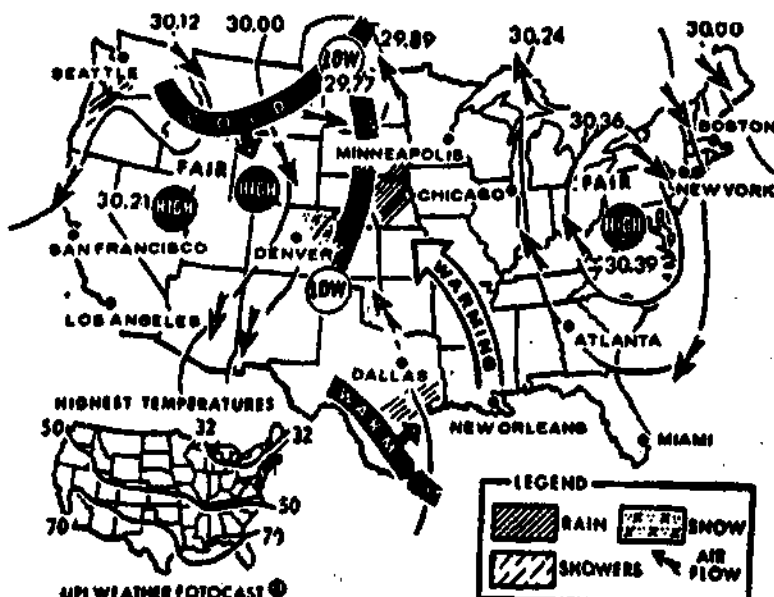

Former Gov. Richard Ogilvie will visit Arlington Heights and Des Plaines Friday morning in a whistle-stop campaign to promote the RTA in several Chicago suburbs.

He will arrive in Arlington Heights about 10 a.m. after breakfast in Waukegan. He will board the Chicago and North Western Ry.'s 10:32 train after talking with local residents. Former Arlington Heights Mayor John Woods and members of the League of Women Voters also will be present.

Ogilvie will get off the train at Des Plaines to meet Mayor Herbert Behrel and United Motor Coach general manager John Hanck. He will ride a bus to the Des Plaines City Hall to talk with residents in the lobby. He plans to leave Des Plaines at 11:30 for an appointment in Joliet.

From 4:30 to 6 p.m. he will talk with homebound commuters at the C&N.W. station in Chicago, backed up by RTA volunteer supporters and a jazz band.

U.S. health plan would cost elderly more

The administration yesterday acknowledged that under its national health insurance plan, the elderly would have to pay more than they do now for short-term hospitalizations and doctors' services. Secretary Caspar Weinberger of Health, Education and Welfare said the plan, however, would more than offset extra costs by offering benefits not available under Medicare and Medicaid.

Defense Department opposes amnesty

The Defense Department said Wednesday it opposed amnesty for any draft violators or deserters during the Vietnam war. Lt. Gen. Leo Benade, deputy assistant defense secretary for military personnel policy, said amnesty for deserters "would be detrimental to the morale and discipline of the Armed Forces and impact adversely on our national security."

3 murdered in apparent Detroit robbery

Three persons, including a 6-year-old boy, were killed and two others wounded yesterday in an apparent robbery on Detroit's West Side. Police said all five had been shot and stabbed by two unknown assailants. Officers at the scene said the wounded victims were in critical condition.

Bar urges Agnew be disbarred

The Maryland Bar Association urged Wednesday that former Vice President Spiro Agnew be disbarred for violating a position of public trust by evading income taxes when he was governor of Maryland. Agnew's attorneys had argued Agnew should not be made a special example because of his former high office.

SLA prisoners in court with TV request

Two shackled Symbionese Liberation Army members went into court yesterday with a request they be allowed to appear on nationwide television to present a plan for the release of kidnapped Patricia Hearst. A superior court judge in Martinez, across the bay from San Francisco, took their petition under advisement.

Declare war on 10 million birds

The townspeople of Graceham, Md. have declared war on millions of birds that have blackened the sky at sunset for months, scared herds of cattle, destroyed cornfields and created a health hazard. Local officials believe the growing flock of starlings, grackles and blackbirds already numbers more than 10 million.

IRS agent testifies in 'raids trial'

An Internal Revenue Service agent who accompanied federal narcotics agents on bungled drug raids last April testified yesterday he did not file a report on the raids until a few months later because at the time he mistakenly thought the raids were carried out with search warrants. The testimony came in the second day of testimony at the trial of 10 drug agents charged with violating the rights of 11 persons.

More opposition to rail abandonment plan

A Southern Illinois utility company executive said yesterday a government plan to abandon "excess" freight railroad tracks would only aggravate energy and job shortages. J. I. Dilsilver was the 53rd witness to oppose the Department of Transportation abandonment plan.

United to recall 650 furloughed employees

United Air Lines announced in Chicago yesterday it will begin recalling in April 650 flight attendants furloughed because of the energy crisis and reduced flights. A spokesman said 36 flights were restored on March 1, and "more significant" increases were expected in mid-May and June.

Wilson hopes to hold office 1 year

Prime Minister Harold Wilson hopes to cling to office at least a year, although he heads only a minority Labor party administration, government officials said. The officials said Wilson made this clear when he handed Parliament a program strongly Socialist in its broad outlines, but designed to sidestep a clash with the Conservative and Liberal parties.

U.S. delivers warplanes to South Vietnam

The United States yesterday turned the first four of a projected 150 new F-4E fighter-bombers over to South Vietnam, Vietnamese air force sources said. The Communists charged the delivery violated the Paris cease-fire accord which extricated the U.S. from the Indo-China war. The planes have kindled a bitter controversy between the Viet Cong and the Saigon government over interpretation of the Paris accord.

11 more POW bodies returned by N. Viets

The remains of the last American pilots known to have died in North Vietnamese prison camps were returned to U.S. custody yesterday and flown to Thailand for positive identification. North Vietnamese officials who turned the remains of the 11 men over to U.S. authorities, said they had no more bodies of American POWs who died in captivity. Officials said however, one body of a B-52 crewman is still in North Vietnamese custody.

History: see N. Ireland as a part of Britain

DUBLIN (UPI) — Premier Liam Cosgrave of the Irish Republic formally recognized Northern Ireland Wednesday as part of Britain in a major bid to end violence and bloodshed on both sides of the border.

It was the first time the Dublin government had given such formal recognition to the northern province since the republic was founded more than 50 years ago.

Cosgrave told a hushed and crowded parliament here:

"The factual position of Northern Ireland is that it is within the United Kingdom and my government accepts this as a fact."

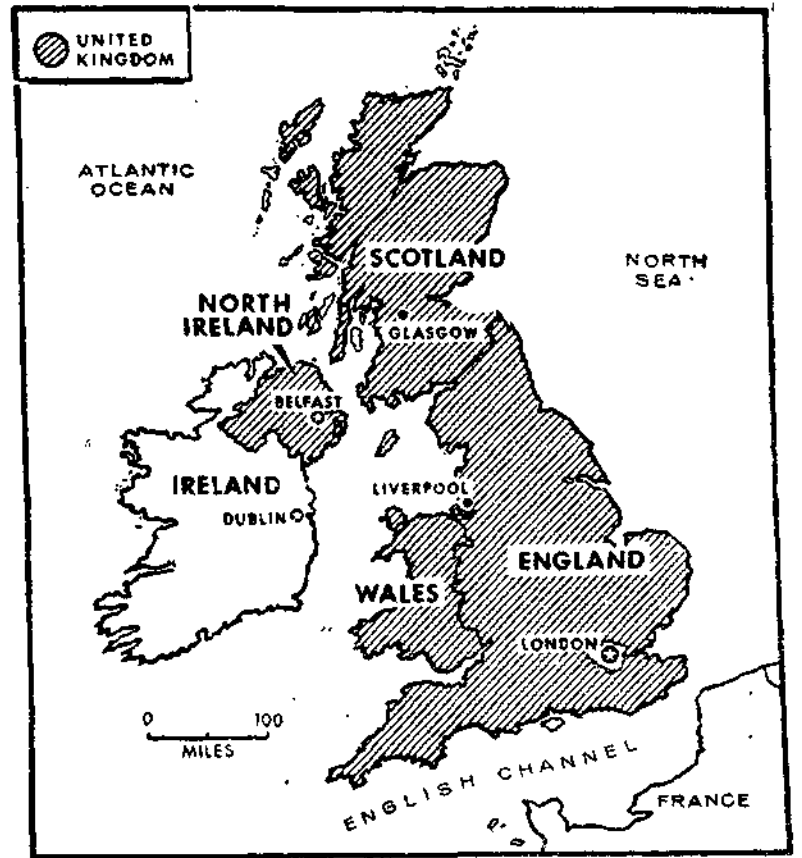

Cosgrave's declaration — historic in the Irish context — was an attempt to remove one of the major political stumbling blocks to cross-border cooperation.

It was designed to allay fears of militant Protestants of an eventual takeover by the Irish Republic, and also to boost the flagging political fortunes of Northern Ireland's ruling coalition of moderate Protestant and Roman Catholic leaders.

Meanwhile, in Northern Ireland Wednesday, gunmen armed with machine guns fired on an army foot patrol near the Belfast city center killing one soldier and wounding two others. In Londonderry a bomb explosion injured three soldiers on foot patrol.

IN AN HISTORIC declaration in Dublin yesterday, Premier Liam Cosgrave said the Irish Republic recognizes Northern Ireland as part of Britain. It was the first time formal recognition was given since the republic was founded more than 50 years ago.

Arab chiefs delay oil embargo move

From United Press International

Oil ministers of nine Arab nations meeting in Tripoli, Libya — to decide whether to lift the Arab oil embargo against the United States and Holland — adjourned Wednesday night and said they will meet again Sunday in Vienna, to give some ministers time to consult their governments.

They announced no decision on the embargo. Although the conference ended without announcing a decision on the embargo, the semi-official Cairo newspaper Al-Ahram said the ministers were likely to agree on ending the embargo and restoring Arab oil production to its pre-October war level.

The oil ministers adjourned about 11 p.m. some six hours after they were gavelled into session by Algerian Oil Minister Belaid Abdessalam, chairman of the oil ministers.

Oil sources had said previously they had expected the meeting to resume in Tripoli again on Thursday.

Tripoli Radio in its 11 p.m. newscast said Abdessalam said he hoped the conference will "produce positive results that will serve the Arab cause." Sources said Egypt and Saudi Arabia were pressing for an easing of the ban on oil supplies.

In Brussels, envoys from the United States and the world's other major industrialized nations — except France — met to map a common energy strategy and be less dependent on the whims of oil producers. France, which has led the individual scramble for oil and enjoys excellent relations with the Arab countries, refused to attend.

In Washington, AFL-CIO President George Meany, suggesting the oil shortage may have been partly contrived, said Wednesday the American consumer is "in the midst of energy swindle."

He said Americans are losing jobs and income because of the energy shortage while the administration's "sole concern it seems is with the profits of the oil companies."

"We are right in the midst of an energy swindle as far as the consumer is concerned," Meany said. "Now is his real crisis or a contrived one?"

Answering his own question, he said the oil companies tell Energy Director William E. Simon there is a crisis "and he takes their word for it... but some pretty persuasive evidence keeps coming up, pointing in other directions."

Judiciary Committee is still pressing

From Herald news services

The debate continued Wednesday over how much Watergate material President Nixon should release, and to whom.

The focus on the issue continued in the House Judiciary Committee, where leaders said the additional tapes and documents the White House has refused to release are necessary and the committee still demands them for its impeachment inquiry.

At the same time, Sen. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., said Nixon indicated to him he believes that relevant Watergate material should be released and a third "entirely trustworthy person" might be allowed to determine exactly what should be made public.

Cotton said the president gave him that indication at a White House meeting during the past 10 days. There was no elaboration on the possibility from Cotton.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino, Jr., D-N.J., said the 42 tapes the White House has withheld "are necessary to a full and complete explanation" of Watergate coverup events.

Although Rodino succeeded in calming for the time being several committee Democrats angered by the White House stance, he said the committee would "utilize the power we have" if President Nixon did not ultimately surrender the tapes — "and that is the power of subpoena."

Rep. Edward Hutchinson of Michigan, the committee's ranking Republican and one of Nixon's strongest defenders on the panel, said the requests for more material were "very reasonable and they are relevant."

Senate passes death bill

From Herald news services

The Senate voted 54-33 Wednesday to restore the death penalty in some circumstances, and sent the legislation on to the House for final consideration.

The bill, which could lead to the first executions in the country since 1967, is aimed at overcoming objections by the U.S. Supreme Court, which in 1972 declared the death penalty unconstitutional as "cruel and unusual" punishment.

The bill would allow the death penalty for treason and espionage and hijackings and kidnaps where death occurs, and make it mandatory where there have been previous murder convictions, for murdering a policeman or prison guard, killing for hire and political assassination.

The penalty could not be imposed if "mitigating" circumstances exist — such as the accused being under 18, or a person taking a minor part in a crime, acting under extreme duress or not being able to foresee that death could have resulted.

At the same time, the Senate refused to pass two attempts to outlaw so-called "Saturday night specials," the short revolvers used in many street crimes.

The senators also ignored a last-minute plea against the death penalty from Sen.

Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, who is leaving the Senate to enter the lay ministry. Hughes told a hushed chamber, "Man cannot make the world a better place to live by returning brutality for brutality."

Report bloody clash between Israel, Syria

From United Press International

Syrian gunners Wednesday killed "a number" of Israeli soldiers and destroyed military equipment in the second consecutive day of heavy artillery battles across the Golan Heights truce line, Damascus radio reported. Israel said the Syrian shelling caused neither casualties nor damages.

The continuing gun duels coincided with warnings from Israeli newspapers of the possibility of resumption of major fighting, with Iraqi troops joining the Syrians, despite U. S. peace-seeking efforts.

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban is to meet in Washington today with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and is expected to relay new suggestions on disengagement talks.

Pope launches new assault on divorce

• Any society that would tolerate divorce, contraception and abortion — said Pope Paul VI — "would be doomed to become a dust of uprooted and anonymous individuals, the victims of a tragic isolation or a soulless dictatorship." The strong words, restating the ancient tenets under attack within and without the Roman Catholic Church, marked the opening of the Vatican's unofficial campaign to remove from the books a 1970 Italian divorce law, with a referendum scheduled May 12. He called on Christians to remain "very firm" against abortion and contraception, and warned, "woe to a society that would not honor the institution of the family."

So he quit after 156 days, coming down to get married with the proclamation, "I'm giving up my throne for the woman I love."

ELECTION 1974

by BOB LAHEY

For several years, Nathaniel Leighton of Arlington Heights has conducted a "shadow cabinet" of the Democratic Party in Wheeling Township.

Leighton and his organization, the Independent Democratic Coalition of Wheeling Township, want to come out of the shadows now.

Leighton believes that the time has come for them to take over the regular Democratic organization of the township, and so he is challenging incumbent committeeman Donald Norman for the top spot in the party.

The Coalition was organized formally in 1970, but Leighton says the work of the group dates back to the 1950s, when he and others, as independents, worked with former township committeeman James Stavros in support of specific candidates like Sen. Paul Douglas and State Rep. Eugenia Chapman of Arlington Heights.

LEIGHTON, HOWEVER, never joined the Democratic organization. He says today that he never signed up because he believed that Stavros ran the organization like a Chicago-machine ward organization, and he didn't care for such tactics.

He still does not belong to the organization, because he feels that the organization under former committeeman James L. McCabe, and recently appointed committeeman Donald L. Norman, has been "more of the same."

Leighton quickly offers that "I have no knowledge of any influence that Stavros (currently under indictment for extortion in the village of Wheeling) has anywhere." He also volunteers that he knows of nothing to connect Stavros with his successors, McCabe and Norman.

The point of the election, he says, is not what the organization has been in the past, but whether he or Norman best represent the viewpoint of the majority of the members of their party in the township. Leighton clearly believes that he does.

Two Arlington Heights residents are running for the Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman post in Tuesday's primary election. Donald Norman, the incumbent, is an attorney and prosecutor for the Village of Wheeling. Nathaniel Leighton, the challenger, is personnel manager for an industrial firm.

Nathaniel Leighton

HIS VIEWPOINT is one which he sees as being shared by such "independent" — the regulars call it "maverick" — committeemen as Lynn Williams in New Trier Township, and Richard Mughan in Palatine Township.

In a nutshell, that viewpoint is one generally in opposition to the management of the Democratic Party as practiced by Cook County Chairman Richard J. Daley.

Leighton sees the township organization as one which has reflected the Daley mode of operation. "Our efforts have been to search out the new Democrats," he says, "and I believe we have contributed to the growth of the party here to the point where we have gained the majority."

Leighton vows an "open party" if he is elected committeeman and said he will ask his opponent in the primary to work with him to increase its strength.

Don Norman: 'Working to broaden party strength'

by BOB CASEY

"I'm proud to be a Democratic committeeman," said Donald Norman. "I'm happier than I've ever been in my whole life because I'm doing what I enjoy doing."

Norman, an Arlington Heights attorney, was elected head of the Wheeling Township Regular Democratic Organization last August, succeeding former committeeman James McCabe, who resigned a month earlier.

Faced with an independent challenge to his reelection, Norman emphasizes changes he said are being made to attract independent Democrats who have objected to the organizational style of the party in Wheeling Township.

"I consider all Democrats good Democrats who support somebody in the Democratic Party in this township," he said. Of his opponent, Nathaniel Leighton, Norman said: "Frankly, I wish Nat would come home."

"I consider him to be a fine, moral person having a fine, moral family. I do not want to hear anything bad said about him ever at any time," he said.

The issues in the committeeman election, according to Norman, are familiarity with the job and experience. He is just as eager as anyone, Norman indicated, to broaden the party appeal.

"I will do my utmost to serve all Democrats in the township. Just because you can only support one man or one issue," he said, "that should be no reason to avoid party activity. I say come in," he said.

Norman, who unsuccessfully opposed McCabe for the committeeman post in 1967, said he was "not satisfied with the organization as it was tendered to me." For one thing, he said, there were no active independents.

And "some precinct captains whose names I saw but I never saw their faces and I still don't know them." Now captains have been added to most of their precincts and in one instance, Norman said a precinct captain was removed.

ANOTHER PROBLEM, he said, is the concentration of Democratic strength in the Village of Wheeling and the lack of party activity in other township communities such as Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Buffalo Grove and Prospect Heights.

Donald Norman

Norman has begun to "beef up" party efforts in the other areas, he said, predicting an increased vote there in Tuesday's Democratic primary.

He said the party now has captains in 108 of the township's 117 precincts and promised to release a list of their names when all precincts are finally staffed. To do so beforehand, Norman said, would cause embarrassment to the organization if party officials downtown saw a list indicating that some precincts aren't being manned.

Norman refused to comment on the federal indictments of James Stavros, Democratic committeeman from 1958 to 1967 who picked McCabe as his successor over the objections of Norman. Stavros used his organization to gain control of village government Wheeling during the 1960s. He has been charged with 10 counts of extortion and conspiracy in connection with shakedowns of developers and businessmen in the village.

BECAUSE HE is an attorney, Norman said he can't make any comment on the allegations against Stavros and five men indicted with him. At one point in an interview Norman denied that the Democratic organization controls Wheeling village government but he admitted he got his current job as village prosecutor on the recommendation of Stavros.

1st District: the Democrats

Dorothy Henehan:

'Average housewife' running because

by RICH HONACK

Dorothy Henehan is just an "average housewife with an interest in politics."

She says she is running as one of three Democratic candidates for 1st District legislator because of dissatisfaction with current representatives. "I feel the 1st District has been overlooked and there has been no representation of the western part of the district," she said.

Mrs. Henehan, 1901 Robin Crest Ln., Glenview, believes the current district representatives have taken no interest in the problems of the people they represent. She says the current Democrats in the district are nothing more than errand boys from Chicago Mayor Richard Daley.

"If the mayor says we need it — they get it."

When asked, however, for specific instances of this happening, Mrs. Henehan had none. She said she "could not give specifics, but knows it's going on."

Mrs. Henehan also said one of her main interests is in the school legislation. She said she believes the legislature should come up with some kind of drug legislation that would cut the flow of drugs in local schools.

SHE ALSO CALLED for new legislation on zoning. "The state should lay down zoning laws that the local villages would have to adopt. We need good state zoning. This type of zoning would do away with the tenement look that is becoming a familiar sight in the district."

Asked about the building boom in Wheeling and Buffalo Grove, which makes up the western part of the district she hopes to represent, Mrs. Henehan was not familiar with any of the problems. She was also unfamiliar with flooding problems in these two towns.

"I don't know that much about the Northwest suburbs that are in our district, mainly because we don't get their news in Glenview," she said. "I know they have growing pains."

On the subject of the RTA, Mrs. Henehan said, "We need it. It's a must. Let's take it now and worry about changing it later. Illinois should make every use of federal funds available and put them into the RTA. We need it and I'm firmly for it."

THE ONLY WOMAN candidate from the district said that she would also like to see a bus system that would run between all the suburbs and Chicago. "A committee should be set up to say how and why money is being spent. This committee could then make allowances to the needed areas. We need this very much," she said.

Another spot that Mrs. Henehan feels the Illinois General Assembly should regulate is in the building of hospitals. "They should study the situation. Places that may need a new hospital today may not need one five years from now. Hospitals should be made to show a need in the area in which they intend to build."

In extended interviews, Herald staff members and Democratic candidates for the 1st Congressional District discussed the issues of the upcoming primary election.

There are two spots open for the three candidates on the ballot for the fall election. Running for those two openings are incumbent Harold Katz of Glenview, and newcomer Herb Sirott of Arlington Heights and Dorothy Henehan of Glenview.

The 1st District includes Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, and a portion of Arlington Heights.

On the subject of narcotics legislation, she said the state should give the power to the police to arrest those involved and serve them with mandatory sentences.

"There should also be a system, whereby the person who turns in a pusher and gets a conviction should be rewarded with $25,000. People would turn in their mother for $25,000."

Mrs. Henehan said that she hasn't received any money for her campaign and therefore hasn't spent much on campaign fliers. She said that she had several teachers' groups and women's groups behind her and hoped that this would work in her favor.

Harold Katz:

Few issues in upcoming primary election, incumbent says

by LYNN ASINOF

State Rep. Harold Katz, D-Glenview, does not think there are many issues in the upcoming primary election for the Democratic nomination for the First District House seat.

"I've long felt that in the state legislature the quality of the candidate is more important than the issues," he said.

A member of the Illinois General Assembly since 1964, Katz said that this year the voters are concerned with inflation and the energy crisis. "Inflation is not a state issue. The energy crisis is not a state issue, except for transportation which is a state issue," he said.

KATZ, A PARTNER in the law firm of Katz and Friedman, has therefore taken a pragmatic approach to the upcoming primary election. He makes few promises about what he can accomplish if he is reelected, but talks freely about matters that are before the legislature.

For example, Katz is interested in the question of how to increase the control over land use in the state. He said this includes problems associated with zoning and flood control.

While recognizing both as areas of concern for residents in the 1st District, Katz said it is unlikely that the state will become more active in exerting control over land use. He said the courts may provide new ways of controlling such development.

KATZ, HOWEVER, is an advocate of regional planning for flood control. He said that the proposed Regional Transportation Authority (RTA) is the first step toward regional planning in the state. He said that if the RTA is successful, it may lay the groundwork for a regional approach to both flooding and crime control.

According to Katz, improved transportation is converting the entire Chicago area "into one region whether we like it or not."

In addition, Katz sees transportation as the solution to another problem — providing job opportunities outside of the inner city for minorities and other low-income groups. He representative said there are two ways to provide such opportunities. One is low-income housing in the suburbs, and the other is cheap and easy transportation to the suburban jobs.

"By and large, blacks do not want to move into these suburban areas," he said. "By and large, you don't want to live where you're not wanted."

He said that in order to avoid low-income housing, an improved transportation system must be developed to provide inner city residents with a way to get to jobs in the suburbs.

WHEN ASKED about the issue of official corruption, Katz said the matter is the same whether it involves local officials or national figures.

"I am appalled at corruption wherever it appears. I am both appalled that it exists and I am appalled that we have the kind of society that allows it to exist," he said.

In order to repair the situation, Katz said he favors strict disclosure laws that would require officials to make public their holdings. He also said he thinks campaigns would become less corrupting if television stations were required to provide free time to major state and national candidates.

In the coming election, Katz said he thinks the Democrats will gain control of the state legislature as a result of the Watergate scandal.

"Outside of a state penitentiary, I don't see how you can collect more immoral men than the White House has," he said.

Katz said a vote against the Republicans would reaffirm the health of the two-party system in this country.

Herbert Sirott:

Attorney finds 'little concern' among eastern district leaders

by BOB LAHEY

While Herbert Sirott did not enter the Democratic primary for the Illinois House of Representatives from the 1st Legislative District because he thought his portion of the district is not properly represented, the chances are he might feel that way now.

The young attorney lives in the northern tip of Arlington Heights, that part that forms the westernmost appendage of a district stretching all the way to Lake Michigan and snaking down the lakefront to snip off a corner of Evanston.

Though the Republican senator from the district lives nearly in the center, in Northfield, the two Republican and one Democratic representative are clustered along the lakefront in Glenview, Wilmette and Evanston.

Without finding fault with the representation of the voters throughout the district, Sirott has however found little concern among Democratic leaders in the east end of the district.

A POLITICAL newcomer, he says

the only real help he has found among the four Democratic township committeemen in the district has come from Donald L. Norman, in his home territory of Wheeling Township.

"The other committeemen have been cordial, but I don't think they're really interested in me," said Sirott.

Nevertheless Sirott determined that "if ever you could elect two Democratic representatives in the 1st District, this should be the year."

HAVING HAD some experience with the Illinois General Assembly, Sirott, 34, says he believes "the legislature suits me." He formerly worked in the office of the state treasurer, under Adlai E. Stevenson III, specializing in estate and death taxes.

During that time he helped draft "perhaps 10 to 15 (legislative) bills." One reason that he would like to have a role in passing on legislation is that "The bills with real substance seemed to be the ones that get hung up."

Sirott now operates his own law firm in Chicago, and works as a part-time hearing officer for the secretary of state, handling cases under the securities law.

SIROTT SAYS HE does not wish to specialize in a narrow field of law. But his experience with the securities act, one designed to protect the individual investor, and his work in the treasurer's office with small estates and persons without lawyers fostered a desire to see legislation designed in the interest of the individuals.

Among the issues Sirott has been talking about:

- "I would work hard for a campaign funds disclosure law." But he has reservations about public financing of campaigns, which might have a tendency to entrench the existing parties, denying equal benefits to minority parties.

- Cumulative voting should be retained in Illinois, because it assures not only minority representation, but a "loyal opposition" to the party in power.

- He believes the Regional Transit Authority to be voted on Tuesday should be approved, then amended to correct deficiencies. While he is concerned about some provisions in the RTA proposed by the legislature, "I don't know how many bills could withstand the nit-picking" it has faced.

Beyond these things, Sirott has not concerned himself deeply with issues to this point. "In the primary I think the main issues should be the qualifications of the candidates."

He believes he has some, if he can get anybody, to the east interested.

'Julius Caesar' ushers in Ides

Fourth, fifth and sixth-grade students at Hawthorne School will mark the Ides of March, Friday, by presenting an adaptation of the play "Julius Caesar" by William Shakespeare.

Actors and actresses portraying main characters will be Peter Schneider, Caesar; Joey Beck, Brutus; Tim Rieb, Cassius; Doug Olson, Mark Antony; David Sutherland, Casca; Debbie Van Cleave, Portia; Maria Lombardi, Calpurnia, and Peter Noonan, soothsayer.

The Ides of March celebration culminates a recent study of all aspects of Roman civilization.

Kilmer chess tournament slated

A group of 123 boys and girls are entered in the third annual Kilmer School chess tournament scheduled to begin Monday. They range in age from kindergarten through sixth grade.

The tournament has grown each year with 78 entrants in 1972 and 111 entrants last year.

Matches in the single elimination tournament will be played in the school learning center during the lunch hour. The meet will finish about May 3 and trophies will be awarded to the top four contestants.

Norman Geske, principal of Kilmer School, and Dave Menzer, teacher, will act as judges and supervise play.

Hawthorne pupils study Japan

For the past two weeks, first graders in Barbara Elder's class at Hawthorne School have been studying the family life, customs, homes and schools of Japanese as a social studies activity.

The children participated in a writing lesson on the Japanese character alphabet, using paint and brushes to draw the intricate picture-words.

They celebrated "boy's day" by making traditional Japanese fish kites from bamboo and tissue paper. On "girl's day," the girls brought their favorite dolls to school and prepared a display according to the Japanese tradition.

Another art activity centered around origami, the art of Japanese paper folding. Each child created his own paper seagull and several students attempted to make paper balls out of folded paper.

Richard Shibata, whose son Hiroshi, is a member of Mrs. Elder's class, visited the school to tell the children about his homeland. He also showed the students how to write several salutations and their names in Japanese.

Culminating the study of Japan, the children participate in a Japanese dinner. With chopsticks in hand, they sampled Japanese vegetables, noodles, rice and hot tea.

For Prospect Heights

'Limited city government' proposed

by TOM VON MALDER

A "limited form of city government" with a balanced budget is being projected for the City of Prospect Heights, should the unincorporated area form a municipality.

The "limited" government could operate on a budget of $437,500, according to Richard Wolf of the Prospect Heights Improvement Assn. board. Wolf has been studying the costs and income of the proposed City of Prospect Heights for many months. He estimates that existing taxes alone would produce income of $433,000.

According to Wolf, the yearly costs of running Prospect Heights would be $60,000 for an administrative staff (a secretary, secretary-treasurer, engineer and lawyer); $27,500 for office space and equipment; $125,000 for police protection (nine men and equipment through a contract with the Cook County Sheriff's office); $160,000 for road maintenance and public works (a continuation of a contract with Wheeling Township); and $65,000 left over for municipal improvements.

FOR INCOME, Wolf said, the county government already receives an estimated $106,000 in sales tax rebate, $110,500 in state income tax rebate, at least $47,840 in federal revenue sharing funds from the Prospect Heights area. Plus another $168,660 in other taxes such as the Motor Fuel Tax fund, Wolf added.

Wolf spoke on incorporation during Tuesday night's special town meeting called by the PHIA for all residents of unincorporated Wheeling Township. Several hundred persons attended the meeting at Hersey High School.

Other topics discussed at the meeting were the Regional Transportation Authority, the Cook County Wheel Tax and the PHIA's Environmental Action Force.

THE SIX-MONTH-OLD EAF proposed three resolutions, all of which were adopted. The first stated that the Rob Roy Golf Course be kept as open space and that the Prospect Heights Park District and the Wheeling Township Board of Auditors be asked to start negotiations for a purchase of the Euclid Avenue golf course. (The Mount Prospect Zoning Board of Appeals last week rejected proposed rezoning of the golf course for apartments, but annexation and rezoning petitions should still be heard by the Mount Prospect Village Board.)

The second EAF resolution called for the creation of a legal fund to be used to fight any development that would "violate" Prospect Heights residents' "environmental rights."

The third resolution extended the life of the EAF, as its six-month charter had expired.

On the RTA, the PHIA urged those attending the meeting to vote against the proposed transportation authority in the March 19 referendum. State Rep. Robert S. Juckett, R-Park Ridge, spoke out against the RTA. A proponent of the RTA, State Sen. John J. Nimrod, R-Skokie, failed to show up as scheduled. A resolution against the RTA was passed by the town meeting.

THOSE ATTENDING the meeting also supported the PHIA vow to bring its fight against the Wheel Tax to the U.S. Supreme Court. Residents were urged by the PHIA to mark their applications for the vehicle stickers "paid under protest" when purchasing them.

The Illinois Supreme Court recently overturned a lower court decision which had declared the Wheel Tax unconstitutional. Sheriff's police will begin ticketing residents for failure to have the stickers on April 1.

PHIA president Jack Gilligan said some $6,000 has to be raised for the Wheel Tax fight, but he said the PHIA and its attorney were confident the U.S. Supreme Court would strike down the tax.

Defensive driving class offered for area police

Policemen from 15 north and north-west suburban departments will begin a two-day course in defensive driving today to be taught by Des Plaines police driving instructors.

The 16-hour lecture course is designed to teach police how to instruct the National Safety Council-sponsored program in their own communities.

Lt. James Scheskie and Off. Robert Neil of Des Plaines police will moderate the sessions. Twenty-one officers from patrolmen on up to chiefs will take the course.

Rolling Meadows Police said Capt. Robert Evans and Traffic Supt. Off. Andrew Herbert will represent their department.

WHEELING POLICE Lt. Robert Nelson may also attend, while Arlington Heights police are also expected to send an officer. Scheskie said the Skokie Schiller Park and Streamwood Police Departments will be represented.

"We hope they will offer the course to people in their own communities," said Scheskie, who along with Neil has taught defensive driving techniques to nearly 1,000 persons in three years.

During the classes, to be conducted at the Des Plaines Public works garage, Algonquin and Campground roads, Neil said the officers will take a modified version of the driving course and will learn instruction techniques Friday.

SCHESKIE SAID the idea for passing instructional methods onto other departments came during discussion of the plan at meetings of police chiefs from north and northwest suburban departments last December and February.

In addition to periodic courses offered to citizens, Scheskie and Neil are teaching defensive driving to employees of the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA).

Some 60 FAA workers recently completed the course and another 60 are currently taking in the program in accordance with regulations requiring employees driving government vehicles to take the driving course.

Scheskie said such programs have been a factor in an overall 21 per cent decrease in injury accidents in Des Plaines for 1973 as compared with totals for 1972. He added another course may be offered to Des Plaines residents in April.

Stavros faces $1,000 fine; no swimming pool permit

James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, faces a possible $1,000 fine for construction of a swimming pool at his Northbrook home without a county building permit.

Stavros paid a $25 county permit department penalty and $123 in permit costs March 1 after he was cited by the Cook County Department of Building and Zoning for failure to obtain a permit.

"We've decided to proceed further and go to court to seek a fine to protect the office . . . if someone is electrocuted in the pool," Asst. State's Atty. John Lee said yesterday. "I'll probably ask for a $1,000 fine."

A Circuit Court hearing on the charges is scheduled April 3.

LEE SAID HE will seek affidavits from firms that constructed the pool in the back yard of Stavros' home at 3705 Whirlaway Dr., unincorporated Northbrook. If the firms refuse or if the statements "show that something is wrong in the construction," Lee will seek a larger fine. Maximum penalty on the misdemeanor charge is a $200 per day fine or six months in jail.

County officials said the pool will be inspected before the hearing. "The biggest problem is telling if the electrical and plumbing work meet specifications. Once a pool is complete, it's impossible to tell," Lee said.

One Circuit Court judge ordered destruction of a pool last year that was built without county inspection, Lee said.

Freshman studies program opinion survey ordered

The Dist. 125 Board of Education has ordered an opinion survey on the freshman studies program in response to a request by a parent group critical of the program.

Approximately 80 parents met with the school board, administrators and teachers for two hours last week, discussing and sometimes criticizing the new freshman studies program.

School Board Pres. Robert Anderson told the group that he will direct the administration to survey freshmen and sophomores along with their parents for reactions to the freshman studies program.

Past meetings with parents have been largely favorable, Anderson commented,

Stevenson band, singers score

Members of the Stevenson High School band and choral groups won 18 first-place superior ratings at the state solo and ensemble contest recently at Round Lake High School.

Band ensembles receiving top awards included the brass choir, woodwind quintet and clarinet duet.

Band soloists who captured first-place ratings included Ann Mason, flute; Patti Schmidt, oboe; Steve Scott, alto sax; Janet Dickson, clarinet; Ken Butkus, clarinet; Patti Lowry, clarinet; Lynn Stanley, French horn; Ray Cook, trombone; Ron Wirth, tuba.

Vocal soloists who received superior ratings were Greg Frantz, Kathy Decker, Jan Horvath, and Lynn Stanley. Top awards also went to the Madrigal singers and vocal duet.

Second-place honors were given to band members Chris Noble, Lori Helke, John Lindenburger and Dan Prowse. Vocalists winning similar honors included Mary Young, Tracy Tobin, Christ Frantz, Bill Witte, Mike Topel and Pat Goodwin.

A total of 28 band and choral members competed in the event.

Puppet show today

Students at the Prospect Heights Nursery School will be entertained by life-size puppets today at 10:30 a.m. when the Bobby Clark Review presents a show based on an around the world theme.

The puppets, which are between three and four feet tall, will be dressed in native costumes and take children on a trip to different countries in Asia and Europe.

and this was the first time any serious criticism of the program had been brought to the board's attention.

In describing the freshman studies program to parents, Dist. 125 Supt. Harold Banser said it was developed because three years ago officials discovered that up to 15 per cent of freshman received failing grades in their first year at Stevenson.

THE TEACHING team was designed, Banser said, to be accountable for 100 per cent of each freshman's time and set up so that instructors do not teach every subject every day as in the regular Stevenson curriculum. The freshman studies team includes a director and two teachers each from the English, math, science, social science and physical education departments.

Each student in the program, his parents and freshman teacher-adviser meet several times a year starting in the spring while the student is in eighth grade. Banser said the advisory system has become important in evaluating the student's ability, desires, likes and dislikes, ambitions and goals.

"Attendance improved, control was better, and tests taken at the beginning and end of the school year showed excellent progress in every important category including reading, language arts, math, social science, and use of resources," Banser said. "We were very pleased with these results and we hope this year's freshmen will do as well."

Asked whether these scores could be compared with previous years, Banser said similar tests were not administered to students in previous programs, so no comparison could be made.

Questioned as to whether freshmen could be assigned to traditional classes instead of the freshman studies program, Banser said such assignments could be made at the end of the first semester. "Next year, we may open more options to freshmen before the second semester," he added.

One parent asked how the broad topics covered in the freshman studies program are listed on student grade transcripts. Topics in the program include communication, the family, cities and natural environment.

PAUL KERN, principal, said the freshman studies topics are listed by course content, giving the student credit for English, science and other academic material covered. The principal added that he has not heard of any case of a student who has transferred to another school in mid-year not receiving full credit for his work at Stevenson.

In answer to a question on the performance of last year's freshmen in current sophomore math classes, Kern said about 210 students are taking algebra or geometry while 70 did not elect to continue in math.

One member of the audience expressed the opinion that the school board's goals in implementing the freshman studies program and what parents want for students are not the same.

Another parent said the group was not entirely opposed to the program, but many believe that provisions should be made to take out accelerated and remedial students and place them in another program.

Anderson said the school board has just completed a program plan outlining goals recently developed by the community and approved by the state superintendent's office.

"We had several well-publicized open meetings, but few people seemed interested at the time," he commented. "I should also tell you that there is an election coming up in April and there are vacancies on the board."

State police to recruit women

by TONI GINETTI

The Illinois State Police are going to have to change their "man of action" slogan soon. The girls are moving in.

For the first time in the department's 52-year history, women will be eligible to take the battery of tests required of prospective troopers. The tests are given periodically, with the next testing expected to be given within four months, according to a spokesman for the State Police Merit Board in Springfield.

Duane Traynor, technical consultant for the merit board, Wednesday said the decision to permit women to apply for state trooper posts was made several months ago. The decision was coupled with another ruling eliminating the former 5-foot, 9-inch minimum height requirement.

"The height standards for the police departments are being challenged all the time, and rather than wait for a court suit, we decided to eliminate it," Traynor said of the ruling.

THAT RULING will also aid in recruiting women to the department since the height minimum, which is above the average female height, will no longer hinder applicants.

"Women will be eligible to take the next testing in the next four months," Traynor said. Women selected will be required to perform the same duties as fellow male officers.

"They're going to do exactly the same thing as a man does," Traynor said. "They'll be required to work three shifts and patrol alone in squad cars. We don't have special slots for women as some local police departments do. They'll be expected to do the same thing as a man."

The decision means Illinois will join several other states which already have women state police officers, including Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Connecticut.

There are no women in training at the Illinois State Police Academy in Springfield, Traynor said, but female troopers could be a part of the force by the end of the year if a recommendation from Gov. Daniel Walker to increase the number of state troopers is accepted by the state legislature.

THE STATE POLICE department is currently limited by law to 1,700 troopers, but Walker has asked for a 75-member increase in the proposed state 1975 fiscal budget.

"It's a matter of budgeting," Traynor said of the proposed manpower increase. "If the funds are available, the 75 troopers will be included in the budget."

There has been no decision made on whether a certain percentage of the new recruits will have to be women, Traynor added.

"The only thing definite is there will be women eligible," he said. "But they will be competing with the men on an equal level in everything."

TRAYNOR said there are apparently no reservations among state police officials about the quality of work a woman can perform or on the ability of a trained woman to handle the job.

"A qualified woman will do the same job a qualified man will do," he said. "The problem will be to find the qualified woman."

State police in Illinois handle primarily the enforcement of traffic laws rather than criminal matters. They are responsible for patrol of all state highways, expressways and tollways.

Sixteen state police headquarters are scattered around the state. District 3 in Des Plaines covers the northern portion of Cook County.

Policewoman still a novelty after two years on force

by TOM TIEDE

BOSTON — When she motors by in the squad car, children still snicker and point fingers. When she's on an assistance call, working men still watch their language in her presence. And when she stops at the station house for lunch, the back-room conversation still turns from talk of perpetrators to such things as pantyhose — "Oh, Kathy's okay, except she's the only cop we got who is worried about runs in her stockings."

After nearly two years on the force, Boston patrolwoman Kathy Fitzpatrick is still a novelty. Never mind what the 1972 Equal Opportunities Act says, she is still out of place. They dress her in a size 8 uniform, give her a petite version of a nightstick, but many Bostonians — including some diehard policemen — remain bemused at the sight of eyeshadow on the beat.

Normally the amusement is sportive. A feminist wonders if Officer Fitzpatrick "goes to the bathroom standing up." When she tells a fellow cop she is going to have her picture taken, the male calls for a wide-angle lens.

BUT OCCASIONALLY, usually privately, the jokes about Officer Fitzpatrick are not so funny. Though uniformed policewomen are becoming commonplace in America, though Boston alone has 32 of them (on a force of 2,530), bitter grumbling continues concerning women in blue.

"I say this," gripes a Boston cop of 21 years duty, "we need these babes like we need ears on our elbows."

To some extent, the opinion is technically correct. Police women have been as much a bother as a benefit to the more than 40 municipalities which have begun hiring them. Changes have had to be made in training facilities, personnel juggling has become more tedious, and as one midwest police chief says it "We worry about their safety, naturally; it's cowardly. I guess — a woman getting killed seems worse than a man."

Yet equal opportunity is the law and progressive police departments from Boston to San Francisco are opening their patrol ranks to women. No one knows precisely how many have been hired in recent years (in 1972 women comprised an estimated 1.5 per cent of American police forces), but the statistics range from one in towns like Danbury, Conn., to more than 600 in New York.

Thus it is that Kathy Fitzpatrick, 26, is out daily on patrol in Boston's 7th District. Thus it is too that, though she wears a badge and a gun like any other police officer, she continues to be as much a controversy as a cop. At 5 feet and 100 pounds, the question never goes out of style: "What happens when some 260-pound killer comes charging from a room in your direction?"

FOR HER PART, Officer Fitzpatrick answers the question well enough, possibly from memory: "Nobody knows exactly how they'll respond in a given situation, but I'm well trained, my eyes are wide open. I can see times when a man might handle a situation better than a woman. I can see times when the reverse would be true. Remember, 80 per cent of police work is nonphysical — but if it came to it, if I had to use my gun, I would."

No doubt she would. At first glance she does not seem so tough — she plucks her eyebrows, wears a blonde wig on duty and is nothing if not impishly cute. Yet she is not so dainty in experience. Daughter of a Boston policeman, she worked her way through college doing housework at 50 cents an hour. After graduation she taught at a school for emotionally disturbed children. She's not had it hard, but not easy either. Her world is real enough.

And her philosophies too are sober and objective. She admits (as do many young male cops these days) there are laws she does not particularly enjoy enforcing. For example: tossing a kid in jail for smoking a joint. Yet for the most part she sees her job as that of a social worker, saving citizens from other citizens.

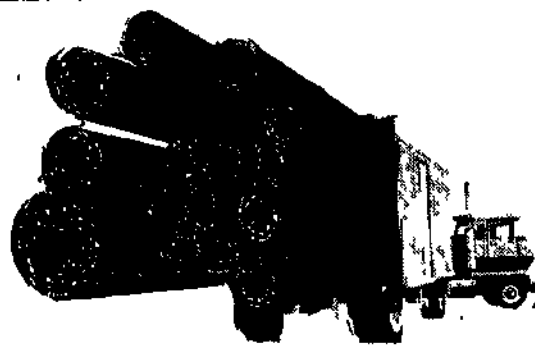

"I remember once a woman poked me in the neck with a stick. Well, she was a mental case and I felt sorry for her. But, it could have been a knife she was poking, and her next victim might be a child. So I hustled her and was glad I did."

ACTUALLY, OFFICER Fitzpatrick has not had an excessive busting record. She believes, as a sergeant at her training academy once instructed, "Some of the best officers are ones who make few arrests." She also hasn't had the full opportunity to crack down on real crime in Beantown: old ways pass slowly and Boston police officials still will not allow women on the beat after dark.

And so it is, frankly, that she is still after two years just a rank rookie. Her district is a safe one, her duties consist mostly of driving around issuing parking summons, her male partners watch over her with a deference they would scarce show to other males. In a sense this is understandable; Boston is still in the experimental stage with policewomen and it would not be wise, as one officer says, "to throw them in without a lifeline."

Security tight for 2-day Nixon stay in Chicago

by United Press International
More than 850 policemen, including 30 plainclothesmen, have been assigned to guard President Nixon during his 18-hour visit to Chicago today and Friday, a spokesman said Wednesday.

Revealing details of the visit for the first time, the city spokesman said the President will be met by Democratic Mayor Richard J. Daley when he arrives at the military section of O'Hare Airport at 8:10 p.m. Thursday.

THE PRESIDENT'S major engagement is a brief address and a question-and-answer period Friday noon at the Executives' Club of Chicago, a nonpartisan group whose members number more than 3,000.

A spokesman for the club said 1,900 members have signed up for the $7-a-plate lunch at the International Room of the Conrad Hilton Hotel.

He said the President was expected to make some opening remarks and then take questions from members who will be able to use four microphones on the floor.

The lunch exchange will be carried live between 1 and 2 p.m. by at least one network (CBS).

EXECUTIVES' Club president William N. Clark, secretary of the Chicago Tribune Co., said the club, founded in 1911, "routinely" invites Presidents to address its regular Friday meetings. Nixon spoke to club members previously when he was a U.S. senator and vice president, Clark said.

Another past presidential speaker was Harry S. Truman.

At least one prominent Illinois Republican, Sen. Charles Percy, has announced that a prior commitment will prevent him from attending the lunch. More than half of the Republican candidates, running in next Tuesday's Illinois primary, have been critical of the President and his handling of the Watergate scandal, according to a UPI survey.

THE PRESIDENT will stay Thursday night at the Conrad Hilton Hotel and depart early Friday. The route to and from the airport has been kept secret for security reasons.

The American Civil Liberties Union announced plans Wednesday for an "impeach Nixon" news conference at 10:30 a.m. Friday at the Essex Hotel, which is adjacent to the Conrad Hilton.

A spokesman said petitions calling for President Nixon's impeachment from "90 sub-groups" throughout Illinois will be displayed and later presented to Rep. Morgan Murphy, D-Ill., a congressman from Chicago's South Side.

Mrs. Toni Hall, who said she was representing an ad hoc committee called "The Coalition to Fight the Attacks on the Poor and Working People," said Wednesday five groups of demonstrators totaling 400 to 500 people would picket the Conrad Hilton during the President's lunch.

MRS. HALL SAID demonstrators from the Vietnam Veterans against the War, the National Lawyers Guild, the October League, United Farm Workers and Students to Impeach Nixon would participate and carry posters urging Nixon's impeachment.

She said her group had sought permission to hold a rally in Grant Park, across Michigan Avenue from the hotel but were told by the city they would have to get a $200,000 insurance policy against property damage.

The Conrad Hilton, Michigan Avenue and Grant Park were the focal points of the riots during the 1968 Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

Retarded adults need permanent facility: survey

A recent survey shows there is a "definite need" for a permanent residential facility for mentally retarded adults in the Northwest suburbs.

"The survey shows that if the facility was built, it would be filled immediately," Guerin Fischer, co-chairman of the Citizens Committee to Serve Retarded Adults, said yesterday.

The committee is trying to build a residential nonprofit, community-supported facility in the area. The facility would provide permanent care for retarded adults at least 18 years old who need lifetime care as well as temporary residential care.

According to the survey, there are 61 mentally retarded adults at least 18 years old from Maine, Palatine, Schaumburg, Wheeling and Elk Grove townships, who have an immediate need for such housing.

OF THE 225 families who responded to the survey, 85 of them said they would use such a facility for temporary care. That kind of care would be provided in an emergency or if a family wanted to go on vacation and could not leave the retarded adult uncared for, Fischer said.

The survey included retarded adults living at home, in foster homes and at the Lincoln and Dixon state schools in downstate Illinois. Many parents who answered the survey were concerned about what would happen to their children when they died, Fischer said.

The committee also intends to poll an additional 75 parents in the five-township area who now have children residing at Lincoln-Dixon. Committee members believe many parents would rather have their children closer to home.

THE COMMITTEE has started searching for 40 to 50 acres for the facility, which the committee hopes would be paid for by state funds and donations. Fischer said the facility would consist of cottages instead of one large dormitory.

"We would build extra cottages as we needed them," he said.

The center would provide vocational training and a nursing staff trained in residential care. Most of the residents would work in the facility although it is possible some would work in the community. The committee is hoping to use volunteers to help with the training.

The move to establish the facility was initiated by the Suburban Township Assn. for the Retarded (STAR), a group of parents concerned because there is no lifetime care facility in the area for their children.

Wildlife

week theme:

'We Care'

by LEA TONKIN

We Care About Endangered Wildlife — it's the theme of 1974 National Wildlife Week, March 17-23. Each year, Wildlife Week is celebrated by the 35 million members of the National Wildlife Federation and its state affiliates.

Thomas L. Kimball, executive vice president of the NWF, said Wildlife Week is a time for everyone to recognize endangered wildlife. Among the more than 100 species on the Department of the Interior's list of endangered species are the southern bald eagle, the American peregrine falcon, the whooping crane and the eastern timber wolf.

"An endangered species does not have to become an extinct one," said Kimball. "Most endangered wildlife can be saved but it will take a big commitment from us to do the job." The timber wolf was chosen as a symbol for endangered wildlife because it has been subjected to pressures similar to those facing other endangered species, especially the inroads of civilization.

In 1966, Congress passed the Endangered Species Preservation Act, recognizing a national responsibility to protect threatened wildlife. The act authorized publication of a list on endangered species and funds for research to preserve wildlife and acquire habitat areas for the animals. "If all of us care enough," Kimball said, "and are willing to support public efforts to help endangered species, we believe these efforts will succeed."

Only 48 whooping cranes

The world's wild whooping crane population has dwindled to 48 — the lowest since 1907. But there's no cause for alarm, says Arkansas National Wildlife Refuge manager Frank Johnson in Austin, Texas. "There is a normal fluctuation in the population of any bird," said Johnson. "We are not really alarmed. In 1938 we had 15. In 1951 there were only 15."

Years ago, there were thousands of the spectacular birds in North America. In those times, whooping cranes nested in the Dakotas. Gradually, ranchers and farmers cleared their nesting grounds and they were shot by hunters. The birds retreated north. Cranes now spend summer months in Canada and then head south in the fall to the Arkansas refuge. There are 21 whooping cranes in captivity, in zoos and the federal refuge at Patuxent, Md.

Controversial nuclear plan

SPEED-UP OF NUCLEAR power plant licensing could prove controversial. The Atomic Energy Commission announced this week that it wants to streamline the procedure by eliminating a required public hearing for construction permit of each nuclear facility, and the requirement of review by the AEC's Advisory Committee on Nuclear Standards for each plant. The AEC sent a package of legislative proposals to Congress, with the intention of paring the time it takes to plan, construct and begin nuclear plant operations from an average 10 years down to six years. The commission pledged it won't "ring" Lake Michigan with power plants. The first of the plants licensed under new standards could begin operations in 1982.

Deposit hearings slated

Beverage container deposit hearings will continue this month, conducted by the Illinois Pollution Control Board. The hearings are held to consider Oregon's experience under a 1972 mandatory deposit law with emphasis on littering experience and effects on canners, bottlers, retailers, wholesalers and consumers. The hearings will be held at 9 a.m. at the Field Museum, Chicago, on March 19 and 20.

Air quality parley

Federal regulations for air quality maintenance and control of indirect sources of air pollution will be discussed at a seminar March 21 in Chicago. It's one of a series sponsored by the Midwest regional office of the Environmental Protection Agency and the six states in the region — Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin.

EPA recently issued final regulations for states and local governments to use in reviewing the air quality impact, prior to construction, of new highways and other projects which may generate significant amounts of auto traffic. The new regulations become effective May 1 and are applicable to indirect sources with construction beginning after Jan. 1, 1975. The Chicago session will begin at 9 a.m. on March 21 at conference room 7A, EPA offices, 1 N. Wacker Dr.

Study lake project

The proposed $81 million Springer Lake project near Decatur, is the subject of a recent federal Environmental Protection Agency draft environmental impact statement. The advisory remarks were presented to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers by EPA's Midwest regional administrator, Francis T. Mayo. The project would include Springer Dam and Lake, Friends Creek Dam, a downstream greenbelt corridor and levee protection for agricultural areas in the corridor.

The EPA contends that the project should not be constructed unless it is accompanied by water quality improvement in the Sangamon River upstream from Lake Decatur. In addition, some of the project proposed could be accomplished by alternate means, Mayo said, citing ground water supplies available in the vicinity.

Flood-control benefits could be accomplished through partial implementation of the plan, he continued. A final statement of environmental impact will be submitted to the President's Council on Environmental Quality for consideration.

Student press has a duty to perform

One of the great things about schools is that everyone has gone to one, and that makes everyone an expert in one way or another.

That fact irritates some professional educators who believe they are the only experts about education. Nevertheless, every person in our society knows something about schools and about the way they prepare students to face the outside world.

I guess, then, the reason I came away from the recent high school journalism conference at Harper College with a feeling of vague discontent is that this time the discussions had impinged on my area of expertise.

The conference involved students from 14 area high schools and was designed to let high school journalists get together to talk about their problems. Some professionals, including a Chicago Today sports reporter and I, were on hand to talk to the kids. But, basically, they had a chance to run the show.

WHEN I SAY I came away from the conference with some vague feelings of discontent, I don't mean that I was unhappy with the students, or with the way the conference was run. The young journalists seemed to take their jobs seriously and they also seemed to enjoy the fact that they had a chance to get together to talk.

The thing that bothered me was the number of times the students said they didn't do certain things in their papers because someone might be upset — and the number of times the "someone" was identified as being a teacher or teachers in their schools.

Now, I realize that putting out a student newspaper is different from publishing the New York Times. And, in a community as small as a school, student newspaper editors have to be careful not to be cruel to certain individuals. But I'm not sure that means that student newspapers have to be afraid to, for example, review a play because the review might offend the play's director — a teacher.

I HAVE HEARD similar stories from student newspaper editors and advisers. In one high school, the paper printed an editorial critical of the student council and the student council adviser complained — not that any facts were untrue — but that "it made us look bad."

I can understand that reaction from teenagers, just as I can understand how student actors might be sensitive to anything less than a rave review. But it worries me that teachers, instead of helping their students see the possibility of press criticism in perspective, are instead encouraging students in the belief that newspapers should act as a cheerleader for the school.

That attitude toward the press is widely held. President Nixon makes it clear he thinks reporters should put only his best actions before the public. Local officials in the Northwest suburbs are quick to attack The Herald if it is "disloyal" to a community by reporting something bad.

by Wandalyn Rice

THE THING these people, and, unfortunately, too many teachers, do not understand is that the press has a duty to report bad things as well as good things. It may well be that the editor of a student newspaper will see things differently than the president of a student council, but that difference does not mean the editor is wrong.

In my experience, and in the experience of most newspaper reporters, the easiest kind of public official to work with is the one who, through experience, has learned that everything he does won't win press applause, and who has enough respect for the press to know that he can't browbeat, threaten or frighten a reporter into becoming a supporter.

I would hope that teachers, when they talk to their student actors or student council representatives, would do their best to explain the function of a newspaper.

A student newspaper, after all, is supposed to be some sort of preparation for real life. And a student council post can prepare a student, not only to lead, but to deal with the reality of a free, and sometimes critical, press.

She has an embarrassing problem—a new mustache

I'm writing you this letter because I have an embarrassing problem I can't discuss with anyone. Please help me if you can.

I'm 26, female and have one child and am very happy other than the fact that I'm beginning to grow a mustache. I know I shouldn't have bothered it, but I became so frantic I've tried everything to take it off and it is only worse.

I'm becoming very withdrawn, and I'm so afraid nothing can be done. Please help me.

I have a wonderful husband but he notices everything, and I know it will bother him very much if he happens to notice it.

If it isn't evident enough for your husband to have noticed it yet then it may not be so apparent or important as you think. Many women have a light amount of facial hair, particularly on the upper lip.

The important point is that it is affecting your personality and your behavior. You will have to get help from someone because you simply can't do much for this type of problem yourself.

I would suggest a visit to your doctor. If you have a glandular problem he would be able to help you. Usually this is not the case, and it is a straight cosmetic problem. In that instance you could then have the hairs removed by electrolysis,

The doctor says

using an electric needle. Skilled operators can kill the tiny hair follicle and no more hair will grow from that follicle. It usually takes several treatments because hair that you can't see sprouts and grows out later. After several treatments the area should stay free of hair.

Don't be foolish and let your problem affect your life. There is nothing wrong with doing things to improve one's appearance. That is one reason teeth are straightened, noses are shortened, hair styled and nice looking clothes worn. It is all part of the same thing. Everyone wants to look their best. Well, almost everyone.

Although organ meats have a reputation for being nutritious, I have heard it said that they are not to be recommended for eating by older people because of something they do to the blood. I would appreciate any information you may be able to give me on this question. I am inordinately fond of organ meats, but I am also fond of being in good health.

Most normal, healthy people can eat some organ meats without trouble. Brains are very high in cholesterol. Liver, kidney, and sweetbreads are moderately high but can be used in limited amounts. Heart has only about half as much cholesterol and can be used in larger quantities and still not overload the diet with cholesterol.

The cholesterol limitation is often recommended to help prevent heart disease.

The only other problem with organ meats is that some patients with severe gout are asked to avoid them. Otherwise, use them in moderation.

'Minimester' highlights: trips to Mexico, Europe

Trips to Mexico and Europe will highlight a March 18-28 minimester program at Sacred Heart of Mary High School, 2200 Central Rd., Rolling Meadows.

The Catholic girls' school sets aside two weeks each year to expose students to different learning experiences outside of the regular curriculum. Each student is asked to select a full two-week schedule of minimester activities from more than 70 events.

Teachers, students, parents and guest speakers will lead the minimester sessions, according to co-chairwomen Pat Philbin and senior Mary Beth Regan.

Students traveling to Europe will tour southern France and northern Spain with stops at the Jacques Cousteau Museum and Carcassonne. The Mexico tour will include a ballet in Mexico City and language practice sessions in local market places. A group of ski enthusiasts will spend the minimester break on Colorado slopes.

Closer to home, students will visit nearby colleges and take about a dozen Chicago tours including the Anti-Cruelty Society, Gateway Drug Center, the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago City Hall.

Discussions and classes on sex, abortion, ethnic groups, furniture design, floral arranging, needlepoint, cooking, Volkswagen mechanics, candlemaking, knitting, bowling and horseback riding also are scheduled.

Correction

Pregnant teachers are entitled to receive sick pay when their doctors certify they are unable to work — not "not" entitled to the pay as incorrectly stated in yesterday's Herald.

The High School Dist. 214 Board of Education Monday approved a policy change to allow women to receive the sick pay, bringing the district practice in line with recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions.

Sick pay will not be available for women who take a year's leave of absence to have their baby.

Personnel trends to be discussed

by LEA TONKIN

Future trends in personnel will be discussed by guest speaker Herbert Heneman at the March 19 meeting of the Northwest Industrial Council in Schaumburg. The gathering will be held at Lancer's Steak House.

Heneman is chairman of the industrial relations department at the University of Minnesota, and director of the school's industrial relations center.

The meeting will begin with a social hour at 5:30 p.m. followed by dinner at 6:30 p.m.

Holiday Inn still expanding

Worldwide expansion of the Holiday Inn System continued during 1973. Year-end figures show 1,591 inns with 246,913 rooms in 37 countries and territories, reports John Sabo, manager of the Holiday Inn of Elk Grove Village. There were 137 inns under construction and 33 expansion programs at existing inns at the end of 1973.

Assets of S&L increase

Assets of the Mount Prospect Federal Savings and Loan Assn. at the year end of 1973 stood at $18,322,528, a 10 per cent increase over a year ago, it was reported by Joseph F. Sokal, president.

During the past year, the Mount Prospect association paid $772,201 in interest to its savings depositors and added $130,314 to its reserves, making total reserves $727,509.

Penney's sales rise

J. C. Penney Co., Inc.'s sales rose 9.6 per cent in February, first reporting period of the new fiscal year.

Chairman William M. Batten and president Jack B. Jackson said that volume for the five weeks ending March 2 advanced to a record $483.6 million from $441.3 million, an increase of $42.3 million. February marked the 131st straight monthly reporting period of sales gains.

Aerospace orders announced

Two large aerospace orders with a combined value of $240,000 were announced recently by Multigraphics Division of Addressograph Multigraph Corp. According to R. Hagy, marketing vice president of the Mount Prospect-based division, one order is from Northrop Aircraft Corp., for offset duplicators and equipment, and the other order from the Boeing Co., calling for installation of 10 offset duplicators.

The corporation recently reported that it broke even in the second quarter operations, which ended Jan. 31. In the previous year's period, AM earned $3.2 million or 40 cents a share compared with $15,000 or no earnings per share for the recent quarter. Worldwide sales were $127 million for the quarter, up 11 per cent over $114.7 million a year earlier.

Bank assets go up

Total assets of the Bank of Rolling Meadows exceeded $15 million during 1973, reported bank president Willis Glasgow. The total represents an increase of $1.8 million over 1972 assets. In his annual report to shareholders, Glasgow said time and savings deposits rose from $7.1 million to $8 million, while demand deposits increased from $5.1 million to $5.9 million. Loans outstanding amounted to $9.8 million at the end of the year. The majority interest of the bank was sold in 1973 to the shareholders of Suburban Bank Group.

A&P enters agreement

Venture Stores, Inc., a division of the May Department Stores Co., and the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., Inc., announced that A&P will operate A&P WEO supermarkets in stores which Venture plans to open in Mount Prospect and two other Chicago area locations this fall. The announcement was made by John Geisse, chairman of Venture Stores, Inc., and Earl Poyner, vice president and general manager of the Chicago division of A&P.

The Venture stores will be located at Dempster and Elmhurst in Mount Prospect; 95th and Crawford, Oak Lawn, and 159th and Torrence, Calumet City. The Venture stores offers fashion apparel, household items, sporting goods and other merchandise.

Warning issued again on candy

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is again warning against eating foil-wrapped chocolate balls labeled "Regent Solid Milk Chocolate." A sample of the candy, distributed by Triumph Candy Corp., Englewood Cliffs, N.J., was shown to be associated with Salmonella Eastbourne in a recent laboratory test. The illness is characterized by fever, nausea, vomiting and diarrhea. Anyone who has purchased the chocolate is asked to turn it over to his local police or health department in a bag labeled with name, address, telephone number and store where it was purchased.

3 area stations must roll back gas pump prices

Three Northwest Suburban service stations agreed this week to roll back gasoline prices and make refunds to motorists for overcharges. They are among 14 suburban and 11 Chicago stations that entered rollback agreements amounting to a total of $71,306.57 following investigations by the Internal Revenue Service agents.

In the Northwest Suburbs, price rollbacks were effected for these amounts:

• Larry's Standard, Rand and Camp McDonald Road, Arlington Heights, $1,200.17.

• Bob's Union 76 at Dundee and Arlington Heights Road, Arlington Heights, $3,613.47.

• Potter and Ballard Mobil, 9397 Ballard Rd., Des Plaines, $1,164.58.

Carson, Pirie, Scott

Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. directors voted an increase in the quarterly cash dividend to 17.5 cents a share from the prior level of 15 cents a share. The dividend is payable March 19 to shareholders of record on March 11.

Carsons paid a 10 cent extra dividend in December, 1973, to raise the annual payout to 70 cents per share. The payout had been at 60 cents per share annually for the two prior years. An additional 4 per cent stock dividend was paid in January, 1973.

Foundation gets unamed $5,000

Harper College's Educational Foundation has received an anonymous $5,000 planning grant for use in developing closer working relationships between local industry and the college.

The educational foundation, formed last fall, provides a means for the donation of gifts on a tax-exempt basis to the college for a variety of educational purposes.

Foundation president John Woods said, "This generous planning grant has been given to Harper to symbolize appreciation to education for the very special preparation and renewal offered to many business and industrial leaders throughout the United States."

During this spring, 20 different seminars are planned in management, supervisory, and administrative skills for several hundred managers in businesses and industry in the Northwest suburban area.

Woods said the grant is intended for the development of a plan for how executive personnel, as a result of their daily work and specialization, can be used as special resources for the college, perhaps as special lecturers, instructors, seminar leaders and consultants.

The grant will also cover the exploration of the potential of such business-college cooperation becoming a model for other community colleges throughout the United States, Woods said.

Funeral costs cited as example

Avoid emotionalism, urges consumer fraud unit chief

by LEA TONKIN

Howard Kaufman is a man who owes his living to consumer emotions gone amok.

"The key to fraudulent business activity is emotions," he warns, "whether it's engendered and developed by the salesman or the circumstances is immaterial." Kaufman is chief of the consumer fraud division for the Illinois attorney general.

One of the more costly, and emotional experiences for a consumer is the purchase of funeral arrangements, says Kaufman. He cites the recent Federal Trade Commission study of funeral costs conducted in Washington, D.C. The commission recently released results of its study which indicate that funeral expenses can be as low as $210, yet the average person pays nearly $2,000 and gets nothing more than a fancier casket.

"Keep away from emotionalism when you can," Kaufman advises, "by providing these things ahead of time." One of the ways to sidestep emotionalism is to purchase a cemetery lot in advance.

ACCORDING TO Kaufman, "Cemetery lot sales is a very high pressure, tough business. Buying the lot is just the beginning. You must keep in mind that the lot itself is a minor part of the expense." Opening and closing (interment) costs, charges for markers and monuments and installation are among the added cemetery costs.

Complaints received by the consumer fraud division about cemetery practices include misleading contracts, overcharging, and charges for unsolicited services. Misleading promotions geared to veterans and incorrectly installed or removed markers are also among complaints. Kaufman advises consumers to take along a friend or lawyer when considering a cemetery lot purchase. Check contracts carefully, making sure all the blank spaces are filled in.

According to Herschel Auerbach, executive vice president of the Shalom Memorial Park Cemetery in Palatine, a reputable cemetery will encourage pre-need arrangements. Most consumers already understand the benefits of pre-arrangements, he contends. Of the 515 interments at Shalom during 1973, for example, more than 500 of the lots were purchased in advance. "We try to avoid last minute decisions," Auerbach says. "It's hard to make a rational decision in grief."

SEPARATE TRUST funds are established for maintenance and for memorials, according to Auerbach. He has this advice for prospective buyers: plan in advance; check whether a cemetery has endowed care funds and is correctly registered with the state; examine the reputation of the cemetery by talking with people who have space there; check the services, as temporary markers, and participation in the national lot exchange plan (buyers get credit for what has been paid on a cemetery lot applied to the purchase of a lot in another location, if they are transferred).

And finally, the Better Business Bureau says prearranged and preneed cemetery and funeral service arrangements may serve a need, but it advises caution. Be careful about entering into prearrangements, the BBB says. Check for escalator clauses in the contract, or other charges which may be added at a later date. Don't overlook the possibility that the existing cemetery management may pass out of existence.

RTA: one 'yes' and two 'no' votes on March 19

Though strongly in favor of regional transit for the Chicago metropolitan area, I am strongly opposed to the Regional Transportation Authority bill. Not that I get a choice about being in RTA or not, because since all the votes from the six-county area are being pooled, the yes-votes of those served by the Chicago Transit Authority could outnumber the no-votes of those who aren't. All this method of counting votes does is aggravate feelings of hostility between Chicago and suburban and makes genuine metropolitan planning more remote.

The bill requires the authority to establish a policy to provide "adequate" public transportation. The bill doesn't define "adequate" or list criteria.

The bill requires the authority to hold hearings and make plans, but there's nothing in the bill to require a review of the plans to make certain that they result from the hearings. The hearings could be ignored.

You may think that the RTA is going to own all the commuter railroads, bus lines and the CTA. This just isn't so. No one knows what the RTA is going to do. A plan should be prepared and it should be offered to the public at the same time RTA is. However, right now this bill permits RTA to "buy" service from commuter railroads and bus lines. There is no restraint on expenses, no assurance to us that service will be maintained or improved, and in fact, permission for RTA to discontinue service. Worse, by "buying" service instead of facilities, we would be saddled with multiple overhead — just the kind of expense that corporations seek to avoid through mergers.

The RTA bill gives the authority power to declare that one or more lanes on any road or street including the tollways are exclusively for buses. There's nothing you or your community could do to stop this, even if it increases traffic tieups in the other lanes.

Not only does RTA have the right to acquire property at a fair price as other public agencies do, but also it may acquire park, state forest, and forest preserve property as well. All this requires is six votes on the nine-member board, a statement that there are no feasible alternatives, a statement that the public advantages outweigh the disadvantages, a public hearing, and a written study of the matter. The bill ought to have much stronger safeguards for two reasons: to guard against the misuse of authority and because the development of public transportation facilities on park and forest lands is an irreversible urbanizing influence which is bound to accelerate the urbanization of suburban and even rural areas.

To finance its operations and development, the RTA could issue bonds and notes and could levy taxes, for example, a tax on the privilege of parking and a tax on retail sales of gas. Both will raise your cost of commuting if you drive to and from the station. RTA has the power to collect and enforce these taxes. It also can regulate traffic and do many other things because it may create its own metropolitan police force which has the same powers as those exercised by municipal police.

The bill binds the state not to change any part of the law so as to "impair" the ability of note and bond-holders to get their principal and interest. However, the bill fails to state which provisions cannot be changed. If it can be argued that such-and-such a provision amended in a certain way would impair the rights of the note and bond holders, then it can't be changed.

Maybe get together with your friends for a bill-reading session, but do it. This isn't just a question of commuter privileges: it's one of your basic rights. Then make up your own mind and make sure you vote on March 19. I've made up my mind. I'm voting "No."

One other thing: remember this bill the next time you vote for the General Assembly.

Justin M. Fishbein
Long Grove

At the March primary election, voters of Cook, Lake, DuPage, McHenry, Kane and Will Counties must decide whether the Regional Transit Authority (RTA) bills passed by the legislature will become law. Some of the most vocal RTA opponents are legislators who say they want an RTA but not the RTA provided by these bills. An executive of one of our major private bus lines serving the region recently expressed the most persuasive testimony I have heard yet for RTA. He could not understand the intricate arguments of these opponents who say they want RTA but oppose these bills. Noting that the bus line attorneys found nothing wrong with the bills, he said, "Unless we get RTA now, we're dead."

It is like several doctors heatedly arguing over the proper treatment to render a critically injured patient. While the argument proceeds, the patient dies.

What we all should recognize is that the RTA bills are a compromise of divergent interests within the six-county region. In attempting to respond to the interests of all the people in the region, it was obvious that compromise was necessary. The result was very fair:

- A governing board evenly balanced between city and suburbs;
- A funding system combining state participation and motor vehicle related taxes (gas and parking facilities) raised within the district;
- Flexibility to maintain and improve existing carriers and to add new service; and
- Maximum public exposure and public scrutiny.

The important factor now is that unless immediate action is taken to approve a regional transit authority and get us off on the right foot toward a coordinated transportation system, many of our mass transportation carriers will collapse. If this happens, we shall be left with a far greater problem than we presently face. Ultimately a new mass transit system will have to be built from scratch. If instead we give it an infusion of organization and funding now, we can save our existing transit carriers and make them well.

In the midst of an energy crisis, it is not unlikely that people will turn to mass transportation, possibly in droves. It is vital that we do not miss this opportunity to establish a truly effective transit system.

I believe the compromise package is an extremely sound one. However, those who want an RTA, but hope for an improved version, should come to grips with the serious questions: If this legislation is defeated, what is the likelihood of a better bill passing? In the near future, or ever? We are facing an election year in which all legislators will be reluctant to vote for "RTA" when the voters just defeated it in a referendum. The died-in-the-wool opponents of any RTA will claim that the defeat was a clear sign from the voters that they don't want any RTA, much less some alternate RTA that the proponents espouse.

It is sheer nonsense to expect that after the past year of lengthy negotiating over a very controversial and politically explosive subject, culminating in a true compromise, that the General Assembly would blithely return in the spring and pass another bill. In short, if the opponents are successful, they may have killed RTA for the foreseeable future.

The metropolitan region of Cook, Lake, DuPage, McHenry, Kane and Will Counties needs a regional transit authority now. It is essential to the economic health of the area and it is essential to avoid transportation chaos. The Authority will become a reality if enough of us vote "YES" on RTA blue ballot at the March 19th election.

Bradley M. Glass
Northbrook

Then a concerned senior lady spoke: "Here in Mount Prospect we can travel anywhere by a cab for only 30 cents. Could RTA give us a better deal?" The young lady commented that the senior citizens are exceedingly lucky to be living in Mount Prospect, for as far as she knew there is only one Mount Prospect where the senior citizens get so much for so little.

Now to go on with my story. It has been said that "nothing is really all good or all bad; there's some of each in all things." So to fairly evaluate any proposition, both the pros and cons of the matter should be heard out and discussed. All aspects of the RTA were broadly covered in the press, and those of us who have followed the articles have a fairly accurate picture in their minds about the RTA.

If approved by the voters on March 19, it would create a monstrous bureaucracy second only to the state government. It would start eating up the taxpayer's money faster and in greater chunks than a haybaler the hay — by billions of dollars and virtually not guaranteeing of better service anywhere.

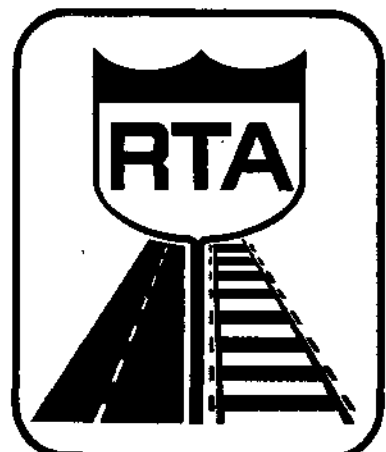

Voting for the RTA on March 19 would be voting for to put Mr. Richard Daley, the Chicago's mayor, in the driver's seat. And as soon as he got his hands curled around the steering wheel, he would, with the help of his hand-picked members to the board, exert his controls over the entire six-county system. He would see to it that his "beloved baby" of years ago, now a crippled senior citizen, commonly called the CTA, got rejuvenated, properly fed, clothed and doctored at the taxpayer's expense of no less than $100 million a year.

Then the RTA will become his "second baby." It, too, would have to be given a decent care — best of everything. And his honor knows how to do it. It will eat up around $171 million the first year. And every year that follows, it would be crying for more food, better clothing and more efficacious medication. Every Ma and Pa knows how gluttonous a growing baby can be! And by 1980 it would be a real whopper, and only six years old. Then, according to the estimates of some experts, this six-year-old whopper, the RTA, will be over a billion dollars in the hole! Mr. Taxpayer, doesn't it make you feel sick in the stomach?

Here is what will make you really sick. If the RTA is approved on March 19, you will start to contribute to it immediately. About $98 the first year if you are living in Mayor Daley's camp, or about $198, if you are living in suburban Cook County. By 1980 you will be taxed $210 and $425 respectively! By that time new taxes will be sought to bail out the bankrupt RTA, as new taxes have been constantly sought to bail out the CTA.

Now, Mr. Taxpayer, if you want to hang on some of your savings at the bank, go to the polls on March 19 and vote NO on RTA. If the proposal is defeated, it will be sent back to the legislature. A new RTA proposal will be written, and you may be assured, it will be more responsive to the taxpayer wants and needs.

Anton Dvylis
Mount Prospect

On March 4, a young lady from the Environmental Quality for the League of Women Voters came to the Young At Heart meeting to pitch for the Regional Transportation Authority, commonly called the RTA. In a lengthy talk she painted a glamorous picture about RTA, being careful to keep out its octopus-like tentacles that would ensnare the taxpayers of six Illinois counties if it were

gion. In attempting to respond to the interests of all the people in the region, it was obvious that compromise was necessary. The result was very fair:

- A governing board evenly balanced between city and suburbs;

No selection in assessor's race

The March 19 Democratic primary election for Cook County assessor offers little if anything for Northwest suburban voters.

Former chief deputy assessor Thomas Tully and Chicago Ald. Edward Vrdolyak seem to have forgotten that the election is occurring in the suburbs, as well as in Chicago.

The Herald endorses neither Tully nor Vrdolyak for the position, although we prefer Tully on the basis of his past record.

Tully won our praises in 1973, after he had worked diligently to reform the scandal-ridden assessor's office. In two years under P. J. Cullerton, Tully had eliminated many inequities in assessment practices and improved communication with the press.

However, Tully's campaign for the office has studiously ignored the Northwest suburbs, as did past Cullerton campaigns. Tully's name is plastered on local buses, his smile is part of TV commercials, but his personal campaign in the Northwest suburbs has been limited.

His office has been unwilling to schedule a campaign interview with the Herald's editorial staff. Accordingly, we can't endorse the candidate until we can interview him on a face-to-face basis.

His opponent, Edward Vrdolyak, is an inadequate alternate, for he lacks a concrete platform of issues and has limited qualifications to serve in this all-important county-wide post.

Whichever man wins this primary election and must compete against Alice Ihrig, the GOP candidate for this office, must face a variety of questions about the unfinished reforms in the assessor's office. Revelations of tax breaks for favored property owners continue, assessment information is too often misleading and too much of the office's work continues in private.

Both candidates, in the general election, must deal with suburban assessment problems, as well as defining the role of township assessors in determining real estate and home values. Hopefully, in the general election the candidates will not ignore the suburbs.

Four GOP choices for County Board

The Herald endorses Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines, Carl Hansen of Mount Prospect, Hal Tyrrell of LaGrange Park and Joe Woods of Oak Park for four of the six seats on the Cook County Board.

Three other candidates — Mrs. Mary McDonald of Lincolnwood, Ronald Larsen of Merrionwood Park and John Kneafsey of Evanston — are seeking the two remaining seats. The three have limited qualifications, and the Herald does not endorse any of them for the seats.

Fulle, a ten-year commissioner, will hopefully push the five other elected GOP suburban commissioners towards a goal of increased county services for suburbanites. He's been a hard-working commissioner who has become a zoning specialist for the GOP board minority.

Hansen, a committeeman like Fulle, served on the board in 1970 to fill out a commissioner's term. His studious approach to county government and its financing is long overdue on the board.

Woods, a former Cook County sheriff, has served four years on the board, and his expertise in law enforcement encourages us to endorse his reelection. He's been an especially effective commissioner behind the scenes. Tyrrell is a successful businessman, as well as a committeeman for Proviso Township; his business experience is needed on the board.

Of the remaining three candidates, Mrs. McDonald was added to the ticket at the last minute to counter criticism that the ticket lacked a woman. Larson, also a regular slatemaking choice, is Worth Twp. committeeman; he lacks knowledge of county government.

Kneafsey, an Evanston attorney and alderman, challenged the GOP slate as a GOP independent. However, his qualifications aren't strong enough to prompt an endorsement from the Herald.

A court decision added the sixth suburban seat to the board last year. It assures the suburbs of one additional board member to represent our interests. Voters on March 19 in the GOP primary should study the candidates carefully before making choices.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Much of the interest in this month's primary election will center around local races, including those for the state legislature. One of the elements in these contests is Gov. Daniel Walker. UPI's Springfield Bureau Manager Bob Kleckhefer examines Walker's involvement.

by ROBERT KIECKHEFER
SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Gov. Daniel Walker is out to get Richard Hart — and about a dozen other incumbent Democratic lawmakers — in the March 19 primary election.

If the governor's efforts are successful, those senators and representatives will return to private life while independent Democrats backed by Walker take their legislative seats next January.

Walker began active campaigning this week, primarily in the Chicago area. Earlier, though, his forces leaked a list of candidates they will support.

Most of those targeted by the governor's office for political extinction are loyalists of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley. But also on the list are such Democratic regulars as Hart, a three-term representative from Benton, and Rep. Frank Giglio, a Calumet City freshman.

AMONG THE Chicagoans targeted for a forced retirement are Senators Fred Smith and Harold Nudelman and Reps. Richard Kelly, John Leon and John Beaty. In several Chicago districts, Walker doesn't care which of the incumbent Democrats his candidate defeats.

The reasons for Walker's "purge" attempt are not difficult to find.

He has fared poorly in the legislature during his first year, losing close votes on one crucial issue after another. A mere handful of new, friendly faces could turn that trend around. And, since Walker's efforts are directed primarily at those who already oppose him, he has little to lose even if they gain reelection.

Another consideration is that Walker would like a firm grasp on that portion of the state's Democratic party machinery not already held by Daley.

"If we can nominate some candidates favorable to us," deputy governor Victor DeGrazia said recently, "it will cause others oriented to Daley or the old power structures to think more carefully about the way things go."

WALKER WON his primary fight two years ago largely by presenting an anti-Daley front. Although he since has worked with the mayor on many issues, he has kept that image alive for public consumption.

Should he make a presidential bid in 1976, that anti-Daley image could again give him a springboard.

Daniel Walker

The technique of Walker's primary involvement is as varied as the state's 59 legislative districts.

In at least one case, DeGrazia personally telephoned a potential candidate, urging him to run against an incumbent disliked by Walker.

That candidate, Robert Gesiakowski, an Oak Lawn furniture dealer, at first didn't believe Walker wanted him to run. It wasn't until after the deputy governor told him personally that incumbent Richard Kelly "has to go" that he decided to make the race.

In the far-southern 59th District, Walker has had a candidate shoved down his throat. And, strangely enough, it's his son-in-law, David Hall Vaught of Carmi. By all reports, Walker and DeGrazia repeatedly urged Vaught not to run. He decided against their advice to do so and now DeGrazia is backing Vaught, hoping to knock off Hart, who has angered Walker.

IN OTHER districts, Walker forces apparently have decided simply to back the best available candidate in an effort to oust an incumbent.

Walker's activity, too, is varied. This week he began a personal-appearance blitz in the Chicago area on behalf of favored candidates. One, Julius Gyorke of Brookfield, is running in the district where Daley's House spokesman, Gerald Shea of Riverside, currently holds the only Democratic seat.

Members of the governor's cabinet, too, have been out campaigning. And Walker is writing letters of support for still other candidates.

Some office seekers, however, are not going out of their way to seek Walker's "help." DeGrazia has told several persons that some candidates have refused active assistance even when it has been offered.

Too old for college?

At DePaul's 'School for New Learning,' adults receive credit for things done outside class

by WANDALYN RICE

Here you are, in your 30s, or maybe older. You never went to college and you think a degree would be helpful, but you don't relish the thought of sitting through elementary classes on subjects you taught years ago.

DePaul University may be looking for you. DePaul has started a "School for New Learning," which has a branch in Park Ridge to serve the Northwest suburbs. It is open only to persons over 24 years old and is designed to give credit for the things accomplished outside of school.

In addition, it can grant a full-fledged bachelor of arts degree from DePaul in almost any major field.

Next week the Park Ridge center, 1500 Higgins Rd., will have an open house. Leaders of business, education and volunteer organizations will be invited, along with persons who may think the college is for them.

The center will be open to the public Monday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., Tuesday from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m., Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Friday from 10 a.m. to noon and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

THE SCHOOL for New Learning is "goal-oriented" and dedicated to turning out persons who are employable as well as educated, according to Mary Durkin, director of the Park Ridge center. Instead of fulfilling requirements by taking specific courses, students must demonstrate their "competency" in 40 to 50 specific skills related to their chosen vocation, communications, interpersonal relations, and areas of the social sciences, she says.

To demonstrate "competency" in each skill, a student may present evidence that he or she has done something in a job or as a volunteer, may get credit for traditional courses, including adult education courses, may take traditional courses at DePaul or other schools or special courses offered by the School for New Learning, she says.

However, the first thing a student who wants a bachelor's degree must do, she says, is participate in a "discovery workshop" with about 20 other prospective students and staff members from the school. "In the discovery workshop, persons learn to articulate their educational goals — their reasons for going back to school," Mrs. Durkin says. "They also learn how to look at their experience and translate it into our competency requirements."

ABOUT HALF the students who go through discovery workshops, who may be businessmen or housewives and who range in age from the late 20s to the 60s, will apply to the college, Mrs. Durkin says. "Most of the others don't apply because the school just isn't the place for them," she says.

Once he is accepted by the school, the student sits down with a committee of advisers, made up of a staff member for the college, a teacher in the major field, someone working in the major field and a peer, who evaluates his experience and makes plans for fulfilling competencies he has not fulfilled through experience.

The competencies may be met through individual study, by taking a School for New Learning course, or by taking a traditional course. "Some people come here thinking they'll never have to sit in a classroom," Mrs. Durkin says. "But that all depends on where they are when they start."

THIS SPRING, the center will offer its first School for New Learning courses in the Northwest suburbs, Mrs. Durkin says. The topics of the courses range from "Alternative Uses of Money," through "Comparative News Media," to "Visions in Art." The courses are designed to fulfill specific "competencies."

Students who are not pursuing a bachelor's degree, Mrs. Durkin says, may take the courses without going through a discovery workshop.

Students who have been in the school so far have started out with a wide variety of skills, Mrs. Durkin says. The staff of the school estimates that the minimum amount of time required for a BA degree is nine months, but many persons will take longer than that, she says.

The school does not plan to compete with the local community colleges or with high school adult education programs, Mrs. Durkin says. School for New Learning courses are all at the junior and senior college level, she says, and community colleges can cooperate with the school by giving students the first two years toward a degree.

About 60 students are now in the B.A. program, Mrs. Durkin says. "In the beginning it looked like it was going to be primarily for women, but at our last workshop we had 15 men and five women. We had one Chicago policeman who must have the equivalent of a Ph.D. in course work, but who has never gotten a degree."

'Shelter home' for teen girls studied for area

A shelter home for teen-age girls to serve the North and Northwest suburbs is being considered for federal grant funding by the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission.

Named Crisis Homes Inc., the project organized by a group of volunteers is aimed at providing temporary housing for runaways, children without homes, and children in trouble.

The shelter, expected to be located in Evanston, would also give courts and police an alternative to Chicago's Audy Home in housing juvenile offenders.

"On March 7 in 14 suburbs we surveyed there were a total of 144 children — boys and girls — who could have used such a shelter if it were available," Crisis Homes chairman Patricia Siebert said.

THE $125,824 GRANT sought by the group would be enough to establish an emergency shelter with a "youth hostel setting" to serve up to 15 youngsters at one time.

Although the shelter would only serve girls between the ages of 12 and 17, the group hopes that if this first shelter is a success its program could be expanded.

Des Plaines, Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Wheeling are among the communities the shelter would aim at serving, Mrs. Siebert said, although children from all areas would be accepted at the shelter.

The shelter would be able to help children in any sort of crisis — from the child whose mother is hospitalized and needs care to the child involved with drugs, she said.

Hersey moves ahead with stunning win!

by MIKE KLEIN

At 8:43 p.m. last night, Dave Corzine smiled and with one upward thrust of his huge right arm, told the world and everyone in Arlington's Grace Gym that Maine South is no longer No. 1 in anything.

Maine South has sung its yearly swan song in IHSAA sectionals, losing 49-44 to Hersey. The Hawks never looked good and it was largely because Corzine played dynamic, inspired basketball.

The big kid, who should have dispelled any "laziness" talk last night, converted 10-of-19 field goal attempts and made one-of-two free throws to lead all scorers with 21 points.

Statistics showed the 6-foot-11 All-State candidate with only four rebounds, but Corzine played an aggressive and fan pleasing game that never allowed Maine's Peter Schmelzer or Pete Boesen to get together a head of steam.

Corzine's obvious brilliance came to a head during the final 72 seconds when he blocked shots by Schmelzer at 1:12, Boesen at 0:37 and John Reilly at 0:24.

After Boesen, South's leading scorer with 14 points, hit a game-ending bucket at the buzzer, Corzine ran downcourt, arms outstretched over his head, a huge smile on his face and with the knowledge that he had, indeed, dominated the best big men the Central Suburban League can offer.

Maine South never led and was down by as much as 10 points, 20-10 during the second quarter. The Hawks tied Hersey at 36-36 and 38-38, but quickly fell behind 44-38 and were out of it.

The decisive baskets were one each by Corzine and Mark Krause plus two free throws from Clyde Glass. The Hawks couldn't come back from a series of turnovers and ended their season with a 23-2 record. Hersey takes a 17-9 mark into Friday evening's sectional title game against Evanston. The winner advances to super-sectionals next Tuesday afternoon at Northwestern University.

Hersey held a 21-18 rebounding advantage over Maine South. All the major work was done by three men as Glass had 10 boards, Rich Madison five and Corzine his four. Schmelzer had six for the Hawks but Boesen managed only three.

Oddly, both clubs converted 22-of-44 field goal attempts. But Hersey had an edge at the line, making five-of-nine while the Hawks were going zero-for-two.

Glass added 10 points for the Huskies while Krause and Madison scored four apiece. Bob McCarthy scored 10 for Maine South and Tim Bopp had eight.

The Hawks never developed their well-known fast break and Hersey never folded. So now Maine South must wait until next year, as usual.

The first half ended with Boesen missing two free throws at 0:00 after he was fouled by Corzine on a last second shot attempt from about 12 feet. Boesen went to the line and bounced both shots off the rim.

Maine South had a combination man-zone defense ready for Corzine. But they had to switch to a 1-3-1 halfcourt zone press during the second quarter.

The Hawks opened with Schmelzer on Corzine and getting collapse help from Boesen. Corzine, who had 12 points at the half, collected one reverse lay-in to give Hersey a 2-0 lead. He dropped through two more leftside baseline shots as Hersey led, 12-6, after one period.

Corzine came back with a tip and two shots from the right side during the second period. He had one shot blocked by Schmelzer during the first half and missed three others. He had four rebounds and Glass five for Hersey. The Hawks had four men with one rebound apiece.

But it wasn't Corzine's effectiveness which caused the Hawks to switch away from their combination man-zone. Rather, they were getting poor play from guards Tim Bopp and John Reilly. Both were gone for most of the second quarter as Denny Kladis and Tom Florentine came on.

The Hawks trailed 20-10 at 3:58 before half following baskets by Rich Madison and Corzine. But the Hawks came back within five points, trailing 25-20 at the half. Boesen and Bob McCarthy had six points each for Maine South at the half.

Goalie sensation now a defenseman

by IRA BERKOW

TORONTO — Ken Dryden only last season had been the young goalie sensation of the, as they say, legendary Montreal Canadiens. He still plays hockey, but now the 26-year-old Dryden skates as defenseman for a team in the Lake Shore Community League here.

"I'm not too good at it," said Dryden recently, "but I'm getting better, though I don't think I'll ever be a classic defenseman."

He said he scored a goal in the first shift of the first game he played this season, and was unsure what to do, until one of his teammates told him to throw up his arms and skate around center ice.

"It wasn't a great shot," he said, "and besides, the goalie should have had it."

In his heart, obviously, Dryden is still a goalie. And soon he plans to return to the strange world of cobbwebby net and scary mask. He says that next season he will join a World Hockey Association team (he is not yet sure which one) since he cannot play in the National Hockey League unless he plays for Montreal. And he won't do that.

Dryden left the Canadiens rather than sign a contract for less money than he believed he deserved. He says he had been earning more than $50,000 but less than $100,000. "And all I asked for was what other comparable players were making," he said. "But the Canadiens didn't think they had to pay me that."

The Canadian management, according to Dryden, have had a history of arrogant treatment toward its players. "It's a great city, and it's a great team," said Dryden, "so they always got away with paying their players less than they should have."

Dryden would not be budged from his position. "It became a matter of principle," he said. Dryden, the only Ivy Leaguer (Cornell graduate) to ever play goalie in the National Hockey League, learned first-hand about principles from working during summers as one of Ralph Nader's Raiders on pollution control.

Dryden is not the typical hockey player who has only an eighth-grade education to go along with his set of false teeth. He has graduated from law school, and is now working for a distinguished law firm in Toronto, his home town.

He is what is known as an articling student. In Canada, a prospective lawyer must work one year as a kind of apprentice with a law firm before he is permitted to write the bar exam. With another articling student, Dryden shares a small office which he describes as "basically strewn."

He is not a high liver and seems able to make ends meet even on his present salary of $7,000 a year. "I'm trying to pass off this blue sport jacket and blue pants I'm wearing as a suit," he said, with a laugh, "but I don't think I'm making it."

Since he does only research for other lawyers in the office, there is little continuity and thus little lawyerly satisfaction. It is learning the basics. It is unglamorous.

"But hockey life is also unglamorous," said Dryden. "Yes, I miss the competition of top-flight hockey because it was interesting and exciting. But I never thought the life was glamorous. Nobody thinks much about the hours spent in airports or in hotel lobbies — waiting."

"And the cheers. You know, I almost never hear the cheers because I'm so engrossed in the game."

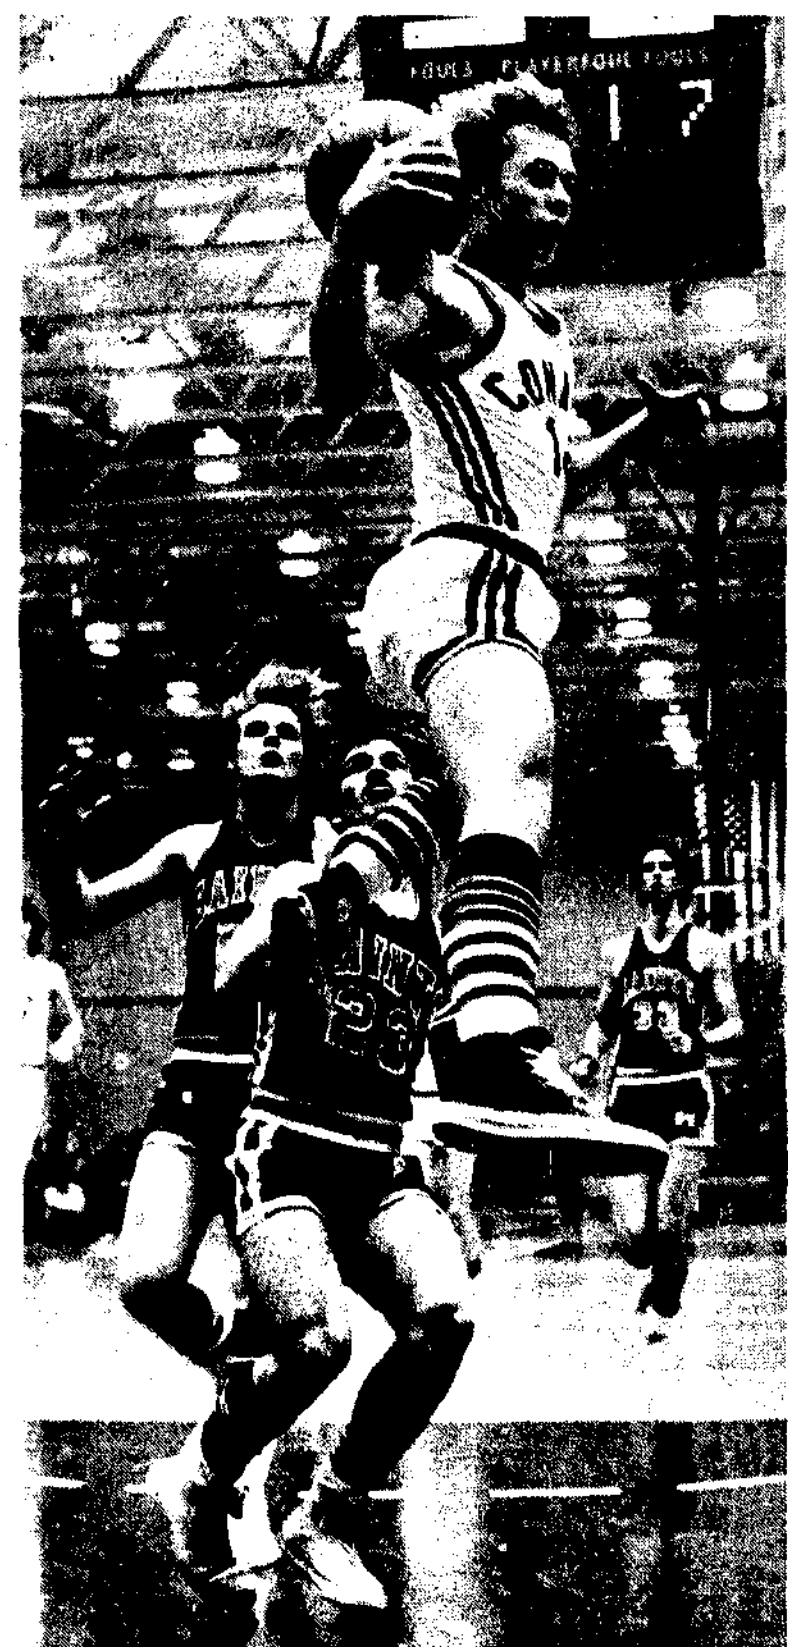

To stay in shape, Dryden plays a little squash, a little basketball and, of course, a little hockey.

"I play defense for two reasons," he said. "First, when you're a goalie, you always want to get out and skate and score a goal. Second, I get more of a feeling of competition playing a foreign position. I don't think it would be much fun to go from goalie in the NHL to goalie in a community league in one year."

Minnesota takes two from Chicago Nordics

The Chicago Nordics gave it all they had again in two games last weekend at Randhurst Twin Ice Arena in Mount Prospect but fell short against the Minnesota Jr. Stars 5-2 and 6-4.

Minnesota is making a bid for second place in the new Midwest Junior Hockey League and now has a record of 35 wins, 12 losses and 2 ties. Chicago is firmly entrenched in the cellar with a 6-42 record.

Bill Milner played a commendable game in goal Saturday night, holding off two and three-men rushes and limiting Minnesota to single scores in the first and second periods. In that span, Chicago was outshot 26 to 8.

In Sunday afternoon's game, the Nordics played well and hard, according to General Manager Oliver Stankovsky.

In the final 20 minutes, Minnesota scored twice and Chicago once and the score remained at 6-4 through the final half of the stanza.

Chicago goals were by Mark Pellegrini, assisted by Bobby Golden and Bob Cademartori; Bernie Klemm, aided by Bruce Garber and Mike Stoltzner; Dick Glass, assisted by Jay Morvay; and Bruce Garber, with the help of Pellegrini and Cademartori.

LAST YEAR AT Montreal, Ken Dryden (shown here deflecting the puck with his face mask) was the most promising young goalie in the N.H.L. But that was before his principles — as well as his salary — came under fire. Now Dryden, who is playing for an amateur team in Toronto, is looking forward to playing next year in the rival World Hockey League.

Milwaukee woman captures net title at River Trails

A 41-year-old mother of 10 almost reached the finals after surviving a triple match point and 89 games in two days, but in the end Milwaukee's Betty Claus dominated things at the third annual Chicago District women's 35-and-over tennis tournament hosted by River Trails Tennis Center, Mount Prospect.

The mother was Nancy Nelson of River Forest, who seems to win only when she drops the first set. She defeated Dolores Bernstein of Highland Park, 0-6, 6-3, 6-2, and Gill Morland of Cary, 6-7, 6-3, 6-2, before bowing to Susan Freeman of Milwaukee in a semifinal, 7-6, 4-6, 6-2.

Mrs. Claus, 47, and ranked No. 14 nationally in the 35-and-over division, won her third straight District title with a hard-earned 6-3, 2-6, 6-1 victory over Mrs. Freeman. 35, her regular singles partner. Mrs. Freeman had never won a set in this series until Sunday. Claus whipped Pat Simpson of Chicago, No. 6 among all metropolitan area women, in a 6-1, 6-1 semifinal.

Mrs. Claus paired with Polly Hoff of Milwaukee to take the doubles for the second time in three years. They beat Arlene Laux of Naperville and Rosemary Brown of Hinsdale in the final, 6-2, 6-3, after the west suburban team had a dethroned last year's titleholders, Jackie Jones of Hinsdale and Vera Wombwell of Chicago, in a 6-2, 4-6, 7-6 cliffhanger semifinal.

Biggest singles upset was Moreland's 4-6, 7-6, 6-2 win over No. 2-seeded Wombwell in the first round. Of the northwest area entrants, Marge Fink of Barrington defeated fellow townswoman Caryann Mucha, 6-1, 6-1, before bowing to Nanda Fischer of Evanston, 6-4, 6-2. Betty Altsch and Mary Ostrem (sister of Mrs. Nelson), both of Mount Prospect, lost to Laux-Brown in first-round doubles, 6-2, 6-2. Joyce Albrecht, Maine South High School teacher from Glenview, and Marilyn Dahlquist of Park Ridge, last year's Paddock tourney doubles champions, lost to Jones-Wombwell, 6-3, 6-2. In tough-draw singles first-rounders, Albrecht bowed to Mary Lou McCaslin of Evanston, 6-2, 6-4, while Dahlquist was eliminated by Mrs. Freeman, 6-1, 6-1.

A visit with MVP Pete Rose

TAMPA, Fla. — In his own little way, Pete Rose is a baseball revolutionist.

Not only by the way he plays — who ever heard of anyone running out a base on balls? — but by some of the things he says.

To wit:

"You know, I'm starting to wonder about that whiskey bottle thrown at me last October in Shea Stadium. I checked out the label and found out that brand is bottled in Cincinnati. Do you suppose it could've been a Reds' fan, and not a Mets' fan, who threw it at me?"

Pete Rose gives you those big baby blues of his when he says that he has all he can do not to laugh.

The Reds' switch-hitting MVP, who'll be putting down $150,000 this year, doesn't joke around at all though when the subject moves around to money and how small an amount of it would he play professional baseball for?

"I'd play for nothing," says Pete Rose, and before you tell him to go butter his popcorn someplace else, at least hear him out.

"I mean it. I'd play baseball for nothing if you could keep those 'windows' out of my mail box."

Windows? "Yeah, you know, those windowed envelopes they send you. House bills, clothing bills, utility bills, and all the other bills. If there were none of those, I'd play for nothing."

Rose doesn't mean to convey the idea he's in poor shape financially.

"Money?" he says. "I don't worry about it that much. I don't ever have to be concerned for my son, Pete. He's four years old and you oughta see him. He was just over here a minute ago. He'll tell you he's Pete Rose, the ballplayer's son.

"Coach Alex Grammas was throwing to him the other day and Pete was hitting. Alex threw a ball behind his head and Pete hollered at him 'get that bleep over!' He's gonna be a star. You know the only reason he will? He likes it."

In that respect, four-year-old Pete Rose II (his father would never call him Junior) is like his old man.

Nobody loves to play baseball more than the older Rose. You can tell that by the way he hits, runs, throws, dives or does anything else on a ballfield. He loves everything connected with it, the excitement, the competition, even the manager-player relationship.

"You pick up the paper sometimes and read where a player says, 'I can't play for this manager,'" says Rose. "Makes me laugh. You don't play for the manager; you play for the team. This is who I play for," he says, pointing to the scarlet Cincinnati lettering across his chest. "I play for 24 other players, the manager and the trainer. Everybody on the team."

"What about yourself?" a newsman inquired. "Don't tell me you never play for yourself."

"Yes, I do," said Rose. "In order to make money you have to play for yourself somewhat. Primarily though, I play for the team."

Nobody could ever dispute that.

Actually, it's hard to argue with Rose on any subject because he's generally right on target pretty much the same way he is up there at the plate where all he did was hit .330 last season to win the National League batting title for the third time.

Rose doesn't feed on controversy, but he will give you a good honest answer to any question.

Here's what he thinks about some of his competitors around the league:

Willie Stargell — "I don't think I would've had a gripe had he been named MVP. He had a fantastic year. It's also unfair to compare him and me. We're two different kinds of ballplayers. He's great for his team; I'm good for mine."

Bud Harrelson — "A tremendous shortstop and a nice guy. He knows I was only trying to break up a double play. You know, I was really impressed with both shortstops in the World Series, him and Campaneris also. They're two vacuum cleaners out there."

Cesar Cedeno — "People are gonna yell at him, but he should let it ride. He was judged not guilty so he has nothing to worry about. People would've yelled at him anyway because he's a good player."

Mike Marshall — "I wish they would've traded him to the American League so I wouldn't have to face him. Jim Brewer is the guy who always gave me the most trouble though. That means this trade is gonna help me. I won't have to face Brewer so much."

Tom Seaver — "I've had good luck against him. On certain days he's the best pitcher in baseball. Put it this way: more times out there he's the best than he isn't."

Pete Rose always wants to get in a word for O. J. Simpson, whom he met for the first time and competed against recently in the Superstars' championship here in Florida. Says Rose:

"I can see why those linemen of his go outta their way to knock guys down for him. He is really a terrific person. No phoniness about him at all."

Billiards champion coming to Des Plaines for show

Jimmy Caras, five time World's Pocket Billiard Champion, will appear Sunday March 17, 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., in a Pocket billiard exhibition at Brunswick Billiard Mart, 613 West Golf Road, Des Plaines.

Brunswick's billiard expert will first demonstrate billiard fundamentals, concluding with an exhibition demonstration of his famous skill and trick shots. Afterwards, he will give personal instruction to those who request it.

Caras, at 17, earned the title of "Boy Wonder of the Pocket Billiard World" by defeating Ralph Greenleaf in an exhibition match in 1927. Greenleaf was then world billiard champion.

In 1938, he won the World's Champion Pocket Billiard title. He did it again in 1938, 1939 and 1949. In 1967 he captured the U. S. Pocket Billiards Championship for his fifth title. He shares in the world's record high run of 127.

Two movies produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer were made on Caras' trick shots. The films played in theaters throughout the world.

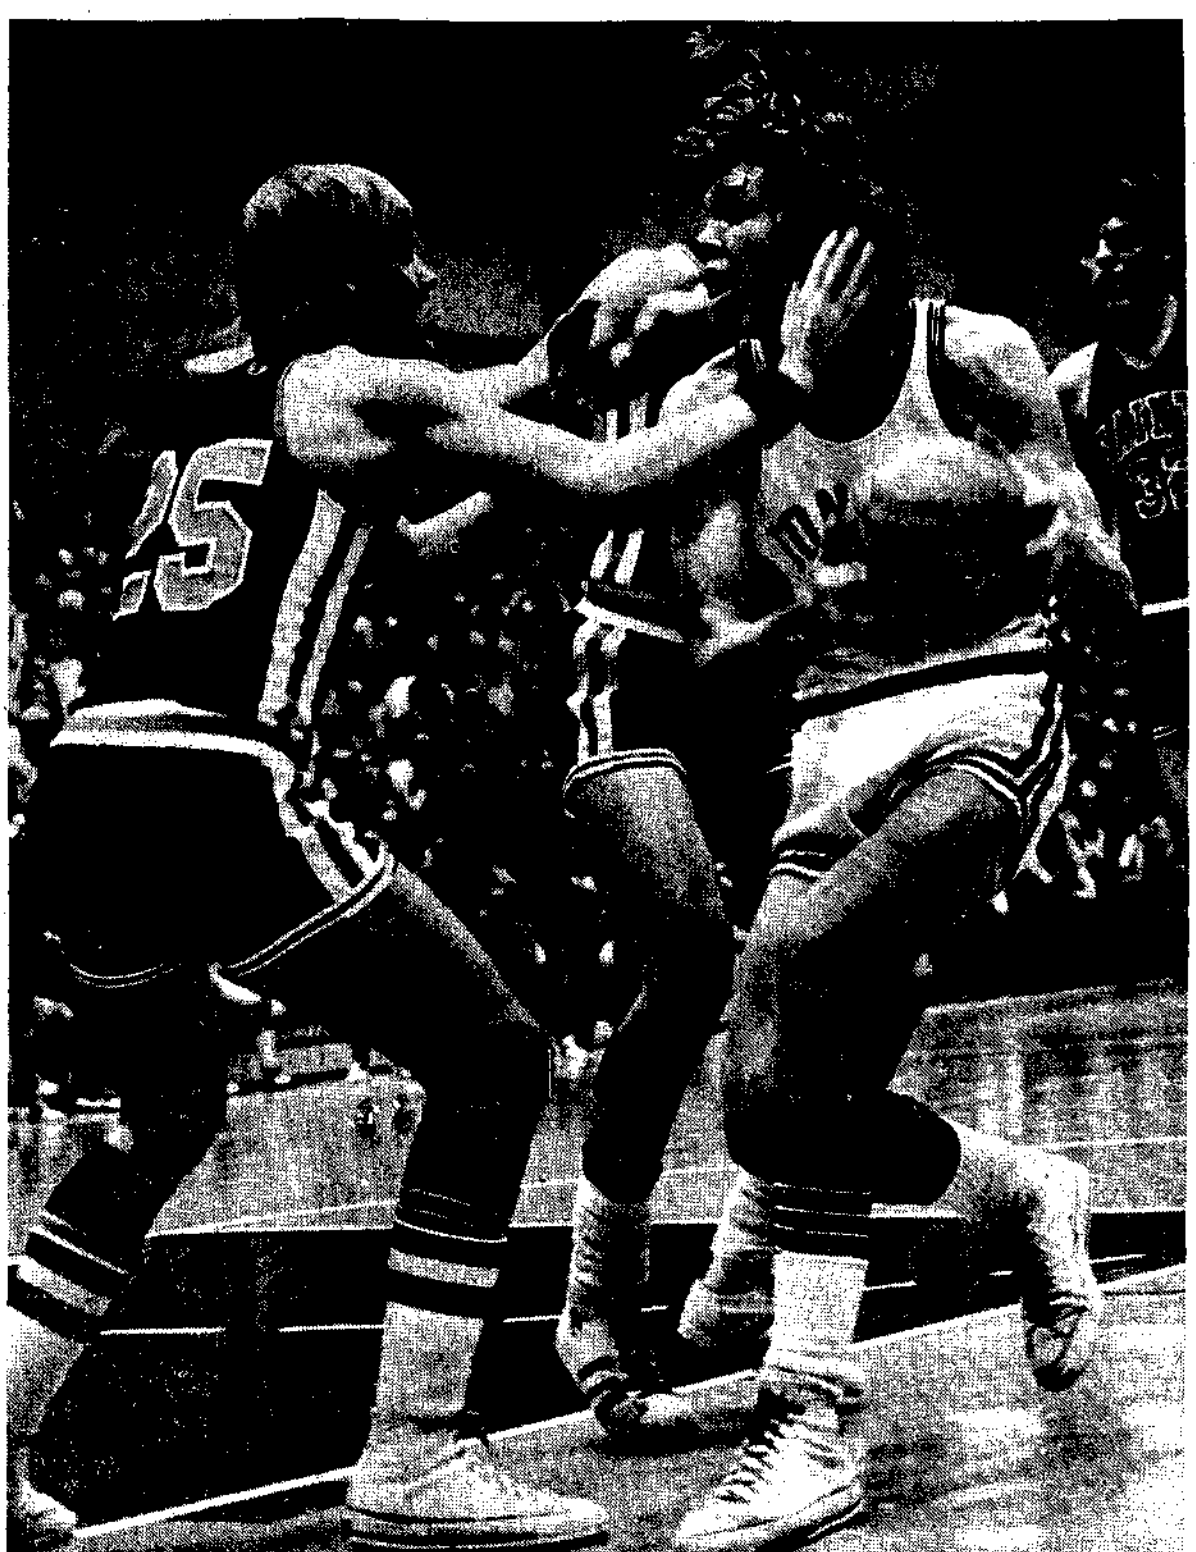

On the nationally televised ABC "Wide World of Sports" presentations, Caras beat Willie Mosconi 125-82 for the 1962 National Invitation Pocket Billiards title. He repeated in 1963 with a 125-26 victory over Mosconi.

CONANT CENTER Steve Irion is besieged by St. Charles players on the Elgin court Tuesday, but the 6-8 senior didn't lose his composure. Irion scored 14 points for the Cougars, including three big baskets in the third quarter, as Conant pulled away in the second half for a 54-45 win. The sectional victory sets the stage for Friday's title match between Conant and the winner of the St. Patrick-Elgin game Wednesday night.

Hoffman trackmen win third straight

When is a varsity squad not a varsity squad?

When it is the Hoffman Estates track team, that's when.

The Hawks of coach Jim Swift are not really a varsity — they are made up of sophomores and freshmen only — and they compete against other sophomores. But the young trackmen are beginning to turn in some good marks.

Last week they reeled off their third consecutive meet victory, this time a triangular win over Glenbard North and Wheaton-Warrenville at Glenbard. The Hawks amassed 90 points, compared to 43 for the hosts and 15 for W-W.

Leading the parade of winners for Hoffman were three Hawks with two first place finishes apiece. Sam Cox, so far undefeated in the mile and the two mile, ran away with the events again, in times of 4:48 and 9:59.6. Dave Paape won the pole vault event, clearing the bar at 12 feet, and he captured the high jump with a leap of 5-6. Teammate Dave Lipko also jumped 5-6.

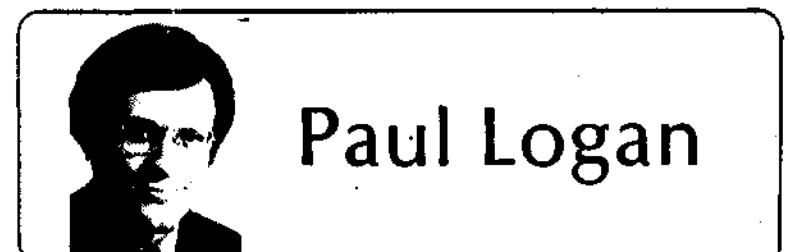

Bill DiFuma notched a pair of wins in the triple jump (36 feet) and the 50-yard dash (10.9). He also grabbed a second spot in the long jump (17-7/8) behind teammate John Borczak's winning leap of the same length, and a third in the pole vault (10 feet).

Other firsts for Hoffman were registered by Lipko in the 60-yard low hurdles (1:08.5), Wayne Jackson in the 60-yard high (1:09.2), Steve Lind in the 600-yard run (1:23.5), and the four-lap relay team of Kevin Stalley, Mark Mueller, Borczak, and Jackson (1:24.3).

Lipko took a pair of seconds and a third, Borczak, Jackson, Paul Bodnar, and Dave Borzel grabbed seconds, and Stalley and Ed Elliott had thirds. Mueller, Tom Ahern, and Chuck Squires captured fourth spots to round out the scoring for Hoffman.

"We're starting to get some really strong competition among ourselves for several events," said coach Swift, "which makes the kids work real hard in order to make the lineup for the meets."

'Free bidder' offers hints

The steady free bidder who likes to bid every time it is his turn has a lot of fun. So do his opponents. They get to double him. Even when he doesn't get doubled the steady free bidder gets into all sorts of trouble.

His partner can never trust him; his partner makes unfortunate opening leads and even when none of that happens, the pointless bid helps declarer plan his play of the dummy.

If West had opened a diamond, South would have had a clinch, but West elected to open a heart and East collected two heart tricks before shifting to a diamond.

South won in dummy and took stock. Surely East had 10 cards in his two red suits. That left him with three in the blacks. If two were spades the queen would drop and South would make his contract. If just one was a spade there was potential trouble. South saw that he had a way to find out.

South cashed dummy's ace of clubs and led a club toward his own king. He wasn't worried about a ruff since if East ruffed he would be ruffing a small club, not the king. East followed and now South knew East didn't have more than one trump.

South led his ace of trumps. When East dropped the 10, South was able to lead his jack, finesse against West's queen and make his game contract.

Ask the IRS

Booklet tells tax law changes

Q. Do you have a booklet that describes tax law changes for 1973 Federal income tax returns?

A. Yes. IRS Publication 553, "Highlights of 1973 Changes in the Tax Law," is available free from your local IRS office. Taxpayers seeking more details may purchase IRS Publication 17, "Your Federal Income Tax," from Internal Revenue offices and many post offices for $1. Mail orders may be made to the Public Documents Distribution Center, Pueblo Industrial Park, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. The price for mail orders is $1.25.

Q. I just purchased a three-year $5,000 certificate of deposit from a bank for $4,000. How do I report the discount?

A. The discount on a certificate of deposit, issued after May 27, 1969, must be reported ratably as ordinary income. You must include in income the ratable monthly portion of this original issue discount multiplied by the number of complete and fractional months that you held the certificate during your tax year.

The bank that issued the certificate must provide you with a Form 1099 OID stating the amount of original issue discount includible in income for the year. For a more detailed treatment of how to compute original issue discount, see IRS Publication 550, "Tax Information on Investment Income and Expenses." It's available free from your nearest IRS office.

Late enrollment open for medic insurance plan

Anyone who passed up medical insurance (Part B of Medicare) in the past can sign up for it now, according to Norman D. Jerome, Social Security manager of the Arlington Heights Social Security office.

Those eligible to enroll have until March 31 to do so, he said. Protection won't start until July 1 and, due to late enrollment, the person will pay a higher premium.

Medical insurance helps pay for doctor's services, outpatient hospital services and medical and other health services not covered by the hospital insurance program (Part A of Medicare).

For more information on enrollment call 239-7000, in Chicago or 255-7512 in the Northwest suburbs.

Q. My husband, who had been severely disabled for the last five years, died last month. He didn't know about Social Security disability benefits, and he had never applied for them. Is there any possible way to apply now for benefits that he might have been entitled to?

Social Security and you

A. Yes, you can fill out an application to see if some benefits might be payable. You should call or visit any Social Security office as soon as possible since the application must be made within three months after the month of your husband's death.

Q. I got a notice from Social Security showing that I need two more quarters of coverage to qualify for retirement payments. May I pay the Social Security contributions for these two quarters without working so I can qualify?

A. No. You can earn quarters of coverage only by working at a job covered by Social Security or by being self-employed. A "quarter of coverage" is an calendar quarter in which you are paid $50 or more in wages in covered employment. Net income of $400 or more in a year from covered self-employment will give you four quarters of coverage.

The search for mental health

Campaign seeks to cut Indian suicides

(This column is presented by Forest Hospital in Des Plaines, a fully accredited 150-bed psychiatric hospital widely known for its intensive programs in psychiatric treatment, research, education and community service.)

A misleading and distorted stereotype of American Indians started several years ago with reports in the news media about exceedingly high suicide rates among these people, according to Dr. James H. Shore.

Shore, chief of the mental health branch, Portland Area Indian Health Service, said it was reported that the suicide rate was 80 to 100 per 100,000 population, when actually the rate for all tribes is closer to 23 per 100,000. (The rate for non-Indians in America is 10 per 100,000.) In fact, he said, among the largest tribe, the Navajos, with a population of well over 100,000, the suicide rate is only eight per 100,000.

"It is true," Shore said, "that the rate may be as high as reported among some small tribes, but as a result of the national publicity, the rates were generalized to apply to all American Indians."

Shore said there are more than 300 Indian tribes varying in size, geographic location and cultural heritage. "There are many different patterns of physical and emotional illness that are effected by one's tribal heritage," said Shore. "The smaller communities have a higher risk for self-destructive behavior, I would guess, because they're mainly located in the Great Basin area and these used to be basically the hunting and fighting tribes. Their adjustment to reservation living, then, was much more difficult than for the village and agricultural tribes, because their culture was affected much more severely, there was greater trauma."

SHORE BELIEVES this cultural adjustment is the main cause of self-destructive tendencies. "The Indian is taught his tribal heritage in his youth. This conflicts with the cultural heritage of the outside world. This, along with his poverty and the discrimination he experiences, causes confusion and a loss of self-esteem and depression results."

"The school dropout rate, another severe problem among American Indians, on some reservations is as high as 80-90 per cent," said Shore. "This problem has been directly traced to loss of self-esteem and I feel this loss certainly is related to the suicide rate as well."

"One unique aspect of suicidal behavior among the tribes is that it tends to peak between the ages of 20 and 40, whereas with other races in the United States, the rate increases with age. It does not go up, then come down at age 40. In all races, though, the suicidal are predominantly men," said Shore.

WHILE SHORE is not sure of the exact suicide rate among Indian children, he said, "I can clearly state that the publicity given to a high rate merely perpetuated another stereotype. It, too, is misleading and distorted. Since coming to the Portland area (which includes the states of Washington, Oregon and Idaho) in 1969, I have not encountered one child suicide and only two or three adolescent suicides."

"Alcoholism, while a separate condition, and the number one Indian health problem, has a high correlation with self-destructive behavior. In fact, of those who attempt or complete suicide, 50 per cent have a relation with alcohol abuse," said Shore.

Braille currency for blind to 'read' urged in Congress

If Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind., is successful with his proposed legislation S. 2733, it will be one giant step toward providing 1.5 million blind citizens with a means of using paper currency for everyday transactions.

Hartke and his cosponsor, Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., introduced the legislation last November. It calls for embossing of paper currency with numerals that can be "read" by the blind. U.S. Rep. John R. Rarick, D-La., introduced a similar proposal in the House.

Under the proposal, the numbers in the corners of currency

by Mort Reed

would also contain a Braille number raised for easy identification.

Hartke's remarks, taken from the Congressional Record read in part: "The number '1' (illustrated above) on a $1 bill, for instance, would contain three vertical rows of dots within its borders; the number '5' would be over printed with a 'V'; the number '1' with an 'X'; the number 20 with two horizontal bars through its center; the number '50' with an 'L' and the number '100' with a 'C.' Each of these embossed numbers would be easily identified by a blind person. An illustration of proposal can be found in the Aug. edition of Coin World, 1971."

Canadian issues March 22 to honor summer funtime

The Canada Post Office will issue four 8-cent Olympic commemorative stamps March 22, the second issue of the special Olympic series reflecting Canadian enjoyment of summer activities.

A family cycling and adults jogging were photographed by Crombie McNeil for Information Canada and form the basis of the stamp designs prepared by Hunter, Straker Templeton, Ltd. of Toronto. Sixty million stamps are being issued in one color steel engraving by Canadian Bank Note Co.

This new issue of Olympic stamps utilizes a new engraving technique to produce a latent or hidden image of the Olympic symbol in the stamp. When the stamp is viewed normally, one of the four recreational activities is seen but when observed at an oblique angle the Montreal Olympic symbol appears.

The entire issue will be Ottawa tagged. Marginal inscriptions, including the designer's name, appear on the four corners of each pane of 50 stamps.

Collector's desiring first-day cancellations should send their requests to FDC/Olympic Stamps, Philatelic Service, Canada Post Office, Ottawa, Ont., Canada K1A 0B5 enclosing the proper remittance which is the cost of the stamps to be affixed plus a 15-cent service fee for each cover bearing less than 50 cents in postage. Your remittance must be in Canadian funds. Specify lightly in pencil on the upper right hand corner of your cover which stamps you wish affixed, i.e. cycling, jogging, hiking or swimming or all four.

THE CANADA POST Office reports total gross sales of the first Olympic stamps, issued in September, 1973, was $447,111.68 as of Dec. 31. Ontario led the country with $87,416.42 worth of sales followed closely by the Olympic host prov-

TO D.A. OF ARLINGTON HEIGHTS: In sending for foreign postal items, I find the easiest way is to go to the bank and request a Chase Manhattan Bank draft for the amount of foreign currency you need. For example, a request for three pounds sterling would find the bank teller checking the rate of exchange for the equivalent in U.S. currency. The draft is then drawn up in the equivalent U.S. sum you pay, plus a small service charge, and send with your foreign order. When the person you send the draft to turns it in for payment, the process is

Dack Rambo—he's at home on his horse

HOLLYWOOD — If Dack Rambo looks at home aboard a horse in the "Dirty Sally" series, it's because the youthful actor is a part-time rancher who rides herd on his own cattle.

Dack plays Cyrus Pike, traveling the west with the crane in the new CBS series. He does his personal traveling by airplane from Los Angeles to Deleano, Calif., where his family owns several hundred acres of prime farm land in the San Joaquin Valley.

One of identical twins, Dack was crushed by the death of his brother, Orman, in an automobile crash five years ago. He has finally come to grips with the tragedy, but it hasn't been easy.

They had worked together as actors, although Dack was the more successful. He starred in "The Guns of Will Sonnett" in 1968.

ALTHOUGH HIS permanent home is in Deleano, Dack has kept an apartment in Beverly Hills for four years. It's sparsely furnished and not very fancy. He has a housekeeper who comes in every day to clean and cook for him.

Once in a while a girlfriend stops by in the evening to prepare a special cozy dinner. But not often.

"I never want to saddle myself down with too many possessions," says Rambo, "until I buy a mansion someplace. I don't like to be tied down."

That goes for marriage, too. Rambo is single and recently broke up with a long-time girlfriend when her conversation drifted around to matrimony.

Dack starts out each morning at 4:30 stopping for a massage on the way to

The Hollywood scene

by Vernon Scott

work. He arrives at CBS studio center in the San Fernando Valley about 7 a.m. and begins shooting scenes almost at once.

BECAUSE THE show started in mid-season, Dack has spent most of his weekends flying to various parts of the country to promote the series.

But when he has a few days off, he hops up to the family ranch-farm. When he's not working in films he lives on the property, punching cows, driving tractors and doing other ranch work.

In addition to cattle the Rambos raise wheat, cotton, alfalfa, barley and potatoes. He mends fences, helps with the irrigating and does all the other chores.

"I'm not a Hollywood actor," Dack says. "I am a farmer and rancher who works in television and movies for pay."

Dack doesn't own a suit and only a couple of neckties. He's most comfortable in denim work clothes and heavy shoes.

He lives two separate and distinct lives. His friends in Hollywood do not visit him on the farm. The people he grew up with in the San Joaquin Valley don't stop by to say hello when he's working in the city.

ONE OF HIS CLOSEST friends in Hollywood is Jeanette Nolan, who plays the title role in "Dirty Sally."

Dack has no pets at his Beverly Hills digs because he spends so little time there he is afraid they wouldn't receive the proper care and attention. The farm, however, has dogs and cats running all over the place.

"I love having the best of two lives," Rambo said. "I manage to keep my old values by staying close to the soil. In both places I'm out of bed before dawn and when I go to bed at night I know I've put in a good day's work. I wouldn't want it any other way."

Rich Port study shows prices up

Buyers of existing Chicago suburban homes in 1973 paid an average of 10 per cent more for their property than their counterparts did in 1972.

The report is from Rich Port, Realtor, a Chicago suburban real estate firm with 19 offices serving the west, northwest, north and north shore suburbs.

Dick Caruso, president of Rich Port, Realtor, stated that a study of the firm's residential offices indicated that the average purchase price of an existing home in 1973 was $48,400 as compared to $44,000 in 1972. More than 6,000 residential transactions were involved in the two year study which ended December 31, 1973.

Caruso also noted that there was an average variation in price in communities (from $41,700 to $65,500). These variations from one year to the next and between communities, is influenced by many things: the economy, transportation, the community, construction quality, lot and home sizes. Today with the critical shortage of gasoline, transportation is a big factor. It is obvious that homes in the communities and nearby areas with public transportation and commuter train service to the Chicago loop are going to be in great demand.

Backlog was 207 homes representing $7,800,000 in value on Nov. 30, compared with 268 homes representing $8,900,000 on Feb. 28.

"While profits and sales were not what we had hoped, we were pleased with the results in the face of a severe national housing downturn," stated Jack Hoffman, chairman and president of the 25-year-old development company.

"Further," he said, "we took many significant forward steps in pursuit of our long-term growth objectives."

Among the advances he cited are:

Achievement of final approval and zoning for the company's first East Coast community, a 1,000-unit planned residential development to be built on a 365-acre parcel in Newtown Township, Bucks County, Pa. Groundbreaking is expected this spring on the site seven miles northeast of Philadelphia.

Strengthening the activities of two wholly-owned subsidiaries, Tri-County Building Supply Company and Du-Co Engineering. Tri-County supplies builders with a variety of millwork and other building components. Du-Co provides total land development services to builders and municipalities including the engineering and construction of sewer and water plants, roads and land grading.

Expansion of the activities of Hoffman Rosner's real estate division. This division has been contributing to profit through the sale of land, basically commercial parcels, in the company's communities, to others.

Audio-Visual moves to Elk Grove site

Ken Tyree of Advance Audio-Visual announced a company move into their new building at 1830 Lewis Ave., in Elk Grove Village.

Advance Audio-Visual, which rents audio-visual and video equipment for meetings, conventions and trade shows, has enjoyed growth in the past couple of years and offers a nationwide service to corporations and trade associations.

NIREB offers real estate course

The National Institute of Real Estate Brokers presents a six-day Course B entitled, "Fundamentals of Real Estate Development." Co-sponsored by the Real Estate Board of Kansas City, the course will be held at the Crown Center Hotel in Kansas City, Mo., March 25-30.

Course B presents the techniques used by Realtor-developers in the process of land development for commercial purposes. Using the case study method of presentation, the course acquaints the student with some of the factors which create value in real estate transactions. Course B is open to those who have successfully completed Course A — "Fundamentals of Real Estate Investment and Taxation," or the equivalent.

"Fundamentals of Real Estate Development" is one of many educational opportunities offered by the National Institute of Real Estate Brokers. With 30,000 members NIREB is the largest professional organization affiliated with the National Association of Realtors and acts as its educational arm for Realtors and Realtor-associates. In addition to courses, NIREB sponsors an on-going program of periodicals, texts, sales aids and audio-visual programs for Realtor-members and the public interested in real estate brokerage.

Registration for "Fundamentals of Real Estate Development" may be made through the NIREB Registration Coordinator, 155 E. Superior St., Chicago, Illinois 60611 or further information may be obtained from Ralph Scott, Real Estate Board of Kansas City, 1009 W. Baltimore, Kansas City, Missouri 64105.

Arlington Realty posts record sales in 1973

Arlington Realty announces record sales for 1973. At a recent awards and recognition breakfast sales of $19.8 million were announced, which represents an increase of 11 per cent over the previous year.

Despite a slow fourth quarter the firm still managed to break several sales records both for company and individual.

"Going into the fourth quarter of the year, our sales were 30 per cent ahead of 1972," according to Herb Carl, general sales manager for the firm. "In spite of a severe money crunch and slowdown in homes sales we will be able to post our best year in history."

The average sales price for a home jumped to $47,010, a sharp increase over the previous year's average of $42,533.

Arlington Realty honored 12 sales associates for outstanding service to home buyers and sellers. Five were presented with pewter bowls for million dollar sales and Lorraine Larsen, Evelyn Hines and Ed Joyce were given special honors for each recording sales in excess of $2 million for the year. It was the eighth year in a row for Mrs. Hines, seventh in a row for Mrs. Larsen and third in a row for Joyce. All now are honorary lifetime members of the million dollar sales club.

Terry Leighty, Palatine office manager, was welcomed to the million dollar club for his first year.

Also honored for setting a new individual record for residential sales was Lorraine Larsen with a volume of $2,680,000. Evelyn Hines topped all sales people in exclusive listings and listings sold, also setting a new record.

The Palatine office won the prize for single office volume with sales of $7.9 million.

The annual Arlington Realty winners circle awards were presented to Lil Marshall, Dorothy Jacobs, Betty Kunzweiler, Bea Ake, Nylene Swaby, Corinne Wegner and Iris Cosgrove. Each received a pewter bell in recognition of sales achievement.

ARLINGTON REALTY two million dollar sales associates Ed Joyce, Lorraine Larsen and Evelyn Hines hold the growth chart that illustrates record sales for the year and a 118 per cent increase over the past three years.

More young couples buying homes in city

Cities now have a great opportunity to attract energy-crunching young marrieds seeking to buy homes close to their places of employment.

Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Investors Mortgage Insurance Company, says many young couples are buying older, larger houses, then renovating them.

Goss notes that the energy crunch accentuates two major advantages of older homes besides the usual notes of charm and nostalgia. One is the proximity to the job and the other is the already existing allocation of home heating fuel.

Goss believes there is a definitive trend showing young marrieds invading the urban housing market.

"Unfortunately, only a few cities — up to now at least — such as Boston and Pittsburgh have done something meaningful to encourage this return," Goss declares.

He states that one of the best inducements is relief from new taxes on improved buildings. Boston provides a five-year tax relief on remodeled houses and Pittsburgh, a three-year tax relief on improvements up to $10,000.

Goss emphasizes that even though new housing starts are down, the demand for home ownership remains strong.

"Whatever new housing construction we see in 1974 — the bulk of it will be in townhouses, duplexes and quadplexes as land and material costs continue to rise.

"Most of those actively pursuing home ownership are not waiting for any price drop," Goss points out.

He projects the total mortgage flow climbing to $81.4 billion in 1974 — an increase of more than 13 per cent above last year's estimated $72 billion.

"And existing facilities will account for at least 70 per cent of housing sales nationwide during the first six months of this year," Goss concludes.

Sales staff attends G.R.I. institute

Fifteen Quinlan and Tyson sales managers and sales representatives attended G.R.I. courses sponsored by the Illinois Association of Realtors.

The courses were conducted at Peoria. The Association presents the G.R.I. designation to those persons who successfully complete three courses of study.

Attending were these sales representatives from area offices: Frank Johnson, Arlington Heights-Mt. Prospect, Dick Ferris and Ed Perry, Palatine and Nancy Korzeniewski, Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates.

Annen & Busse official to attend convention

Donald G. Heidorn, vice-president and general sales manager for Annen & Busse, Inc. Realtors, will attend the ninth annual convention of the Homes for Living Network to be held March 20-24 at the Sheraton-Harbor Island Hotel, San Diego, Calif. More than 1200 Realtors from all 50 states and Puerto Rico are expected to attend.

The Homes for Living Network with headquarters in St. Louis, is a national marketing network of over 900 cooperating realtor offices providing numerous services and programs to the American home buying and selling public. The more than 8,000 Homes for Living brokers and sales associates serving over 6,000 communities accounted for more than $3 billion in residential sales in 1973. Annen & Busse Realtors is the exclusive Homes for Living member representative for the MAP Multiple Listing Service.

The convention will highlight principal addresses by sports great Jesse Owens and the author, lecturer and public relations counseling executive Alfred Fleischman.

More than 40 hours of sessions and workshops during the convention will dwell on the major areas affecting real estate and the American public. One session will concentrate on the energy crisis and how it has effected changes and trends in real estate in serving the relocation needs of American families and businesses. Another will center on the current high mortgage rates and tight money market.

Most of the sessions will be conducted by Homes for Living Network members, many of whom hold positions within the National Association of Realtors and the National Institute of Real Estate Brokers.

Concluding the convention will be the fourth annual awards banquet at which time the Homes for Living Network "Realtor of the Year" Award will be presented.

Among the programs and services Homes for Living member firms provide are the publication monthly of Homes for Living Magazine, which has photos, prices and descriptions of homes offered by each member in respective market areas; industry relations program which works directly with corporate transferees; and the monthly distribution between members of available commercial and investment property listings.

Ground breaking ceremonies held at Banner Service

Ground breaking ceremonies for the 5,000 additional footage to Banner Service Corp. in Des Plaines were held March 4.

Heading the ceremony was Edward J. Bock, executive vice president of Banner and secretary of the Des Plaines Chamber of Commerce.

The new addition will include 15,000 sq. ft. for centerless grinding and related processes and 5,000 sq. ft. for office operations. The roof on the addition rises 35 ft. high to allow for more extensive inventories of wire, rod and bar.

According to R. J. Sneed, president of Banner, the 80 per cent increase in sales over the past two years forced the company into expansion. Banner specializes in metals for screw machine operations.

Architects Cooley and Borre, Inc. of Park Ridge are designing the building with Campbell-Lowrie-Lautermilch Corp. acting as general contractors. The project is financed by Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

Free guide offers tips on protecting home, self

Preventative measures to protect your home from burglary and fire and to protect yourself from home accidents are outlined in a free "Guide to Home and Personal Security" prepared for persons in the 50-plus age group by Action for Independent Maturity.

Noting the increasing rate of home burglaries, particularly in the suburbs, the Guide points out that burglars tend to look for "easy pickings." By providing basic information on locks, lights, burglar alarms and automatic timers, the Guide can help "make your home a more difficult and unattractive target for thieves."

Also highly recommended is an identification program now established in a number of U.S. cities in which a citizen engraves his valuable objects with an identification number that is known to the police.

The greatest threat to your life and well-being in the home is the common home accident, according to the Guide, particularly accidents caused by the careless handling and misuse of electrical appliances. A checklist designed to help you check safety standards around the home is included.

In a section on fire prevention, the Guide points out that most home fires can be prevented if families are aware of "principal risk" areas in the house and of how to safeguard them.

Also included is a section which explains the different types of homeowners insurance and suggests how much coverage your home should have.

The Guide to Home and Personal Safety is one of a series of booklets published by AIM to help pre-retirees plan for successful living in their mature years. A division of the six-million-member American Association of Retired Persons, AIM also provides budget-stretching insurance, pharmacy and travel services and publishes Dynamic Maturity magazine bi-monthly.

For a free copy of the guide, please write: Home and Personal Security Guide, AIM, 1090 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

Lincoln Savings reports 150% growth

Lincoln Federal Savings and Loan Association of Berwyn has reported growths of more than 150 per cent during the past decade in four separate categories.

Assets showed an increase from $53 million to $142 million, or 164 per cent from 1963 through 1973.

In that same period, President Frank J. Kinst of the 58-year-old institution disclosed that savings accounts rose from $45 million to $120 million, and mortgages from $48 million to $125 million. These accounted for gains of 165 and 159 per cent respectively. Reserves increased in the 1963-1973 decade from $2,519,000 to $8,910,000.

Lincoln Federal was founded in 1916 with assets of $50,000. At the end of World War II they had climbed to $443,000. In 1950, after Kinst had assumed the presidency, they stood at $1 million.

The $100 million mark was reached three years ago, early in 1971. As asset growth of more than 40 per cent has taken place since then.

First contract is signed

Chicago Contract Bridge Association officials signed the first contract for the new convention hall of the Holiday Inn — O'Hare/Kennedy complex now under construction near O'Hare Airport.

The pillarless convention hall will adjoin the 520-room lodging tower, comprising the largest Holiday Inn ever built in terms of interior space, 400,000 square feet.

More than 2,000 top bridge players from Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan will compete in the tri-unit regional bridge tournament, Oct. 30-Nov. 2, 1975, with 1,200 persons playing bridge simultaneously.

Community offers housing choice

A Chicago-based land development firm believes that mobile and conventional homes can exist within the same community. To prove the theory, the Branigan Organization is developing Whispering Pines, an 1,150-acre community in Georgetown, Fla.

Nearly one-third of the 800 homesites have been sold, 80 per cent of which to residents of Illinois and Wisconsin.

More than 100 acres of the community have been allocated to greenbelt, areas set aside for common use by all residents, and for three man-made lakes. The Whispering Pines area, which once served the pulp industry, is heavily wooded with mature pines which shelter individual homesites.

While utility and operating costs run about the same for both housing styles, mobile homes are priced lower. The price range of a double unit is $8,000 to $20,000 with the average around $15,000.

The mobile home market continues to grow. Total shipments of units in 1973 were 530,000 according to the Mobile Home Manufacturers Association. An eight per cent increase is predicted for this year.

One-acre homesites at Whispering Pines, located about 70 miles north of Orlando, are priced from about $5,800 to about $8,400.

Report Quinlan & Tyson sales

Quinlan and Tyson's three northwest area offices got off to a fast start in 1974 with near record sales in January.

Total sales in the three offices reached $3.5 million, just under the all-time monthly high of $3.6 million set one year earlier.

Leading the way was the Arlington Heights-Mt. Prospect area office with sales of $1,740,000, the second highest total in the history of the office. The previous high was $1,853,000 in April of 1973.

The office averaged $116,000 in sales per sales representative, according to Marvin W. Kamps, office sales manager and northwest regional manager for Q&T.

Helping boost the northwest total was an outstanding effort by the Palatine area office with sales of $1,232,000.

1974 offers little optimism for construction industry

A top savings and loan official cautioned today that while home construction activity should pick up in the second half of 1974, there is no assurance the recovery will be particularly strong.

George B. Preston, president of the United States League of Savings Associations, expressed the view that the comeback in home construction should not be counted upon to provide any major stimulus to the economy during the balance of 1974.

Addressing the Southeastern Conference of the U. S. League, Preston said that while savings flows to savings and loan associations have improved in recent months, the improvement has not been uniform across the country. "There are a good many areas where savings flows are flat or just mildly favorable," he said.

The League official said that the current recession in housing was triggered by last summer's "credit crunch" and that the recovery from the present slump is being impeded by the energy crisis and the shortage of gasoline.

"Home builders report that the shortage of gasoline has reduced the flow of customer traffic to their developments, and these builders — along with the lenders who are financing them — certainly share the typical American's interest in seeing some early relief in the gasoline shortage," said Preston.

"Trying to predict the time lag between greater savings flows and more home construction is, at best, an imprecise science," said Preston. "In the periods of recovery from the credit crunches of 1966 and 1969-70, there was a lag of about six months between the pick-up in savings and the start of the recovery in home building and buying."

"Whether the time lag is longer this time than the two other 'post-crunch' periods remains to be seen."

"One thing we do know is that mortgage loan commitments outstanding are at a fairly low point, having dropped from $5.9 billion to 7.3 billion at the end of the summer. At the same time advances to the savings and loan associations from the Federal Home Loan Bank System jumped from 10.1 billion last May to almost 15 billion in December as savings and loan associations borrowed heavily to meet commitments made early last year."

"Obviously, the improved savings anticipated in the months ahead will be regarded by some associations as an opportunity to reduce these advance totals to a more workable level."

At the same time, according to Preston, home builders hold a considerable inventory of new and unsold houses. He noted that U. S. Department of Commerce figures for year-end 1973 revealed a total of 458,000 unsold houses, representing about 16.9 months sales volume.

This was considerably higher than the inventory reported in December, 1972, when the unsold new houses numbered 416,000, or 8.9 months sales volume. "This larger-than-usual inventory will serve to curb new home building in some areas," said Preston.

Market Masters signs new lease

Market Masters Inc., creators, designers and manufacturers of in-store displays and trade show exhibits are moving to a new location at 2301 Eastern Avenue, Elk Grove Village.

While the move is only four blocks down the street from the present location, the new location has more space with 30,000 square feet to be allocated to manufacturing, warehouse and general office. The lease is for five years.

McLennan Company, Realtors in Park Ridge, are agents for the building and Thomas Guignon, Commercial Sales Division of McLennan Company, negotiated the lease.

Offices set new record

The northwest suburban offices of Quinlan and Tyson, Inc., Realtors, have set an all-time sales mark in 1973.

The three area offices — Arlington Heights — Mount Prospect, Palatine and Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates — achieved excellent sales volume of $34 million despite adverse money conditions at the end of the year.

This exceeds the previous sales record established in 1972 by 11 percent, according to Marvin W. Kamps, vice president and regional sales manager. Kamps attributed the excellent performance of his veteran sales staff to experience, education and knowledge.

The Arlington Heights office achieved the highest sales volume with almost $13 million in residential sales. The Palatine office increased its sales volume by 38 percent over 1972 while the Schaumburg office showed a sales increase of 9 percent.

The sales figures include exclusive Quinlan and Tyson transactions and sales in co-operation with other MAP Multiple Listing Brokers.

Karme L. Klotz named manager

Karme L. Klotz of Hoffman Estates has been promoted to sales manager at Winston Woods, a single family devel-

Constant circulation brings most comfort

Do you notice that you always feel warmer on cool days if you keep moving? That's because you are stimulating the circulation system, bringing more energy to the body cells.

The same theory has been put into practice in hydronic (hot water) heating systems, reports the National Better Heating-Cooling Council. In hydronic systems, water is heated in a boiler and circulated by a small pump to baseboard heating panels located on the outside walls of the house. In most systems, when the thermostat calls for heat, the pump reacts.

Now, however, most new systems use 'constant circulation,' where the water is pumped continually through the system. When the thermostat calls for heat in this system, the burner responds by heating the water. From research conducted at the University of Illinois, it was found that temperature variations during 'constant circulation' were minimal, that comfort was more uniform.

In these days when we are asked to set our 'stats lower,' we shall feel 'warmer' with constant circulation. And, best of all, says the Council, it doesn't use more fuel, which is a consolation in itself.

Homeowners can benefit from income tax deductions

There are many income tax deductions which the average homeowner overlooks when preparing his tax return, according to Ken Treat, regional director of H & R Block, the nation's largest income tax preparation firm.

"Most people have neither the time nor the resources to be informed of all the tax law changes. As a result, most people either pay more tax than is required by not claiming all of the deductions which they are legally entitled to or risk a penalty for claiming deductions which are not allowable," said Mr. Treat.

Tax deductions, in terms of homeownership, mean that the interest on your mortgage is deductible — a big item — and certain taxes are too, including real estate, school and personal property.

Another benefit in home ownership lies in the fact that at the time you sell it and realize a profit, all capital improvements you have made to the property can be used to reduce your capital gains tax.

As a landlord renting part of the house, various expenses connected with the property are deductible: water, heating, utility bills, janitorial services, property insurance, collection fees and the like. These are deductible even though the property happens to be vacant.

When a person sells his personal residence, one prevalent problem is that he does not compute the correct cost or basis for the house. Usually, he uses the original cost and does not include such items as major improvements and special assessments, which greatly increase his original basis. In order for him to include these, he must maintain accurate records.

Real estate commissions and attorney fees are deductible when a person sells his home, in the sense that they are subtracted from the gross sale price and, thereby, reduce the amount of taxable gain. The gain or profit from such a sale must be declared as income unless the seller purchases another house at a higher cost than the adjusted sale price within one year, or builds one within 18 months. If the second house is sold, the profit from the first one, which was not taxed, must be subtracted from the cost of the second. A loss incurred in the sale of a personal residence is not deductible; however, it must be shown on the tax return.

Home office expense can be deducted if you use a portion of your home for your business. You must first determine what portion of your home is used for business. If you use one room for an office, and have a six room house, you can deduct one-sixth of the expenses. You can allocate either on a basis of rooms or square feet.

If a person is 65 years of age or older, and meets certain requirements, any realized gain is excluded from gross income if the adjusted sales price is $20,000 or less. If the adjusted sales price is more than $20,000, the portion of the gain which is excluded is determined by multiplying the gain by the ratio of $20,000 to the adjusted sales price.

Expert offers guidelines for apartment hunters

If a new job, a new mate or a new budget is going to make an apartment hunter out of you this spring, you may be puzzling over when to look, what to look for and how much you should figure on paying.

One Chicago expert believes that you might be better off staying where you are. If possible, because rents are going up everywhere; more people near good transportation will probably keep their apartments because of the energy situation; the cost of moving could wash out the advantages of a cheaper apartment, and the gasoline shortage is going to make it difficult to get out and scout around, anyway.

But if you have no choice, here are some guidelines from William D. Sally, vice president and general manager of the property management division of Baird & Warner, Inc., a manager of rental apartments, condominiums and cooperatives in the Chicago area:

How much rent can you afford? You may find it cheaper to stay put since rents are rising everywhere. Current management thinking is that you should plan on spending up to but no more than 33 per cent of your monthly take home pay on rent. Changing lifestyles have torpedoed the old axiom about figuring one week's take home pay for shelter, explained Sally.

Whose income do you include? The income of a working wife is no longer ignored, as it once was. But her age and the possibility that having children may interrupt a double income will influence how much of the woman's income will be counted.

In the case of a young couple the present trend is to count about 50 per cent of the wife's income in calculating the ability to pay," said Sally.

What about people who share apartments, other than married couples? Sally said the prevailing practice is to consider the income of each individual who shares the rent. "Couples living together and roommates may break up, and in that event the remaining tenant must be capable of supporting the full rent single-handed," since he may become legally obligated to do so said the Baird & Warner official.

Where do you want to live? Preferences for in-city or suburban locations may have to be tempered by the availability of transportation other than private auto.

"This applies not only to day-to-day activity, but to the process of even hunting for living quarters," said Sally, noting that it may get increasingly difficult to simply cruise around various neighborhoods looking for vacancy signs.

But assuming that the crisis eases up a bit or that you can get around on foot or bicycle, it's important to look for a neighborhood that is compatible to your interests and pocketbook.

If you haven't determined on a city vs. suburban location, consider such elements as the close-in excitement of the city vs. the relative openness and quiet of the suburbs. Figure on commuting costs of the suburbs vs. street parking problems in the city. There's no one best location for everyone — it's up to you to fit the location to your individual needs.

How does the apartment size up? Bring along a tape measure when you inspect apartments and jot down critical dimensions on a note pad. If you have a grand piano or a 200-inch-long sofa, will it fit? Can you even get into the building?

Some of the new buildings provide you with scale floor plans and silhouette furniture cutouts so you can see how your furniture will fit before you move in. You can make your own plan using graph paper, if you like.

Rent should be on basis of square foot cost per month if you want to compare prices of several buildings.

Also check the layout of the apartment. Ideally, the apartment should have an entry foyer with a guest closet. When you enter, check to see that your view isn't into a bedroom or bathroom, which can be embarrassing. Check to see what the views are from other rooms, too. Determine if the bedrooms are separated from the noisy areas of the apartment, such as living room and kitchen.

Yearning to make the terrace scene? If your apartment offers a terrace, see if it's just ornamental or really big enough to accommodate outdoor furniture. And if the terrace is shared with a neighboring apartment make sure there's a privacy screen.

What's the sound-proofing like? You can't expect 100 per cent sound-proofing in any building, but you should check to see how much noise you can expect. Listen to how much street noise filters in.

If the building is new and largely vacant, you won't be able to tell much about the noise coming from adjoining apartments to the side, above and below. But you can have a friend go into one of the vacant apartments and talk loudly, turn on the water and flush the toilet. See how much you can hear.

A strong point in the building's favor is carpeting in the hallways. This will reduce noise substantially.

If the building is older and fairly full, arrange to visit it during an early evening. You can get a good idea then of how quiet it is.

Do appliances and equipment work? Check these in new and older buildings.

Turn on burner ranges. Inspect the refrigerator. Work the faucets and flush the toilet. Open cabinets, slide windows up and down, determine if doors stick. If things need replacement or repairs, talk to the agent before making a commitment.

What other services are provided? In a high-rise building, you may want to check on doorman services, package room, locker room for bulk storage, window washing, master TV antenna and indoor parking. Check also on security provisions.

In low-rise and garden apartments, you may want to look into snow shoveling, grounds upkeep, parking for residents and guests, use of recreational facilities and the like.

Finally, make sure the building you choose is "your kind" of building. By noting the people you see in the lobby, the elevators, and on the grounds, and by asking the rental agent, you can get an idea if you will fit in.

If you're a swinging single, then you'll be out of place in a senior citizen's building. If you're the family type, you probably won't be happy in a building with career singles and couples. Experience shows that most apartment dwellers are happiest in a building with people like them.

"The rental agent should be willing to help you match the building to your individual tastes," Sally said. "After all, it's to his best interest to keep the residents happy, which pays off when time comes to renew the lease."

Tour homes in wet weather

Shopping for a home on a warm spring day is more comfortable — but a tour in wet winter weather is definitely more revealing.

So observes Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Investors Mortgage Insurance Company, Boston, who adds that "granted, a home may look better surrounded by flowers and greenery, but it is easier to spot any defects in the property when the trees are bare."

"There are a great many experienced home buyers who are firmly convinced that winter — especially on a rainy day — is the best time to inspect both a dwelling and the lot on which it is located."

"Further, it is a good exercise for the first-time home buyer — an opportunity to take a realistic look at the dwelling without having good judgment overwhelmed by trimmings or a blossoming landscape," Goss emphasizes.

He suggests that the following features be checked:

- Garages and parking areas. A long, sloping driveway may be a thing of beauty in the summer — but a nightmare to get up and down in the winter when there is snow on the ground. And a driveway should be located so that pulling out into traffic is not hazardous.

- Landscaping. Strategically placed evergreens can assure a homeowner of privacy the year around. Also, trees should be planted on both the north and south sides of a home to act as a wind-break in the winter — to provide shade in the summer.

- The lay of the land. How well a lawn drains — or does not drain — will most certainly show on a rainy day. And while a sloping lawn can be desirable, there should be some level areas that can be used for outdoor furniture or recreation equipment.

- The view. With the trees bare of leaves, there should be no difficulty in spotting any nearby undesirable features — such as a swamp or marsh.

- Property lines. The boundaries of a lot are generally easier to see and define in the winter months when there is a minimum of growth — which, in turn, permits the home buyer to know exactly where he can later plant a row of flowers or hedges.

"There is really no need for a winter home shopping tour to be a chilling experience. And if the home and the site are attractive in the winter, just think of how much prettier they will be in the spring when the flowers bloom and the trees sprout a new cover of leaves," Goss concludes.

Rental unit demand grows

Every dark cloud has its silver lining — a neatly turned phrase or fact.

"Fact," says Marshall C. Dennison, president and chief executive officer of Associated Mortgage Companies, Inc. "The darkening energy cloud that has depressed so much of the American economy has at least one silver lining — a booming demand for rental apartments."

Dennison points out that while home builders express mounting concern about energy crunch-related potential losses in the first half of 1974, apartment building owners report they cannot meet the growing demand for rental units.

He believes the surge to apartments is strong in most areas because of a growing shortage of both new and existing homes plus the continuing rise in the prices of new — as well as old — houses.

A survey by AMCO representatives in every major U.S. city "shows nothing in the wind today to indicate anything but an increase in apartment rentals during all of this year and through most of 1975."

AMCO's market survey highlights:

- Apartment picture very strong in Atlanta, Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Milwaukee and San Francisco-Oakland.

- Builders in Atlanta, Baltimore and the San Francisco-Oakland area are doing all they can to bring the supply of apartments in line with this soaring boom — but the shortage persists.

- Lag in Detroit is being lessened somewhat by the conversion of condominiums in the outlying suburbs into rentals.

- Boston and San Diego areas report rental needs so far ahead of supply that builders do not expect to catch up until the middle of 1975 — if then.

- Apartments are moving briskly in Chicago and Milwaukee — it is even greater in some outlying suburbs.

- Phoenix and New Orleans report a rising number looking for apartments.

- There is no clear picture in Cleveland or Denver. Rental market searches zooming up in both cities, but an expected surge in the outlying suburbs of both of these metropolitan regions has not kept pace with the national scene.

- Dallas and Houston are both running counter to the nation-wide average with need for rental units below the current supply of apartments.

Brisk sales of condominiums, particularly in Florida, remain a damper on rentals.

"Few major builders in Florida indicate any plans for rental offerings in '74 or the first part of '75 — they are still very much in the condo market. Similar reports are also coming out of Ohio and Southern California."

"However, even if a high percentage of condominium construction was halted, demand for rental apartments would still be great," Dennison concludes.

Convention elects new vice president

Robert Arquilla has recently been elected vice president and secretary of the National Association of Home Builders at the Annual Convention in Houston, Tex.

Arquilla, vice president of Burnside Construction Company of Glenwood and a resident of Flossmoor, has a long history of association services including past president of the Home Builders Association of Chicago and for two terms and past president of the Home Builders Association of Greater Chicago.

Arquilla becomes one of the four senior officers of the 75,000 member organization representing the nationwide interests of the shelter industry.

In joining the other officers, Arquilla will be supported by a 200-member staff in Washington and 550 local associations across the nation.

Last year, all John Benson saved was $54.32.

This year, he joined the Payroll Savings Plan.

Poor John. Money just seemed to slip right through his fingers. Every time he planned to stash something away, there wasn't anything left.

Then John decided to join the Payroll Savings Plan where he works. Now, an amount he specifies is automatically set aside from his check before he gets it. And invested in U.S. Savings Bonds.

Because John has become such a systematic saver, he's almost forgotten about it. When he gets around to remembering, he's going to have quite a nest egg laid away.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds—for E Bonds, 5 1/2% when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). That extra 1/2%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970... with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

If you keep forgetting to save something out of your check, join the Payroll Savings Plan and let somebody else do the remembering for you.

Take stock in America.
Now Bonds pay a bonus at maturity.

The U.S. Government does not discriminate on the basis of race, sex, or religion in its programs and activities.

Attorney General Scott advises prospective renters

Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott has some suggestions for spring movers who are planning to rent an apartment.

According to Scott, there are three good sources for finding available apartments. One is friends, another is a newspaper, and the third is a real estate agency. He cautions against dealing with "apartment finders" who don't have real estate broker's licenses. Such "apartment finders" often charge for lists of apartments that are taken straight from the daily newspapers.

After compiling a list of available apartments, renters should thoroughly investigate at least three. Here are some things to look for:

What is the first impression? Do both the apartment and the apartment building look like they are regularly and adequately maintained?

Check the furnace, hot water tank, toilet, all drains and all appliances in the apartment. Do they all work? If the building is new, are the appliances of the latest model? Refrigerator frost-free? Dishwasher included? Disposal? Are there enough electrical outlets and lights? Is wiring adequate to handle, for instance, an air conditioning unit? How long does it take to get maintenance help — if maintenance is included?

Check the windows. Are they uncracked? How is the paint? Does the apartment have storm windows and screens? If it is a high rise, how often are the windows washed?

Are the floors in good order? No serious holes or splintering? Are they clean? Is carpeting included?

Do the doors close easily and securely? Do they fit well? Do locks to the outside work? Are any security precautions in the building adequately enforced?

Is there ample ventilation? Are there adequate exits in case of emergency?

What are the highest heating and electrical bills? What kind of heating? Who controls the temperature? What about air conditioning?

Do you know anyone else who lives in the building? Do they like it? Do you know the names and addresses of the owner and the manager of the apartment?

Is the highrise apartment you like right across from an elevator or an incinerator chute? (It could be noisy!) Are the walls and ceilings reasonably thick and soundproof? Are there doormen around the clock? Is there a bicycle room, laundry room, party room, pool, storage area, receiving room?

Is the apartment's location near schools, transportation, work, shopping, medical help? What are the utility rates, maintenance costs, restrictions on children and pets?

At the time of signing a lease the landlord will likely require a deposit of the first month's rent plus a "security deposit" equal to another month's rent. In Illinois the landlord of any apartment building with more than 25 units is required under law to pay a tenant 4% interest on his security deposit on any lease signed after January 1, 1972.

The security deposit is supposed to cover non-payment of rent or any damage that the tenant does to the apartment, damage beyond the normal wear and tear of daily living.

To protect the security deposit before moving into the apartment, damage already in the unit should be listed with the landlord. Prepare the list in duplicate and date it with signatures of the landlord on both copies.

Under a new Illinois law, effective Jan.

1, 1974, this damage list could be quite helpful. The law states that if you have signed a lease after January 1, 1974, (for an apartment in a building of 10 or more units) and given a security deposit, the landlord upon expiration of your lease: "May not withhold any part of that deposit as compensation for property damage unless he has, within 30 days of the date that the lessee (you) vacated the premises, furnished to the lessee, . . . an itemized statement of the damage allegedly caused to the premises and the estimated or actual cost for repairing or replacing each item on that statement, attaching the paid receipts, or copies thereof, for the repair or replacement. If the estimated cost is given, the lessor (landlord) shall furnish the lessee with paid receipts, or copies thereof, within 30 days from the date the statement showing estimated cost was furnished to the lessee . . . If no such statement and receipts, or copies thereof, are furnished to the lessee . . . the lessor shall return the security deposit in full."

Searching for an apartment and moving is never a glamorous activity! But if these suggestions are followed, the task will hopefully be less time-consuming, more efficient, and in the long run more economical.

Natural gas cooking: make a good thing go a long way

The gas used by a range to cook three meals for a family of four costs about $.03 per day, or under $10 per year, based on a gas cost of 10 cents per therm.

A thermostatically controlled surface burner can save as much as 16% of energy. These controlled burners (sometimes called "Burner-with-a-Brain") use just enough energy to cook meals to perfection.

Despite the low cost of cooking with gas, energy savings are still possible by using common sense cooking techniques. For example, to start boiling, use a minimum amount of water and a full flame. flame to simmer; vigorous boiling wastes energy and does not cook food faster.

Cover pans to keep heat inside and utilize the steam for cooking. Defrost foods before cooking to save time and energy. And don't ignore the old pressure cooker. It can be a great time and energy saver.

Using the oven wisely also conserves energy. Instead of cooking one potato or one casserole, plan an entire oven meal — main dish, vegetables, bread and dessert. It's not always necessary to preheat the oven; when preheating is required, 10 minutes should be sufficient.

Rely on time and temperature when using the oven. Trust your oven, or use a meat thermometer. Opening the door to check on baking foods cools the oven, and thus wastes gas. Preheating a gas broiler is unnecessary, and the door should not be left open during broiling.

ANTIQUE CASH register, lace curtains and dried floral baskets add to the charm of The Web Decoupage Studio, 214 N. Dunton, Arlington Heights. The shop is owned and operated by Muriel Mills, right, and associate Marian Zuelke. Although finished projects are not for sale, classes are taught in a variety of crafts. A complete line of art supplies is also available.

Suburban Living

ESPECIALLY FOR THE FAMILY

The Web Studio

Where crafts become art

by FRAN HECKART

If you think fine crafts are only for those naturally artistic people, talk to Muriel Mills. She is indeed a versatile crafts artist and her enthusiasm is captivating. Before you leave The Web Decoupage Studio which she owns and operates with her associate, Marian Zuelke, you might have a pocketful of art supplies for a project in the creative crafts.

The Web, located at 214 N. Dunton in Arlington Heights, was at one time an eight-room apartment. Muriel and Marian have transformed the roomy apartment into a charming studio which customers often find so inviting that they've been known to spend the day.

Decoupage projects, vue d'optique, toile and decorating paintings, miniature oil paintings and cornhusk dolls accent the Victorian decor. Mrs. Mills has not overlooked any aspect of decorating with art. Even the kitchen cupboards and bath tub reflect the art of decoupage.

FOR THE BATHTUB and the toilet seat Mrs. Mills cut designs from the wallpaper used in the bathroom. Following a color scheme of pink and lavender, she applied the design to the old-fashioned bathtub which had been painted a deep lavender shade. Although normally many coats of varnish would be applied, she used only a few — in case the color or decor is ever changed, the design may be easily removed.

In the kitchen, prints were decoupage onto wooden panels, then attached to each door. They, also, are easily removed when it's time to change the decor.

"If it stands still long enough we decoupage it," laughed Muriel.

Decoupage, according to Muriel, is a very old art which simply means cutting out prints and gluing them on to another surface. Then 30 or 40 coats of varnish are added until the surface is smooth. Mrs. Mills also teaches classes in 18th century decoupage. This is the process in which intricate Victorian-like prints are hand-colored with pencils then cut out and re-designed on the surface of the project. Although the re-designing is not necessary, Muriel feels that it adds to the creativity of the project and she seldom uses a print as it appears originally.

BUT DECOUPAGE is only one aspect of Marian's and Muriel's talents. They aren't just selling craft supplies, they're selling the art. In fact, none of the finished projects are for sale. But they'll gladly advise or teach any budding craftsmen.

One room of the converted apartment contains a studio for classes. Offerings include heirloom egg decorating, vue d'optique, decoupage, toile and decorative painting, cornhusk dolls, miniature oil painting and rub-outs.

Toile and decorative painting, popular in the West for some time, is one of the newest trends in Chicago, said Muriel. This involves being able to paint without being an artist. Brush technique and blending of colors are used to create the picture.

One of the nice things about the technique, according to Muriel, is that it can be used on almost any surface with good results.

MRS. MILLS' miniature oil painting is also for those who "can't paint or draw." This process, in which students have a finished mini-oil painting by the end of a three-hour class, also employs a distinct brush technique.

"The process can also be used on a larger scale," explained Mrs. Mills. "However, the small paintings are more practical in terms of time."

Rub-outs create a unique professional-looking surface also. An entire surface is painted; then the design is traced onto the oil. A brush and turpentine are used to remove the paint from the design.

The Web is far more than a craft shop, but that doesn't mean it's short on supplies. There are about 18,000 prints to choose from for decoupage and vue d'optique. Reference and how-to books are available along with an extensive line of miniatures, oil paints and eggs of all sorts — quail, goose, double-yolk goose and occasionally ostrich eggs.

PERHAPS ONE of the most beneficial aspects of projects from The Web is that they can be used as decorative home accessories. Muriel and Marian abound with ideas and they're willing to share their knowledge of quality crafts.

"If you're going to do a project," said Muriel, "you might as well do a good job."

There's definitely a difference between crafts and art, she said. "What we try to do is make an art out of a craft."

DECOPAGE ART brings a new look to kitchen cabinets. Panels are done separately then attached to the cupboard doors. Rub-out paintings hang above the woodwork. Classes in both arts are taught at The Web.

BARGAIN BATHTUB found at The Web has been decoupage with a floral design cut from wallpaper. The toilet seat blends with the decor of Victorian bathroom decorated by Muriel Mills and Marian Zuelke.

In surgery

Stapling saves time, $$

by PATRICIA MCCORMACK

Last year more than 200,000 Americans were stapled. That brings to 700,000 the number stapled instead of stitched during surgery.

In addition, more than 200 narcotic addicts in the Los Angeles area are walking around with surgical staples in their ears.

Dr. Lester Sacks of the Los Angeles Medical Group inserted the staples, said to reduce effects of withdrawal.

The staplers aren't like the ones on a desk in an office or home. And neither are the staples. But the reason behind their use is the same — to hold things together.

The principle is different with the addicts. Stapling is in place of acupuncture needles — earlier used to ease withdrawal pain. Acupuncture needles were cumbersome. So Dr. Sacks and his associates turned to surgical staples.

ADDICTS wiggle staples three times a day to reduce pain. In more than 200 patients treated so far the success rate is the same as acupuncture.

Called staple puncture, the process involves clipping a quarter-inch stainless steel staple into the skin of the tiny ridge of flesh at the outer opening of the auditory canal.

The insertion is painless, due to local anesthesia. The patient does not feel the staple during the two to six weeks it is in place.

For this information and much more on the use of staples in the health field we are indebted to Turi Josefsen, a young woman who has assisted doctors in more than 350 surgical stapling operations and who demonstrates the techniques involved at conferences worldwide.

Also expanding our knowledge in this field was Dr. Mark Ravitch, chief of surgery at the University of Pittsburgh Medical School.

Dr. Ravitch is considered the country's most experienced staple surgeon. In a telephone interview he said the modern day technology of surgical stapling enables the procedure to be used in far more surgical situations every year.

However, stapling isn't used in all surgical situations.

A bonus in the stapling, according to the surgeon, is this:

"Surgical stapling reduces operative time by as much as 50 per cent with the added benefit to the patient of faster healing and less post-operative complications."

MISS JOSEFSEN, vice president of sales for United States Surgical Corp. which markets a line of six staplers called Auto Sutures, said tiny stainless steel staples are used.

"The surgeon can place simultaneously the equivalent of 66 silk sutures with one application," she said.

Surgeons who favor the stapler approach say the technique allows them to work faster, more precisely and with less handling of tissue — therefore less trauma to the patient. The payoff for the patient includes: less time on the operating table, reduced blood loss, shorter time under anesthetic and less injury to blood vessels and organs.

Surgeons in more than 1,500 hospitals use the staplers.

The surgical stapler grew from clamps first used by Aladar Van Peltz, a Hungarian, in the 1920s. Russian researchers made many advances in the 1950s and developed a number of different surgical staplers, but they required handloading and were difficult to clean.

The Auto Suture guns have some features of the Russian staplers. But they come equipped with loaded, sterilized and disposable cartridges that can be slipped in and out with ease during operations.

MISS JOSEFSEN said the most famous name associated with an Auto Suture operation is Cincinnati Reds' star Johnny Bench. Considered by many to be the best baseball player in the nation, he had a lung lesion removed during surgery performed with the aid of a surgical stapling machine.

The surgeon who performed the operation said afterward that without the stapler he would not have been able to remove the lesion without cutting important back muscles.

The economics of surgical stapling relieve the pain in the pocketbook this way:

Hospitals estimate it costs between $80 and $100 an hour to run an operating room. Any device that saves $40 to $50 an hour reduces the expense for patients. It can mean a saving to the patient of between $25 and $50 when he gets his anesthesia bill alone.

In many instances less severe trauma from reduced tissue handling during surgery results in faster post-operative recovery. Every day the stapled patient spares himself an additional 24 hours in the hospital saves more than $100 a day — the cost of the hospital bed and board a day.

The coalition, composed of the Consumer Federation of Illinois (CFI), Independent Voters of Illinois (IVI) and the Citizens Action Program (CAP), asked legislators and hopefuls to respond favorably or unfavorably to 10 consumer issues.

Out of 372 candidates for the House, 180 responded, as well as 17 Senate candidates out of the 52 running.

HERE ARE THE issues and results:

Northwest suburban House candidates

by Monica Wilch Perin

voted this way on the issues as numbered (plus-favors; minus-opposes; zero-no position).

THE COALITION, while encouraged by the responses, pointed out that candidates in favor of consumer issues would be more likely to respond to the survey. The only Senate candidate from the Northwest suburbs who responded was Patton Feichter, D-4th, who favored all the issues except No. 9, which he opposed.

Meanwhile, a similar survey conducted by the Consumer Federation of America rated the voting records of members of Congress on consumer issues. But Congress did very poorly by the consumer, according to this report.

"Of 13 key issues which came before them last year, a majority of senators voted for the consumer only seven times. . . . Of eight key votes, a majority of members of the House supported the consumer on six," the CFA said.

Illinois Sen. Charles H. Percy, (R), scored 54 per cent pro-consumer votes, while Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, (D) scored 85 per cent. But in the House Rep. Philip M. Crane (R-12th) scored a zero, according to the CFA and Rep. Samuel H. Young, (R-10th), 13 per cent.

Strictly for pickle lovers

"The vinegar men march of a pickle crunch" — for any drooling pickle-eater, this was sour news from the Sunday newspaper.

The Vinegar Institute seems to think the shortage may precipitate a drastic reduction in the supply of ethyl alcohol, a basic ingredient in making distilled white vinegar, vital for pickling pickles. Worse yet, this awful thing could affect the supply of catsup, canned tomatoes, salad dressings and other things of tart taste.

All this leaves me pouring over my seed catalogs for cucumber varieties to plant so I can make my own pickles to squirrel away while the vinegar people are prophesying gloom and doom in sourland.

There is nothing I treasure more in this materialistic world than the pleasure of a self-indulgent nibble on a Polish pickle (or ogorki) wyrob if you wish). Even when I was a little girl and my mother gave me a nickel, I'd buy a pickle instead of a Liberty streamer and an all day sucker as the other kids did.

TO THIS VERY day, I serve pickles at all my cocktail parties. (A pickle-suckle is a pickle on a popsicle stick for those uninformed about such gourmet delights.)

The serious choice of a pickle aficionado who intends to grow his own this year must include a gherkin variety for sweet pickle relish and a large dill pickle type of making Polish (or Kosher) pickles, as well as a good bread-and-butter pickle.

Further, cucumber connoisseurs should be concerned with whether or not a variety has striping at the blossom end or it does not, whether the blossom end is tapered, round or blunt, and most important of all — if a variety is white-spined or black-spined. Cucumber connoisseurs know that these spines are miniature stickers that protrude from the warts when the fruits are young. White spine cucumbers turn from dark green to creamy white when they get old and nobody remembers to pluck them from the vine; black spine varieties turn yellowish orange.

AN OUNCE OF cucumber seed costs about 60 cents and will plant 50 hills of 8 to 10 seeds per hill, producing enough pickles to last a family of four through the year, allowing for two cocktails parties per month.

Suiting a cucumber garden in the organic way should include planting alternate hills of squash and cucumbers, the squash acting as a trap crop for the pickleworm. Also plant radishes, nasturtiums or odoriferous marigolds in the cucumber hills to repel striped and spotted cucumber beetles. Or, marigolds can be planted as a border on two sides of the cucumber. Simple crop rotation of the cucumbers in another portion of the garden every three or four years will avoid scab and prevent anthracnose diseases. Cover young plants with Hotkaps and when they are more established, mulch heavily between hills with straw to smother weeds and discourage beetles.

Booklet offers used furniture buyer's guide

"Used Furniture," a new publication from the U.S. Department of Agriculture offers guidelines for consumers buying second-hand furniture. The booklet explains how to inspect the frame-work to determine if the piece is well-made. How to inspect upholstered furniture is also included in the eight-page illustrated booklet.

Even though some second-hand pieces, may not look good, the booklet points out that a bit of repair work or a good cleaning may be all that's needed for the piece to be useful.

For example, to determine the quality of a chest of drawers take out one or two of the drawers and look at the inside corners of the chest frame. Wood corner joints are a sign of good quality. Also, according to the publication, a good frame won't give or creak when you push against it.

The drawers of the chest should pull out easily. Handles should be smooth and easy to grasp. Also check the condition of the drawer sides and bottoms.

Consumers may obtain copies of "Used Furniture" for 25 cents from Consumer Information, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

What's happening all around the suburbs? Find out every Friday in "Medley", the HERALD's new entertainment guide.

False teeth on way out?

False teeth may be about to go the way of the five-cent beer.

Probably not within the immediate future, but some day artificial roots routinely may be implanted. That would eliminate the need for false teeth.

When it will happen for everyone without teeth is a matter of conjecture at this time. But undoubtedly, the development will be a reality for all who want it some day.

That prognosis is from Dr. Carlos M. Giro who spoke at the annual meeting of the Greater New York Dental Society, the world's largest dental educational seminar.

Giro told his fellow dentists that the endodontic implant — or stabilizer — has been employed successfully for more than 20 years in South America, and slightly less in Europe.

"It has been used with ever increasing satisfaction by a small group of dentists in the United States for the past 11 years," he said.

Some of the disciples of oral implantology remain controversial. But Giro described procedures for the endodontic implant, a rigid inert non-electrolytic rod. He considers the implant methodology simple and practical.

Here's how it is done: a rod is inserted through the root canal of a periodontally weakened tooth into the adjacent bone. The tooth is wobbly in a way due to the breaking down of support provided by failing gums.

THE PURPOSE of the rod is to fixate or stabilize the tooth by artificially increasing the length of its root.

Giro paid tribute to pioneers of this discipline of implantation, saying he believed the dental profession at large should be aware of its possibilities.

"Indeed," he said, "the prescription for removal of teeth can and should be changed to that of the insertion of endodontic stabilizers in many of the following situations: advanced cases of root resorption; accidental horizontal fracture of roots; cases where certain orthodontic treatments would result in inadequate bone support for affected teeth.

"There are many pertinent oral, systemic and emotional conditions that would preclude the safe use of the procedure," he said.

However, in cases where it has been practical it has proved most rewarding to the discriminating dentist and his grateful patients who were relieved of the threat of the dreaded "full dentures."

CitizensBank

We're not exactly changing our name. Just making it shorter. Saying it the way you do: Citizens Bank.

We're also adding a service mark that combines the "C" in Citizens and the "B" in Bank. This mark symbolizes what a recent independent survey says you say we are. Progressive. Innovative. Dependable. Large. Centrally located. Experienced. Accommodating. All the good things you want a bank to be.

Because we're all of these things, you're using more of our services. The more you use them, the bigger we grow. With $274,000,000 in deposits, we're Illinois' largest bank outside Chicago serving the northwest suburbs.

Ordinance No. 2492
AN ORDINANCE GRANTING A VARIATION FOR THE PURPOSE OF THE ZONING BOARD OF APPEALS OF THE VILLAGE OF MOUNT PROSPECT DID MEET ON JANUARY 31, 1974, AT THE HOUR OF 8:00 P.M. IN THE VILLAGE HALL AND DID HOLD A PUBLIC HEARING UNDER CASE NO. 6-V-74, PURSUANT TO PROPER LEGAL NOTICE; AND WHEREAS, The Zoning Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect did hear a petition requesting a variation to change a presently non-conforming residential use in an otherwise commercial building located in the B-3 (Business-Retail and Service) zoning district under the Zoning Ordinance of the Village of Mount Prospect; and WHEREAS, The Zoning Board of Appeals of the Village of Mount Prospect has recommended to the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Mount Prospect the granting of this variation by a vote of 6-0 and has found that:
1. There is a practical hardship on the petitioner in that the present structure is a sixteen year old building in which there is a four-room apartment used as living quarters and that due to an increase in the family status, the petitioner is in need of additional room;
2. The purpose of the variation is not based exclusively upon the desire to make money;
3. The granting of the variation will not be detrimental to the public health, safety and general welfare of the community; and
WHEREAS, The Building Committee of the Board of Trustees of the Village of Mount Prospect did subsequently meet on February 21, 1974, and considered and approved the variation requested under Case No. 6-V-74, and recommended to the President and Board of Trustees of the Village of Mount Prospect that the variation requested under the said Case No. 6-V-74 be granted; and
NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE PRESIDENT AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE VILLAGE OF MOUNT PROSPECT, COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS, THAT:
SECTION ONE: That the property being the subject matter of Case No. 6-V-74, being legally described as follows:
Lot 5, 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14, Block 25, Prospect Park Subdivision, 35 Prospect Park, North of the center line of the South and North (31) of the West Half (1/2) of Section 24, Township 42 North, Range 10 East of the Third Principal Meridian, in Cook County, Illinois;
SECTION TWO: That, except for the variation granted in the Zoning Ordinance of the Village of Mount Prospect as B-3 (Business-Retail and Service) District, which zoning classification shall remain subject to the variation granted hereinbefore, that there be allowed one (1) dwelling unit consisting of a total of seven (7) rooms and located on the second floor level and at the rear of the existing funeral parlor building.
SECTION THREE: That, in accordance with the plans for the addition hereinbefore mentioned, which plans are attached hereto and hereby made a part hereof as Exhibit I, the Director of Building and Zoning of the Village of Mount Prospect is hereby authorized and directed to issue a building permit in accordance with the variation hereinbefore mentioned.
SECTION FOUR: That the variation granted by this Ordinance shall be null and void and of no force and effect whatsoever unless an application for a building permit pursuant to said variation is made and constructed commenced within one (1) year of the date said Ordinance becomes effective.
SECTION FIVE: That this Ordinance shall be in full force and effect from and after its passage, approval, and publication in the manner provided by law.

AND EVERYTHING NICE ABOUT FOOD

Pot Luck of the Irish

You don't have to be Irish to enjoy the traditional foods from Erin. Almost everyone — men particularly — like such traditional fare as corned beef and cabbage or Irish stew. As a change from these two favorites serve hearty Dublin Short Ribs on St. Paddy's Day. The ribs are simmered slowly in a heavy stew pot; carrots and onions added later. It's a dish to chase away the chill of the March winds.

Along with the ribs serve a traditional potato dish . . . Champ, a delectable combination of creamy mashed potatoes and chopped green onions. This is always served in a mound with a "well" in the center filled with butter pats.

An Irish meal wouldn't be complete without a crusty loaf of Soda Bread and cups and cups of hot and hearty tea. Make it the way the Irish do, in a teapot with loose tea; or brew it the more American way with teabags. Serve the tea with milk as they do in the old country.

To finish the feast, serve a rich and creamy mousse, emerald green in color, of course, in honor of the day.

IRISH SODA BREAD

(Makes 1 round loaf)

- | | |
|---------------------------------------|----------------------------|
| 1 package dry yeast | 1 tablespoon caraway seeds |
| 1/4 cup very warm water | 1/2 teaspoon baking soda |
| 2 1/2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour | 2 tablespoons butter |
| 3 tablespoons sugar | 1/4 cup buttermilk |
| 1/2 teaspoon salt | 1/2 cup raisins |

Dissolve yeast in warm water; set aside. Combine 1 cup flour, sugar, salt, caraway seeds and baking soda in large mixing bowl; stir in dissolved yeast. Melt butter in small saucepan, then heat buttermilk. Add to yeast mixture and beat well. Add remaining 1 1/2 cups flour to make a soft dough with mixture leaving sides of bowl. Stir in raisins. Cover and let rise in warm place until double in bulk, about 1 hour. Turn dough out on lightly floured cloth and knead 20 to 30 times. Form into smooth round ball and place on greased baking sheet. Press into 7-inch circle. Let rise in warm place until double in bulk, about 50 minutes. Cut a cross 1/4-inch deep in center. Bake in 350 degree oven 30 minutes.

Note: 1 cup whole wheat flour may be used as part of the flour. Reduce total flour by a tablespoon or so.

Betty Dickson in the kitchen

She teams ease and taste

by LOIS SEILER

Because of her many activities, busy Betty Dickson of Schaumburg likes step-saving recipes that are quick to make yet delicious.

One such favorite is Chicken Casserole which she has served to church groups, guests and the family. It is an exceptionally tasty luncheon dish, according to Betty, but also nice for buffets.

She cooks chicken breasts for this recipe, combining the cut-up poultry with cooked noodles mushroom soup, mushrooms and parsley. Condensed milk, chicken broth and melted chicken fat lend a rich flavor, and the dish is topped with grated cheese and sliced almonds.

The casserole can be made a day ahead and refrigerated, or even days ahead and frozen. It is baked before serving. Betty suggests a gelatin mold or green salad and rolls as accompaniments.

Another of her quickie recipes tastes far more appetizing than its amusing name. Called Toad in the Hole, it consists of tender beef cubes baked in a batter. The tops of the cubes show above the batter resembling toads peeking out from their holes. The batter becomes firm during the baking and is spooned onto serving plates with the meat, eliminating the need for potatoes.

With either of these entrees, Betty's Swedish Apple Cake can be served for dessert.

"It is more like a pie," she explained, "but easier to make." The crust, which is similar to other pastries, need not be rolled out but is simply patted into a pan. Sliced apples are placed in the crust and a streusel topping covers all. The crust is tender and flaky, and the cake may be topped with whipped cream.

Betty has made this cake for bake sales and bridge clubs, and it is also enjoyed by her husband, Stan, and children, Cary, 16, Kendra, 12, and Cort, 8.

Tuna main dish fits any budget

A hearty dish that costs about 35 cents a serving should be a welcome addition to anyone's recipe file. One such is a filling and well-seasoned Tuna Skillet Chowder. Serve with a homemade whole-wheat bread and a green salad.

TUNA SKILLET CHOWDER

One-pan meals offer savings

One-pan meals are a great way to conserve fuel and time in the kitchen. They're also one way to combat the ever rising food bills facing homemakers today.

But don't be too hasty in grabbing one of those boxed skillet dinners from the grocery shelf. They can be a big disappointment. Often times the dehydrated ingredients result in a bland dinner entree. The pre-packaged seasonings are usually ones you're apt to have on hand and only boost the cost. Almost all of the commercial boxed dinners require the purchase of meat which increases the total cost more than enhancing the questionable taste.

On the other hand, common ingredients found on almost every pantry shelf can be used to create many appealing one-pan dishes. The homemade skillet dinners will compare favorably — price-wise. The flavor obtained from seasoning and combining a few choice ingredients far surpasses the commercial offerings.

Granted, you won't find little pre-measured packets and cans on your shelf, but one-pan dinners never involve any skilled or time-consuming preparation.

CHUCK WAGON Skillet requires only a few minutes preparation time and can be served in 30 minutes. Costing only pennies per serving this dish can be prepared with ingredients you're likely to have on hand.

In a large skillet brown one pound ground beef. Add two cups uncooked medium noodles, two cups (8-oz.) cubed Cheddar cheese, one cup chopped celery, one-half cup sliced ripe olives, one can (1 lb.) stewed tomatoes, one-half cup water, one teaspoon salt and one teaspoon instant minced onion. Cover and simmer 25 to 30 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

Tuna Chowder is hearty enough for a supper entree. Round out the menu with hot bread and a salad.

In a two-quart saucepan gradually add one and one-half cups milk to one can (10 1/2 oz.) condensed cream of celery soup; stir in one package (10 oz.) frozen mixed vegetables, one can tomatoes and one can (7 oz.) tuna, drained and flaked and one teaspoon instant minced onion. Cook until vegetables are tender (5-15 minutes); stir occasionally. Stir in one cup (4 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese until melted. Makes six cups.

With few exceptions food prices remained stable last week. According to a price-survey on Monday bacon and chicken averaged a one-cent price increase since March 4.

Dairy prices also followed the generally stable trend. Butter and milk each decreased an average of one cent, however, while eggs, margarine and American cheese all rose one cent.

Iceberg lettuce averaged an increase of two cents followed by potatoes and orange juice concentrate which all reflected one-cent increases. Celery and canned pear halves each declined a penny.

Corn flakes rose two cents while all other prices remained stable.

Polynesian style meat loaf makes elaborate centerpiece

One ordinarily doesn't consider meat loaf as a showy centerpiece for a meal, but this one, prepared in a Polynesian style is exactly that. Furthermore, it's delightful to eat.

As is true in many Polynesian dishes, the meat loaf is a blending of flavors from large numbers of ingredients, so follow carefully. First line a meat loaf pan with oiled foil extending foil over the edges at least 2 inches because later on you'll want to lift the loaf from the pan.

Mix together 1 1/2 pounds lean ground beef and 1/2 pound ground pork and combine with the meat 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/8 teaspoon freshly ground pepper, 1/2 cup coarse bread crumbs, 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder (or a whole minced clove if you really like garlic), 1 teaspoon paprika, 2 small onion, peeled and grated, 1 tablespoon brown sugar, 2 eggs beaten with 1/4 cup soy sauce, and 2 tablespoons oyster sauce (available in bottles at most supermarkets).

Turn out the mixture onto wax paper and after wetting hands shape into a loaf and put into the foil-lined pan, smoothing it out. Bake for 1 hour in a preheated 375-degree oven. Cool.

WHILE oven is baking make sauce, combining these ingredients in a saucepan — 1/4 cup honey, juice from a 20-ounce can of sliced pineapple (slices are reserved for later use), 1 teaspoon hoisin sauce (available in cans at stores specializing in Chinese foods), 2 cups chicken broth, 1/4 cup soy sauce, 1 tablespoon brown sugar, salt and pepper.

Bring to boiling point, then turn down heat and while simmering, slowly add a paste made by mixing 2 tablespoons cornstarch in 4 tablespoons water. Stir until thickened. Remove from heat and cover.

When meatloaf is cooled, turn out onto a cutting board and slice 1-inch thick. Select a metal serving tray large enough to handle twice the length of the meatloaf and on it reassemble the loaf, placing a slice of the pineapple between each cut. Make the curve of the pineapple slices visible. Secure ends of loaf with metal skewers.

Fix-ahead dessert sweet, satisfying

A light, fix-ahead dessert comes in the colorful form of a Prune Marmalade Mold. The combination of prune juice, orange marmalade and lemon juice with whipped cream gives this just the right tartness to offset a heavy meal, leaving the sweet tooth satisfied in a most refreshing way.

PRUNE MARMALADE MOLD

2 cups prune juice
2 teaspoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons orange marmalade
1 package (8 ounces)

lemon gelatin

1 cup whipping cream, whipped

Heat 1 cup prune juice with lemon juice and orange marmalade. When just at boiling pour over gelatin. Divide gelatin mixture and pour 1/3 in top of 4-to 5-cup mold. Cool remainder until mixture mounds on spoon. Divide gelatin in 2 parts. Whip 1 part and fold into whipped cream and add to mold. Add remaining gelatin mixture to form final layer. Makes about 6 servings.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Mostly for men

by Charles Flynn

Pour enough of the prepared sauce over the loaf to keep it moist while thoroughly reheating. Heat rest of sauce to be served in a dish or gravy boat.

When meatloaf is well heated, remove from oven and decorate each pineapple slice with a maraschino cherry on a toothpick. For further color, put spiced crabapples around meatloaf on the serving tray and garnish the top with fresh parsley or crisp watercress. Serves 6.

Sausage flavored dinner in a dish

Pork sausage is another flavor contributor that builds a meal's food value while supplying appetite appeal. When combined with sweet potatoes in Sausage 'N Sweets Surprise, a pound makes a delicious and satisfying dinner in a dish.

Yam and Sausage Patty Skillet

Yam, sausage dish for winter menu

A tasty new recipe from the South called Yam and Sausage Patty Skillet will be a welcome addition to your repertoire of cold weather meals.

Right now is an ideal time to buy fresh Louisiana yams. Cured yams that are moist and stringless. Combine them with patties of ground ham or sausage, parsley and mustard, then sauce with a mixture of red currant jelly and lemon juice. Pear halves and yams are baked up with a ginger flavored glaze in another delicious recipe, this time designed to accompany the meat course. Ginger Candied Yams and Pears is excellent served with ham, poultry or lamb.

on platter; pour sauce over all. Makes 4 servings.

GINGERY CANDIED YAMS AND PEARS

1 can (16 ounces) pear halves
1/2 cup sugar
3/4 cup lemon juice
1 tablespoon chopped crystallized ginger or 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
6 medium Louisiana yams, cooked, peeled and halved or 3 cans (16 ounces each) yams, drained

Drain pears; reserve 2 tablespoons syrup. Combine reserved syrup, sugar, lemon juice and ginger, mix well. Arrange pears and yams in greased 1 1/2 quart casserole. Top with pear syrup mixture and bake uncovered in 350 degree oven 20 minutes. Baste with syrup before serving. Makes 6 servings

Pork and potatoes are perfect team for easy casserole

A hearty casserole extends a warm welcome to winter appetites. It also provides a nutritious meal-in-a-dish when the foods that fill it are selected with an eye to nutritive value as well as flavor. Meaty casseroles score high on both these points.

When tasty, boneless pork cubed steaks are left whole and layered in a casserole of scalloped potatoes, a delicious knife-and-fork entree results.

EASY PORK AND POTATO SCALLOP

6 pork cubed steaks (2 to 2 1/2 pounds)
1 tablespoon lard or drippings
5 cups thinly sliced potatoes
1 cup milk
1 can (10 1/2 ounces) condensed cream of mushroom soup
2 tablespoons instant minced onion
1 tablespoon diced pimiento
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper

Brown steaks on both sides in lard or drippings. Place half the sliced potatoes in a 2 1/2-quart casserole and top with 3 pork cubed steaks. Place remaining potatoes on cubed steaks and top with remaining steaks. Stir milk into soup. Add onion, pimiento, salt and pepper and pour over steaks and potatoes. Cover and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) 1 hour 15 minutes. Remove cover and bake 10 to 15 minutes longer, or until potatoes are tender. 6 servings.

Pork plus potatoes

Oven-brown potatoes for a delicious platter-mate for pork loin roast. Simply cook, uncovered, in the pan with the roast for the last hour. Then after the roast is removed and waiting to be carved, turn up the heat to 375 degrees, cover the pan and continue cooking the potatoes until tender, turning in the drippings several times.

Stockpiling can be costly

by JEANNE LESEM

If the recent government forecast of a 12 to 16 per cent increase in retail food prices this year tempts you to hoard — don't.

Indiscriminate stockpiling can be doubly expensive if the food spoils or loses quality and/or nutritives during long storage at too warm a temperature.

Dry staples such as white and par-boiled rice, dried beans and other dried vegetables and canned foods keep well for up to a year under certain conditions, say the Cornell and Michigan State University extension services.

There's the catch. Very few houses and apartments have a dry storage area whose temperature never rises above 70 degrees. This is the recommended storage climate for food in cans or other tightly covered rigid containers made from metal, glass or plastic. If the cut-backs imposed by the energy shortage curtail air conditioning this summer, low temperature storage could become impossible.

The following suggestions for storing frequently used food products are from the extension services:

Transfer boxed or bagged foods to tightly covered rigid containers. This allows you to check them first for the presence of insects that can develop in sealed bags or boxes of flour and other cereal products mishandled at a warehouse or retail store.

DATE PACKAGE or can labels or storage containers before you put the groceries away, and always use the oldest first.

Raw white rice and par-boiled white rice keep well for up to two years under ideal conditions but flavored rice mixes, no more than six months, and brown rice, no more than two months. Seasonings in the mixes can lose flavor and/or attract insects. The natural fat content in the outer layer of brown rice can develop an off-flavor. For longer storage of these products, refrigeration is recommended.

Macaroni products, including noodles, can be stored up to two years.

Dried beans and other dried vegetables keep well for as long as a year but they tend to dry out even more. When this happens, longer cooking is necessary.

Unflavored dried potatoes have a recommended storage time of six to 12 months, but flavored mixes, only about six months.

Unopened canned foods should keep well up to a year in a cool, dry spot.

FATS AND oils need protection from light and air. Otherwise, they oxidize like wine, turn rancid and develop off flavors. Partially filled bottles should be decanted into small ones that can be filled to the top for long storage.

White flour should keep well for about six to eight months at cool room temperature but whole wheat and other whole grain flours should be refrigerated to keep their fat content from developing off flavors.

Don't store any food on a high shelf. Even in a cool room, heat rises and groceries kept there may be well above the temperatures at counter level or below.

Village expected to OK agreements for flood relief

Buffalo Grove is expected to ratify agreements later this month for two reservoirs that will provide a substantial amount of flood relief to residents in the area.

One of the agreements is for a 100-acre reservoir on Buffalo Creek and the other is for a five-acre retention facility on the grounds of the Arlington Country Club. Village Mgr. Daniel Larson said yesterday the agreements with the Metropolitan Sanitary District and the Lake County Forest Preserve District will be considered by the village board March 25.

Both reservoirs have been in the planning stages for a long time and have met several delays. If all goes well, officials say, both projects could be completed by mid-1975.

Development streets may go to village

by JOE FRANZ

Buffalo Grove officials are looking into a proposal calling for the village to take over control of streets in planned developments that otherwise would be maintained by private homeowner associations.

Village Mgr. Daniel Larson recommended the change in policy to the village board this week. According to Larson, the village is better equipped to maintain the streets than private homeowners.

In addition, he said, it is unfair that homeowners in planned developments (multi-family) have to maintain their streets when they pay taxes to the village for that purpose. Since these homeowners pay taxes for street repairs and other maintenance functions, they should derive the same benefits as persons living in single-family homes, Larson said.

THE VILLAGE'S policy at the present time is to maintain major streets in planned developments, but to leave the minor streets to the homeowner's association. Since most of the multi-family projects in Buffalo Grove are not yet under construction, Larson said now is the time for the village to take over responsibility.

Other villages in the area, Larson said, have experienced pressure from homeowners' associations to take over private streets after they have come into a state of disrepair. It would be better to assume maintenance before that happens, he said.

Following Larson's recommendation to the village board Monday night, Village Atty. Richard Raysa said, since the homeowners in planned developments sign a contract agreeing to maintain the streets, the village is not obligated to take over maintenance. Larson, however, said he is trying to avert a potential problem that could face the village.

LARSON SAID yesterday if a homeowners' association comes to the village because it cannot afford to pay for repairs, the village has little choice but to give its assistance.

Although village board members are not opposed to Larson's proposal, some said they are unsure whether the village can afford to take on the additional responsibility.

Several trustees were concerned that street maintenance in other areas of the village would suffer if the village takes on the private streets.

THE VILLAGE board has asked Larson to prepare an estimate of how much it will cost the village each year to maintain the additional streets. Larson said it will take about a month to prepare the figures.

At that time, the village board will decide whether it can afford the additional expense.

Public Works Director Charles McCoy said he is in favor of village ownership of the streets, but suggests the village require the homeowners' associations to bring them up to village standards prior to acceptance.

In addition to the maintenance of streets, Larson has suggested the village assume ownership of storm sewers in planned developments that also are now maintained by homeowners' associations.

Under the proposed agreement for the Buffalo Creek reservoir, the Lake County Forest Preserve District will acquire the needed land, the Metropolitan Sanitary District will pay for construction and Buffalo Grove will maintain the facility after it is built.

The MSD approved the agreement late last year and is now awaiting approval by the forest preserve district and village. Larson said officials have reviewed the agreement and he predicts there will be little difficulty getting village board approval.

JERROLD SOESBE, director of the forest preserve district, said yesterday the agreement probably will be considered by his board at its April meeting. "I don't see any problems with the agreement; it looks fine," he said.

The MSD has agreed to assume the major cost of the $2.1 million facility. It is estimated the land will cost about $1.8 million and construction another $300,000.

As soon as the agreement is executed, Soesbe said the forest preserve district will apply for a federal grant that would reimburse the MSD for half the land acquisition cost.

Soesbe said he fears the request for federal money will be turned down. "I'm not optimistic about getting the money because federal programs at the moment are very tight," he said.

The MSD, however, has indicated it will pay the entire cost if the forest preserve district is unable to obtain federal funds.

IMMEDIATELY after the three-part agreement is signed, Soesbe said the forest preserve district will begin land acquisition. Acquiring the land, he said, could take from two months to two years, depending on opposition from property owners. If there is a lot of resistance, condemnation will be necessary and it will take more time, he said.

Once the land is acquired, officials estimate construction of the dam and reservoir will take another four months. When completed the 200-million gallon reservoir will provide major flood relief for downstream homes in Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and parts of unincorporated Cook County.

THE RESERVOIR is planned for the southwest corner of Arlington Heights and Checker roads. When the facilities are not being used, the area will be suitable for recreation.

The retention facility on the Arlington Country Club is scheduled to begin in October and should be finished by this time next year, Larson said. The project was originally supposed to start last fall, but was postponed because of legal difficulties.

Since that time, the MSD, state of Illinois and village have drafted a new agreement. Larson said he is not anticipating further problems.

The reservoir will have a 16 million-gallon capacity and will alleviate flooding along Dundee Rd., the White Pine ditch, Buffalo Creek and the Wheeling drainage ditch.

Freshman studies program opinion survey ordered

The Dist. 125 Board of Education has ordered an opinion survey on the freshman studies program in response to a request by a parent group critical of the program.

Approximately 60 parents met with the school board, administrators and teachers for two hours last week, discussing and sometimes criticizing the new freshman studies program.

School Board Pres. Robert Anderson told the group that he will direct the administration to survey freshmen and sophomores along with their parents for reactions to the freshman studies program.

Past meetings with parents have been largely favorable, Anderson commented, and this was the first time any serious criticism of the program had been brought to the board's attention.

In describing the freshman studies program to parents, Dist. 125 Supt. Harold Baner said it was developed because three years ago officials discovered that up to 15 per cent of freshmen received failing grades in their first year at Stevenson.

THE TEACHING team was designed, Baner said, to be accountable for 100 per cent of each freshman's time and set up so that instructors do not teach every subject every day as in the regular Stevenson curriculum. The freshman studies team includes a director and two teachers each from the English, math, science, social science and physical education departments.

Each student in the program, his parents and freshman teacher-adviser meet several times a year starting in the spring while the student is in eighth grade. Baner said the advisory system has become important in evaluating the student's ability, desires, likes and dislikes, ambitions and goals.

"Attendance improved, control was better, and tests taken at the beginning and end of the school year showed excellent progress in every important category including reading, language arts, math, social science, and use of resources," Baner said. "We were very pleased with these results and we hope this year's freshmen will do as well."

Asked whether these scores could be compared with previous years, Baner said similar tests were not administered to students in previous programs, so no comparison could be made.

Questioned as to whether freshmen could be assigned to traditional classes instead of the freshman studies program, Baner said such assignments could be made at the end of the first semester. "Next year, we may open more options to freshmen before the second semester," he added.

One parent asked how the broad topics covered in the freshman studies program are listed on student grade transcripts. Topics in the program include communication, the family, cities and natural environment.

PAUL KERN, principal, said the freshman studies topics are listed by course content, giving the student credit for English, science and other academic material covered. The principal added that he has not heard of any case of a student who has transferred to another school in mid-year not receiving full credit for his work at Stevenson.

In answer to a question on the performance of last year's freshmen in current sophomore math classes, Kern said about 210 students are taking algebra or geometry while 70 did not elect to continue in math.

Schaumburg parks employ may face kickback charge

by PAT GERLACH

The Schaumburg Park District has been touched by a county investigation of bribes allegedly offered to municipal officials by chemical suppliers.

A park district employee may be indicted by a Cook County Grand Jury within the next week, according to sources in State's Atty. Bernard Carey's office.

The employee is one of as many as 24 public officials in at least 10 suburban communities, including the Village of Schaumburg, who could face county charges of bribery, official misconduct and conflict of interest in connection with kickbacks from chemical purchases.

PARK PURCHASES from United Laboratories and Precision Laboratories were confirmed late yesterday by Paul Derda, director of parks and recreation.

Derda also confirmed that representatives of the State's Attorney's office have recently contacted one of his employees.

"Neither the park board members nor I were aware of this in any way," Derda said.

Sources have indicated that records of various chemical companies including United and Precision, as well as Misco International, Wheeling, Madison Chemicals, Franklin Park; Cole Chemical, St. Louis; National Chemsearch, Irving, Tex., and several others have been subpoenaed.

BOTH DERDA and Mayor Robert O. Atcher say their records have not been

by LYNN ASINOF

The Franklin Boulevard Community Hospital has applied for state approval for a proposed satellite branch to be built south of Wheeling on Schoenbeck Road.

Hospital consultant Norman Davis said he hopes the project will be considered at the April meeting of the state hospital licensing board.

"If we don't get it in this April, it's going to be much tougher for us," Davis said. "The feeling in the state is that we don't need any more hospitals. I'd say our hopes are based on April."

Davis said he expects to be notified in the next few weeks whether the proposed satellite facility will be on the licensing board's agenda for April 10. He said consideration of the matter depends on whether Franklin Boulevard has provided all the necessary information.

"We've sent the application, and they'll go over that application and check it," Davis said. "They go over that thing with a fine tooth comb. We have to have everything to their satisfaction."

THE CONSULTANT said the application consists of "a bunch of questions" including who will be on the hospital board, financing, construction costs and location. More information will probably have to be provided on the proposed hospital site and zoning, according to Davis.

The hospital is planning to build the facility just south of Wheeling on the east side of Schoenbeck Road. Some of the site negotiations have been completed while others are continuing. Since not all of the land under consideration touches Wheeling boundaries, there is some question whether the hospital will be located in Wheeling.

Davis said he is hoping that some representatives from the community will speak in favor of the satellite branch at the licensing board meeting. "Sometimes it's a good idea to have representatives of the community there," he said.

According to Davis, the licensing board usually votes on a project the same day it is considered. "Ordinarily if your application is in line, if you've got the financing and if you've got the organization to run a hospital, then they approve," he said.

For the most part, the licensing board meeting consists of a presentation, questions and answers, Davis said.

THE NEXT hospital licensing board meeting is not until summer, since the board meets only four times a year. Davis said that if Franklin Boulevard has to wait until the next meeting, opposition will become stiffer.

The consultant noted that at the last meeting the licensing board delayed action on several hospitals, indicating some change in attitude toward the construction of more hospitals.

subpoenaed, but Atcher said the State's Attorney's office requested a list of vendors several months ago.

Village records indicate regular purchases of chemicals and cleaning supplies averaging about $1,000 per month from United Chemicals, and smaller, less frequent payouts to Madison Chemicals from early 1970 through mid-1973.

Last week J. C. Smith, village supt. of public works, said he took "gimmicks," including fountain pens and pencils from suppliers but said he had never accepted "anything big."

OFFICIAL SOURCES said there will be no immediate indictments in Hoffman Estates even though records indicate small purchases from several of the companies involved between 1969 and 1973. Those purchases averaged between $500 and $600 per year.

Local Dem head Nat Leighton: 'It's time to take over party reins'

by BOB LAHEY

For several years, Nathaniel Leighton of Arlington Heights has conducted a "shadow cabinet" of the Democratic Party in Wheeling Township.

Leighton and his organization, the Independent Democratic Coalition of Wheeling Township, want to come out of the shadows now.

Leighton believes that the time has come for them to take over the regular Democratic organization of the township, and so he is challenging incumbent committeeman Donald Norman for the top spot in the party.

The Coalition was organized formally in 1970, but Leighton says the work of the group dates back to the 1950s, when he and others, as independents, worked with former township committeeman James Stavros in support of specific candidates like Sen. Paul Douglas and State Rep. Eugenia Chapman of Arlington Heights.

LEIGHTON, HOWEVER, never joined the Democratic organization. He says today that he never signed up because he believed that Stavros ran the organization like a Chicago-machine ward organization, and he didn't care for such tactics.

He still does not belong to the organization, because he feels that the organization under former committeeman James L. McCabe, and recently appointed committeeman Donald L. Norman, has been "more of the same."

Leighton quickly offers that "I have no knowledge of any influence that Stavros (currently under indictment for extortion in the village of Wheeling) has anywhere." He also volunteers that he knows of nothing to connect Stavros with his successors, McCabe and Norman.

The point of the election, he says, is not what the organization has been in the past, but whether he or Norman best represent the viewpoint of the majority of the members of their party in the township. Leighton clearly believes that he does.

by BOB CASEY

"I'm proud to be a Democratic committeeman," said Donald Norman. "I'm happier than I've ever been in my whole life because I'm doing what I enjoy doing."

Norman, an Arlington Heights attorney, was elected head of the Wheeling Township Regular Democratic Organization last August, succeeding former committeeman James McCabe, who resigned a month earlier.

Faced with an independent challenge to his reelection, Norman emphasizes changes he said are being made to attract independent Democrats who have objected to the organizational style of the party in Wheeling Township.

"I consider all Democrats good Democrats who support somebody in the Democratic Party in this township," he said. Of his opponent, Nathaniel Leighton, Norman said: "Frankly, I wish Nat would come home."

"I CONSIDER him to be a fine, moral person having a fine, moral family... I do not want to hear anything bad said about him ever at any time," he said.

The issues in the committeeman election, according to Norman, are familiarity with the job and experience. He is just as eager as anyone, Norman indicated, to broaden the party appeal.

"I will do my utmost to serve all Democrats in the township. Just because you can only support one man or one issue," he said, "that should be no reason to avoid party activity. 'I say come in,' he said."

Norman, who unsuccessfully opposed McCabe for the committeeman post in 1967, said he was "not satisfied with the organization as it was tendered to me." For one thing, he said, there were no active independents.

And "some precinct captains whose names I saw but I never saw their faces and I still don't know them." New captains have been added to most of their precincts and in one instance, Norman said a precinct captain was removed.

ANOTHER PROBLEM, he said, is the concentration of Democratic strength in the Village of Wheeling and the lack of

Two Arlington Heights residents are running for the Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman post in Tuesday's primary election. Donald Norman, the incumbent, is an attorney and prosecutor for the Village of Wheeling. Nathaniel Leighton, the challenger, is personnel manager for an industrial firm.

Nathaniel
Leighton

HIS VIEWPOINT is one which he sees as being shared by such "independent" — the regulars call it "maverick" — committeemen as Lynn Williams in New Trier Township, and Richard Mugallian in Palatine Township.

In a nutshell, that viewpoint is one generally in opposition to the management of the Democratic Party as practiced by Cook County Chairman Richard J. Daley.

Leighton sees the township organization as one which has reflected the Daley mode of operation.

"Our efforts have been to search out the new Democrats," he says, "and I believe we have contributed to the growth of the party here to the point where we have gained the majority."

Leighton vows an "open party" if he is elected committeeman and said he will ask his opponent in the primary to work with him to increase its strength.

Donald

party activity in other township communities such as Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Buffalo Grove and Prospect Heights.

Norman has begun to "beef up" party efforts in the other areas, he said, predicting an increased vote there in Tuesday's Democratic primary.

He said the party now has captains in 108 of the township's 117 precincts and promised to release a list of their names when all precincts are finally staffed. To do so beforehand, Norman said, would cause embarrassment to the organization if party officials downtown saw a list indicating that some precincts aren't being manned.

Norman refused to comment on the federal indictments of James Stavros, Democratic committeeman from 1956 to 1967 who picked McCabe as his successor over the objections of Norman. Stavros used his organization to gain control of village government Wheeling during the 1960s. He has been charged with 10 counts of extortion and conspiracy in connection with shakedowns of developers and businessmen in the village.

BECAUSE HE IS an attorney, Norman said he can't make any comment on the allegations against Stavros and five men indicted with him. At one point in an interview Norman denied that the Democratic organization controls Wheeling village government but he admitted he got his current job as village prosecutor on the recommendation of Stavros.

1st District: the Democrats

Dorothy Henehan:

'Average housewife' running because

by RICH HONACK

Dorothy Henehan is just an "average housewife with an interest in politics."

She says she is running as one of three Democratic candidates for 1st District legislator because of dissatisfaction with current representatives. "I feel the 1st District has been overlooked and there has been no representation of the western part of the district," she said.

Mrs. Henehan, 1901 Robin Crest Ln., Glenview, believes the current district representatives have taken no interest in the problems of the people they represent. She says the current Democrats in the district are nothing more than errand boys from Chicago Mayor Richard Daley.

"If the mayor says we need it — they get it."

When asked, however, for specific instances of this happening, Mrs. Henehan had none. She said she "could not give specifics, but knows it's going on."

kind of drug legislation that would cut the flow of drugs in local schools.

SHE ALSO CALLED for new legislation on zoning. "The state should lay down zoning laws that the local villages would have to adopt. We need good state zoning. This type of zoning would do away with the teneament look that is becoming a familiar sight in the district."

Asked about the building boom in Wheeling and Buffalo Grove, which makes up the western part of the district she hopes to represent, Mrs. Henehan was not familiar with any of the problems. She was also unfamiliar with flooding problems in these two towns.

"I don't know that much about the Northwest suburbs that are in our district, mainly because we don't get their news in Glenview," she said. "I know they have growing pains."

On the subject of the RTA, Mrs. Henehan said, "We need it. It's a must. Let's take it now and worry about changing it later. Illinois should make every use of federal funds available and put them into the RTA. We need it and I'm firmly for it."

THE ONLY WOMAN candidate from the district said that she would also like to see a bus system that would run between all the suburbs and Chicago. "A committee should be set up to say how and why money is being spent. This committee could then make allowances to the needed areas. We need this very much," she said.

Another spot that Mrs. Henehan feels the Illinois General Assembly should regulate is in the building of hospitals. "They should study the situation. Places that may need a new hospital today may not need one five years from now. Hospitals should be made to show a need in the area in which they intend to build."

In extended interviews, Herald staff members and Democratic candidates for the 1st Congressional District discussed the issues of the upcoming primary election.

There are two spots open for the three candidates on the ballot for the fall election. Running for those two openings are incumbent Harold Katz of Glenview, and newcomer Herb Sirott of Arlington Heights and Dorothy Henehan of Glenview.

The 1st District includes Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, and a portion of Arlington Heights.

On the subject of narcotics legislation, she said the state should give the power to the police to arrest those involved and serve them with mandatory sentences.

"There should also be a system, whereby the person who turns in a pusher and gets a conviction should be rewarded with $25,000. People would turn in their mother for $25,000."

Mrs. Henehan said that she hasn't received any money for her campaign and therefore hasn't spent much on campaign fliers. She said that she had several teachers' groups and women's groups behind her and hoped that this would work in her favor.

Harold Katz:

Few issues in upcoming primary election, incumbent says

by LYNN ASINOF

State Rep. Harold Katz, D-Glenview, does not think there are many issues in the upcoming primary election for the Democratic nomination for the First District House seat.

"I've long felt that in the state legislature the quality of the candidate is more important than the issues," he said.

A member of the Illinois General Assembly since 1964, Katz said that this year the voters are concerned with inflation and the energy crisis. "Inflation is not a state issue. The energy crisis is not a state issue, except for transportation which is a state issue," he said.

KATZ, A PARTNER in the law firm of Katz and Friedman, has therefore taken a pragmatic approach to the upcoming primary election. He makes few promises about what he can accomplish if he is reelected, but talks freely about matters that are before the legislature.

For example, Katz is interested in the question of how to increase the control over land use in the state. He said this includes problems associated with zoning and flood control.

Harold

While recognizing both as areas of concern for residents in the 1st District, Katz said it is unlikely that the state will become more active in exerting control over land use. He said the courts may provide new ways of controlling such development.

KATZ, HOWEVER, is an advocate of regional planning for flood control. He said that the proposed Regional Transportation Authority (RTA) is the first step toward regional planning in the state. He said that if the RTA is successful, it may lay the groundwork for a regional approach to both flooding and crime control.

According to Katz, improved transportation is converting the entire Chicago area "into one region whether we like it or not."

In addition, Katz sees transportation as the solution to another problem — providing job opportunities outside of the inner city for minorities and other low-income groups. He representative said there are two ways to provide such opportunities. One is low-income housing in the suburbs, and the other is cheap and easy transportation to the suburban jobs.

"By and large, blacks do not want to move into these suburban areas," he said. "By and large, you don't want to live where you're not wanted."

He said that in order to avoid low-income housing, an improved transportation system must be developed to provide inner city residents with a way to get to jobs in the suburbs.

WHEN ASKED about the issue of official corruption, Katz said the matter is the same whether it involves local officials or national figures.

"I am appalled at corruption wherever it appears. I am both appalled that it exists and I am appalled that we have the kind of society that allows it to exist," he said.

In order to repair the situation, Katz said he favors strict disclosure laws that would require officials to make public their holdings. He also said he thinks campaigns would become less corrupting if television stations were required to provide free time to major state and national candidates.

In the coming election, Katz said he thinks the Democrats will gain control of the state legislature as a result of the Watergate scandal.

"Outside of a state penitentiary, I don't see how you can collect more immoral men than the White House has," he said.

Katz said a vote against the Republicans would reaffirm the health of the two-party system in this country.

Herbert Sirott:

Attorney finds 'little concern' among eastern district leaders

by BOB LAHEY

While Herbert Sirott did not enter the Democratic primary for the Illinois House of Representatives from the 1st Legislative District because he thought his portion of the district is not properly represented, the chances are he might feel that way now.

The young attorney lives in the northern tip of Arlington Heights, that part that forms the westernmost appendage of a district stretching all the way to Lake Michigan and snaking down the lakefront to snip off a corner of Evanston.

Though the Republican senator from the district lives nearly in the center, in Northfield, the two Republican and one Democratic representative are clustered along the lakefront in Glenview, Wilmette and Evanston.

Without finding fault with their representation of the voters throughout the district, Sirott has however found little concern among Democratic leaders in the east end of the district.

A POLITICAL newcomer, he says

Herbert Sirott

the only real help he has found among the four Democratic township committeemen in the district has come from Donald L. Norman, in his home territory of Wheeling Township.

"The other committeemen have been cordial, but I don't think they're really interested in me," said Sirott.

Nevertheless Sirott determined that "if ever you could elect two Democratic representatives in the 1st District, this should be the year."

HAVING HAD some experience with the Illinois General Assembly, Sirott, 34, says he believes "the legislature suits me." He formerly worked in the office of the state treasurer, under Adlai E. Stevenson III, specializing in estate and death taxes.

During that time he helped draft "perhaps 10 to 15 (legislative) bills." One reason that he would like to have a role in passing on legislation is that "The bills with real substance seemed to be the ones that get hung up."

Sirott now operates his own law firm in Chicago, and works as a part-time hearing officer for the secretary of state, handling cases under the securities law.

SIROTT SAYS HE does not wish to specialize in a narrow field of law. But his experience with the securities act, one designed to protect the individual investor, and his work in the treasurer's office with small estates and persons without lawyers fostered a desire to see legislation designed in the interest of the individuals.

Among the issues Sirott has been talking about:

• "I would work hard for a campaign funds disclosure law." But he has reservations about public financing of campaigns, which might have a tendency to entrench the existing parties, denying equal benefits to minority parties.

• Cumulative voting should be retained in Illinois, because it assures not only minority representation, but a "loyal opposition" to the party in power.

• He believes the Regional Transit Authority to be voted on Tuesday should be approved, then amended to correct deficiencies. While he is concerned about some provisions in the RTA proposed by the legislature, "I don't know how many bills could withstand the nit-picking" it has faced.

Beyond these things, Sirott has not concerned himself deeply with issues to this point. "In the primary I think the main issues should be the qualifications of the candidates."

He believes he has some, if he can get anybody to the east interested.

Teachers really like their jobs

by RICH HONACK

While visiting a restaurant in Buffalo Grove yesterday I happened to overhear a conversation between two guys who were discussing the recent decision to freeze teachers' salaries in dist. 96.

The conversation went like this:

"Hey Clyde, did you see where the Dist. 96 school board has decided to freeze its teachers pay at this year's positions for next year?"

Clyde: "No."

"Yeah, and the teachers aren't even protesting or marching or calling anybody any names. In fact, they stood behind the board's action, because, get this, they like their jobs and the way the district operates."

Clyde, choking on some coffee: "What?"

"Yeah. And to top that off they don't even negotiate for their salaries because they trust the judgment of their administrators and board. They say they would rather get paid less and see the present programs in the district continue, than increase salaries at the expense of the students."

Clyde: "These teachers are really understanding that there may be financial hurdles because of the assessment problems in Lake County? I find that hard to believe."

"No, Clyde. Believe it. It's right here in The paper."

Yes, while it is a little hard to believe, the Dist. 96 teachers are not complaining about the board passing a resolution asking for a freeze on salaries. For this they should be complimented.

In a day when almost everyone is worried about the dollar and getting a raise, these teachers have said "Let's worry about the kids and with a little luck we might get the money at a later date."

While I'm not saying that teachers should work just for the satisfaction of working, I am saying that all the negotiation and protesting for higher wages every year does get a little ridiculous.

Dist. 96 teachers have never negotiated and never protested in this area. Granted there are only two schools in operation in the district, but there are still teachers. Those teachers are still members of the profession, that has representatives screaming for more money at this time of year.

It seems that Dist. 96 teachers are a little more involved in the business of teaching. The new Individually Guided Education program has put them in that spot. It's a program that keeps the teachers extra hours and asks a little more than the normal, bus-recess-lunch room duties.

Judging from the reaction of parents and students in Lake County Buffalo Grove, it carries over into the home and into the general spirit of the community.

It also carries over into the administration and the school board. Anyone who has ever attended a Dist. 96 board meeting knowing it's not the normal "Let's get in here, sign the bills and get home by 9 o'clock" syndrome with which many boards are plagued.

Dist. 96 officials take the time to talk things out and try to get the best things at the best costs. It may mean that meetings run late, but the extra hours pay off.

Dist. 96 may no longer be a one-room school house district but the spirit is there and hopefully will continue as the area grows. Who knows, it may even spill over into other larger districts that surround the area.

Goals for 1970s approved by state

The Dist. 96 plan of goals for the 1970s has been approved by the state superintendent's office.

The plan, which includes over-all objectives for students in kindergarten through eighth grade, was developed during the last year by administrators and teachers with input from the community.

All school districts in Illinois were required for the first time to submit similar plans to the state superintendent's office. The plans are part of the information used by the state for the certification, recognition and evaluation of districts.

The lengthy report includes both educational and administrative goals the district hopes to achieve in the next seven years and states the actions necessary to achieve each objective.

Copies of the report are available in the administration office at Kildeer School in Long Grove.

Summer school survey ahead

Parents of Dist. 96 students will receive letters in the next few weeks surveying interest in summer school.

Sessions will be offered this year only if enough students plan to attend to make summer school self-supporting, according to Supt. William Hitzeman. Classes were not conducted last year because of lack of interest.

No formal curriculum has been outlined, Hitzeman said, but the district would probably be able to offer remedial academic classes, enrichment activities and sports programs.

Summer school fees will depend on the number of students indicating a desire to attend through the survey, the superintendent said.

District to apply for U.S. grants

The Dist. 96 school board Monday night voted to submit applications for three federal grants totaling $2800 to be used in the reading program next year and for the purchase of library materials.

District to ask more patrolmen

Dist. 96 Supt. William Hitzeman will ask for additional police patrolmen in the area of Twin Groves School to prevent children from cutting through yards of nearby residents.

The Buffalo Grove village board recently abandoned plans for a sidewalk from Twisted Oak Lane to Aspen Court to provide better access to the school. The sidewalk would have eliminated the need for children to cut through yards on their way to school.

The village, however, decided against the sidewalk because of opposition from adjacent homeowners who said it would damage property values, invade their privacy and create an overall hardship. The homeowners said they were unaware when they purchased their homes that an easement was beside the property.

Besides asking for additional police patrolmen, Hitzeman said he also plans to ask Chief of Police Harry Walsh to send a policeman to Twin Groves School to talk to children about respecting private property.

Mikva returns to Washington

by GREG KINCZEWSKI

Special to The Herald

WASHINGTON — Abner J. Mikva returned to the capital Wednesday to urge prompt congressional action on one of his old causes — the regulation of criminal records in computer data banks.

Mikva, a former Democratic congressman from Illinois, now running for the 10th District seat he lost in 1972, has long argued that these records are so sloppily kept and disseminated that they injure the innocent and hamper the rehabilitation of the guilty.

"The nation's law enforcement agencies clearly must have information and criminal records, but the right of privacy is seriously threatened when that information and those records are improperly compiled or used," Mikva testified Wednesday morning before Sen. Sam Ervin's, D-N.C., subcommittee on constitutional rights.

In the afternoon, Mikva was scheduled to discuss the upcoming election with such Democratic party leaders as Speaker of the House Carl Albert of Oklahoma and Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine.

THE ERVIN subcommittee is studying two different plans — one written by the Justice Department, the other by Ervin.

Both bills deal with the 21 million arrest records and 450,000 computerized criminal histories in federal data banks. This information is available by design to state and local police and by default to private and public agencies outside the law enforcement field.

Although the bills differ on matters of detail and stringency, they both demand accurate, timely and complete records that individuals can review and correct to insure that computer or human error hasn't distorted them.

They also agree that nonlaw enforcement agencies, such as employment, credit and insurance agencies, should not have unlimited access to criminal information because it interferes with the rehabilitation of convicts.

THE BILLS, however, take very different stands in two important areas and Mikva supports the Ervin version in both instances.

The Justice Department would allow the attorney general to oversee the data bank operation while the Ervin approach would put an independent federal-state-private board in charge.

"Too often S. 2964 (the Justice Department bill) leaves important legislative judgments to the discretion of future Attorneys General. We have learned that Attorneys General can be indiscrete," Mikva said.

The Justice Department bill would also allow criminal background data — which often contains rumors, allegations and gossip, not fact — be distributed to criminal justice agencies. The Ervin bill would not allow such data to even be in the computer.

"Input should be restricted to information about criminal conduct. There is no justification for inclusion of political views, activities or sexual conduct, so long as violations of the criminal law are not involved," Mikva said.

"THE PURPOSE of such assistance is to record the criminal histories of the individual involved. The only clearly relevant data is the fact of arrest, disposition of the charge, and any subsequent history of imprisonment, probation and parole," he added.

Ervin, who advised Mikva when the former congressman was preparing a similar bill in 1972, thanked Mikva for his support, but admitted that both his and the Justice Department's bills will probably undergo considerable modification before either becomes law.

Abner Mikva

"Legislators have to be pragmatic to get votes and the President's signature, so it's likely the final bill won't be as strong as you and I would like," Ervin told Mikva.

Chances are good that some version of the bill will emerge this session because of the cooperation so far between Ervin, the Justice Department and Ervin's Republican counterpart, Sen. Roman Hruska of Nebraska.

IN THE PAST, this team has ushered through Congress the Criminal Justice Act of 1964, the Bail Reform Act of 1966 and the Criminal Justice Act Amendment of 1970.

At the moment, however, no one is sure how President Nixon views the bills. Although the President called for a new set of privacy standards in his State of the Union message, he did not mention any specifics.

His FBI director, Clarence Kelley, opposes a provision of the bills which would seal criminal records after seven years following release from custody in felonies, and five years in misdemeanors.

Kelly said local and state police fear this would inhibit them from tracking down leads on criminal suspects.

Mikva disagrees, arguing that police will still be able to check their own records and contact other departments — they just won't be able to use the information formerly in the federal data bank. Police efficiency would suffer, but personal privacy would be enhanced.

Ervin summed up this point of view when he told Kelley, "... this country wasn't based on the idea of efficiency so much. It was based on the idea that power be diffused."

'Julius Caesar' ushers in Ides

Fourth-, fifth- and sixth-grade students at Hawthorne School will mark the Ides of March, Friday, by presenting an adaptation of the play "Julius Caesar" by William Shakespeare.

Actors and actresses portraying main characters will be Peter Schneider, Caesar; Joey Beck, Brutus; Tim Rieb, Cassius; Doug Olson, Mark Antony; David Sutherland, Casca; Debbie Van Cleave, Portia; Maria Lombardi, Calpurnia, and Peter Noonan, soothsayer.

The Ides of March celebration culminates a recent study of all aspects of Roman civilization.

Kilmer chess tournament slated

A group of 123 boys and girls are entered in the third annual Kilmer chess tournament scheduled to begin Monday. They range in age from kindergarten through sixth grade.

The tournament has grown each year with 79 entrants in 1972 and 111 entrants last year.

Matches in the single elimination tournament will be played in the school learning center during the lunch hour. The meet will finish about May 3 and trophies will be awarded to the top four contestants.

Norman Geske, principal of Kilmer School, and Dave Menzer, teacher, will act as judges and supervise play.

Hawthorne pupils study Japan

For the past two weeks, first graders in Barbara Elder's class at Hawthorne School have been studying the family life, customs, homes and schools of Japanese as a social studies activity.

The children participated in a writing lesson on the Japanese character alphabet, using paint and brushes to draw the intricate picture-words.

They celebrated "boy's day" by making traditional Japanese fish kites from bamboo and tissue paper. On "girl's day," the girls brought their favorite dolls to school and prepared a display according to the Japanese tradition.

Another art activity centered around origami, the art of Japanese paper folding. Each child created his own paper seagull and several students attempted to make paper balls out of folded paper.

Richard Shibata, whose son Hiroshi, is a member of Mrs. Elder's class, visited the school to tell the children about his homeland. He also showed the students how to write several salutations and their names in Japanese.

Culminating the study of Japan, the children participate in a Japanese dinner. With chopsticks in hand, they sampled Japanese vegetables, noodles, rice and hot tea.

Ellinwood Street garage opponents seek new location

Opponents of the proposed Ellinwood Street parking garage are preparing new strategy aimed at changing the location of the structure.

The garage, which is part of the proposed downtown redevelopment project, has been the target of some criticism since it was first proposed, but it has drawn increasing fire in recent weeks.

It is expected that a number of aldermen plan to raise objections to an agreement that has been negotiated between the city and the developers of the Superblock office and retail complex.

Mayor Hebert Behrel said he intends to call a meeting on March 25 so that all of the aldermen discuss the proposed agreement. He said he expected considerable debate on the issue.

BEHREL HAS BEEN negotiating with officials of the Des Plaines Mall Corp., the Des Plaines Tomorrow Corp. and Spiegel Bros. Corp. on a number of issues including the exchange of city-owned land along Center Street for right-of-way along Prairie Street, and a rental agreement for 406 spaces in the parking garage.

The developer has promised to lease the parking space in the proposed garage for tenants in the $12 million complex. Funds derived from the rental fees would be used to pay off revenue bonds sold to finance the construction of the garage.

Behrel said recently that the proposed agreement calls for the developer to pay $20 per month per space.

SEVERAL ALDERMEN said they believe the lease agreement should call for a monthly rental charge closer to $30 per month.

They contend the cost of the garage and interest on the bonds for 30 years will cost about $4.5 million rather than the $3 million estimated by the city.

While the meeting to discuss the garage agreement is over a week away, Behrel said he also expects considerable discussion Monday over his pledge not to reappoint Richard Tabatt to the Des Plaines Environmental Commission.

Tabatt and several other members of the commission issued a report last week questioning the environmental impact of the Superblock on the downtown area.

BEHREL CHARGED that Tabatt and others were standing in the way of development of the downtown area. He also said the commission's report seemed to be part of the continuing effort by some aldermen to block construction of the Superblock building and related project.

Behrel named Ald. Gerald Meyer (7th) in particular as having a hand in the action. Meyer, who had served on the plan commission before being elected an alderman, denied that he was orchestrating the commission's plan.

Meyer, Ald. Carmen Sarlo (6th) and Ald. Spencer Chase (3rd) have consistently voted against all city council actions relating to redevelopment.

Schaumburg parks employee may face kickback charge

by PAT GERLACH

The Schaumburg Park District has been touched by a county investigation of bribes allegedly offered to municipal officials by chemical suppliers.

A park district employee may be indicted by a Cook County Grand Jury within the next week, according to sources in State's Atty. Bernard Carey's office.

The employee is one of as many as 24 public officials in at least 10 suburban communities, including the Village of Schaumburg, who could face county charges of bribery, official misconduct and conflict of interest in connection with kickbacks from chemical purchases.

PARK PURCHASES from United Laboratories and Precision Laboratories were confirmed late yesterday by Paul Derda, director of parks and recreation.

Derda also confirmed that representatives of the State's Attorney's office have recently contacted one of his employees.

"Neither the park board members nor I were aware of this in any way," Derda said.

Sources have indicated that records of various chemical companies including United and Precision, as well as Misco International, Wheeling, Madison Chemicals, Franklin Park, Cole Chemical, St. Louis, National Chemsearch, Irving, Tex., and several others have been subpoenaed.

BOTH DERDA and Mayor Robert O. Atcher say their records have not been subpoenaed, but Atcher said the State's Attorney's office requested a list of vendors several months ago.

Village records indicate regular purchases of chemicals and cleaning supplies averaging about $1,000 per month from United Chemicals, and smaller, less frequent payments to Madison Chemicals from early 1970 through mid-1973.

Last week J. C. Smith, village supt. of public works, said he took "gimmicks" of fountain pens and pencils from suppliers but said he had never accepted "anything big."

OFFICIAL SOURCES said there will be no immediate indictments in Hoffman Estates even though records indicate small purchases from several of the companies involved between 1969 and 1973. Those purchases averaged between $500 and $600 per year.

Alleged kickbacks in the form of merchandise certificates, cash or U.S. Savings Bonds to persons responsible for buying chemical supplies for villages, townships, schools and other tax-supported agencies have reportedly been confirmed by county officials.

In January, Ralph E. Wilkening, former Schaumburg Township highway commissioner, pleaded guilty to seven charges of official misconduct stemming from acceptance of merchandise certificates sent to him by a chemical company. He was subsequently fined $2,440 and received one year's probation on each of the charges, with the terms running concurrently.

Chicagoan pleads guilty to robbery; 5-year probation

A Chicago man was given five years' probation after pleading guilty to a robbery charge stemming from the holdup of a Des Plaines drive-in restaurant last January.

Henry Cellak, 25, entered his plea Tuesday in Niles branch of Cook County Circuit Court before Judge Anton Smigiel. Assistant State's Atty. Frank Nolan said a second charge of unlawful use of weapons brought against Cellak by Park Ridge police was dropped.

Cellak and an accomplice, Chester Kanafoski, 24, also of Chicago, were arrested in Park Ridge Jan. 10 after police said they robbed the Henry's Drive-in, Mannheim and Higgins roads.

Kanafoski, who is charged with armed robbery and unlawful use of a weapon also appeared in court yesterday but his case was ordered continued to next Tuesday in Niles because the results of a presentence investigation were not ready, said Nolan.

THE ROBBERY occurred when the two drove into the restaurant, ordered food, and Kanafoski struck up a conversation with a manager while Cellak returned to the car.

Kanafoski later showed the man he was wearing a pistol and demanded cash register money. The two then fled with $80 in cash.

A description of the getaway car was put out on police radios and Park Ridge police pulled the auto over after recognizing it from the dispatch.

It's all in the game

Fifth graders design their own as teaching aids for use in language, arts, science, other areas

by LINDA PUNCH

Most fifth grade teachers ask their students to write essays. North School's Terry Smith asks his youngsters to design games.

Smith's class has spent the past few weeks creating educational games to teach skills in language arts, science, health, social studies and math. Working with cardboard, construction paper, yarn and clay, the youngsters have devised a variety of games ranging from the "Energy Crisis" game to "Math Spree."

"I asked them to design the games as part of a language arts assignment," Smith said. "They have to make up an educational game appropriate for students in fourth through sixth grade with directions the kids can follow without help."

The fifth grade teacher said the assignment combines a variety of skills including creative writing and direction following. Each youngster is responsible for researching the area he covers in the game.

THE GAMES are evaluated orally by the class with the students telling what they learned and how hard the game was to follow.

"The ultimate plan is to put the games in the IMC (Instructional Materials Center) for two or three weeks for other classes," Smith said. "We'll either leave them on permanent file in the IMC or keep them in the room."

Game topics range from basic math and science skills to current events. In the "Energy Crisis" game, contestants draw "crisis cards" with questions such as "why is there an energy crisis?" and "what did Nixon say to put the heater degrees on?" The player gets two points for each correct answer.

THE "FAMOUS PEOPLE" game asks contestants to read a story on a famous person and race each other to answer questions. Players are awarded points for their comprehension and speed with scores ranging from "know nothing" to "genius."

In "Racing Math," game players draw "Challenge Cards" with multiplication and division problems. The "Language Game" asks questions such as "What is the adjective in the sentence 'Today is a nice day.'"

In the "Shop For Science" game, players work their way through a shopping center answering questions on plants, the human body, chemistry and the senses.

Directions vary from the ultra-complicated — involving a combination of spinners, "zap cards" and dice — to the simple — the drawing of a card.

GAME BOARDS also differ with variations on Monopoly, Scrabble, Bingo and Tic-tac-toe. One youngster even devised a Sears Tower board for a game on pollution.

Smith said he is amazed at the number of games turned out by his students.

"I always wondered how Milton Bradley came out with so many games — these kids just whiz them out," he said. "I think their games are just as much fun and creative as the ones made by companies."

Same firm likely to do soil tests

The company that conducted the first set of soil tests at the Maryville Academy grounds probably will take the next soil borings, which have been ordered by the Illinois Capital Development Board.

Dist. 26 Supt. John Fridlund said Fred Knocke of the ICDB indicated to him that Allied Soil Mechanics Co. of Naperville, would probably be hired again to conduct the new soil tests. Knocke was unavailable in his Springfield office Tuesday to confirm the report.

The tests, the third to be taken at the site at Gregory Street and River Road in Des Plaines, were ordered last Thursday after Knocke made an on-site inspection of the Maryville grounds.

Original borings made by the Naperville firm were taken directly over the Feehanville Ditch, an area of excessive landfill. These results were used by the ICDB to declare the site unbuildable.

DIST 26 OFFICIALS are hoping, however, this new set of tests will confirm the findings of the second borings samples that showed the land suitable for building. Those tests were taken by the Testing Services Corp. of Wheaton.

Tests taken by the Wheaton firm, however, were made in the southeast portion of the site where there is less landfill.

In view of the findings of the second soil tests, which were commissioned by the school board, the ICDB agreed to review its ruling and Knocke was sent to look at the site.

Knocke said the ICDB cannot allow construction on the site without conducting its own soil tests on the land.

THE CHICAGO Archdiocese, which owns the Maryville property, agreed to shift the proposed five-acre building site 450 feet to the east to place it in an area of the least amount of landfill. Knocke said this move is another reason new soil tests are needed.

Knocke said last week it will probably be another two weeks to a month before any definite decision is made on the Maryville site.

It seems likely that the longer length of time will be the case since Knocke's ICDB office in Springfield said Tuesday he will be out of his office for two weeks on project work.

Area police to take defensive driving course here

Policemen from 15 north and northwest suburban departments will begin a two-day course in defensive driving today to be taught by Des Plaines police driving instructors.

The 16-hour lecture course is designed to teach police how to instruct the National Safety Council-sponsored program in their own communities.

Lt. James Scheskie and Off. Robert Neil of Des Plaines police will moderate the sessions. Twenty-one officers from patrolmen on up to chiefs will take the course.

Rolling Meadows Police said Capt.

Robert Evans and Traffic Supt. Off. Andrew Herbert will represent their department.

WHEELING POLICE Lt. Robert Nelson may also attend, while Arlington Heights police are also expected to send an officer. Scheskie said the Skokie Schiller Park and Streamwood Police Departments will be represented.

"We hope they will offer the course to people in their own communities," said Scheskie, who along with Neil has taught defensive driving techniques to nearly 1,000 persons in three years.

During the classes, to be conducted at the Des Plaines Public Works garage, Algonquin and Campground roads, Neil said the officers will take a modified version of the driving course and will learn instruction techniques Friday.

SCHESKIE SAID the idea for passing instructional methods onto other departments came during discussion of the plan at meetings of police chiefs from north and northwest suburban departments last December and February.

In addition to periodic courses offered to citizens, Scheskie and Neil are teaching defensive driving to employees of the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA).

Some 60 FAA workers recently completed the course and another 60 are currently taking in the program in accordance with regulations requiring employees driving government vehicles to take the driving course.

Scheskie said such programs have been a factor in an overall 21 per cent decrease in injury accidents in Des Plaines for 1973 as compared with totals for 1972. He added another course may be offered to Des Plaines residents in April.

Mikva returns to Washington

by GREG KINCZEWSKI

Special to The Herald

WASHINGTON — Abner J. Mikva returned to the capital Wednesday to urge prompt congressional action on one of his old causes — the regulation of criminal records in computer data banks.

Mikva, a former Democratic congressman from Illinois, now running for the 10th District seat he lost in 1972, has long argued that these records are so stoppily kept and disseminated that they injure the innocent and hamper the rehabilitation of the guilty.

"The nation's law enforcement agencies clearly must have information and criminal records, but the right of privacy is seriously threatened when that information and those records are improperly compiled or used," Mikva testified Wednesday morning before Sen. Sam Ervin's, D-N.C., subcommittee on constitutional rights.

In the afternoon, Mikva was scheduled to discuss the upcoming election with such Democratic party leaders as Speaker of the House Carl Albert of Oklahoma and Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine.

THE ERVIN subcommittee is studying two different plans — one written by the Justice Department, the other by Ervin.

Both bills deal with the 21 million arrest records and 450,000 computerized criminal histories in federal data banks. This information is available by design to state and local police and by default to private and public agencies outside the law enforcement field.

Although the bills differ on matters of detail and stringency, they both demand accurate, timely and complete records that individuals can review and correct to insure that computer or human error hasn't distorted them.

They also agree that nonlaw enforcement agencies, such as employment, credit and insurance agencies, should not have unlimited access to criminal information because it interferes with the rehabilitation of convicts.

THE BILLS, however, take very different stands in two important areas and Mikva supports the Ervin version in both instances.

The Justice Department would allow the attorney general to oversee the data bank operation while the Ervin approach would put an independent federal-state-private board in charge.

"Too often S. 2904 (the Justice Department bill) leaves important legislative judgments to the discretion of future Attorneys General. We have learned that Attorneys General can be indiscrete," Mikva said.

The Justice Department bill would also allow criminal background data — which often contains rumors, allegations and gossip, not fact — be distributed to criminal justice agencies. The Ervin bill would not allow such data to even be in the computer.

"Input should be restricted to information about criminal conduct. There is no justification for inclusion of political views, activities or sexual conduct, so long as violations of the criminal law are not involved," Mikva said.

"THE PURPOSE of such assistance is to record the criminal histories of the individual involved. The only clearly relevant data is the fact of arrest, disposition of the charge, and any subsequent history of imprisonment, probation and parole," he added.

Ervin, who advised Mikva when the former congressman was preparing a similar bill in 1972, thanked Mikva for his support, but admitted that both his and the Justice Department's bills will probably undergo considerable modification before either becomes law.

"Legislators have to be pragmatic to get votes and the President's signature, so it's likely the final bill won't be as strong as you and I would like," Ervin told Mikva.

Chances are good that some version of the bill will emerge this session because of the cooperation so far between Ervin, the Justice Department and Ervin's Republican counterpart, Sen. Roman Hruska of Nebraska.

IN THE PAST, this team has ushered through Congress the Criminal Justice Act of 1964, the Bail Reform Act of 1966 and the Criminal Justice Act Amendment of 1970.

At the moment, however, no one is sure how President Nixon views the bills. Although the President called for a new set of privacy standards in his State of the Union message, he did not mention any specifics.

His FBI director, Clarence Kelley, opposes a provision of the bills which would seal a criminal record after seven years following release from custody in felonies, and five years in misdemeanors.

Kelly said local and state police fear this would inhibit them from tracking down leads on criminal suspects.

Mikva disagrees, arguing that police will still be able to check their own records and contact other departments — they just won't be able to use the information formerly in the federal data bank. Police efficiency would suffer, but personal privacy would be enhanced.

Storage man cometh

Is your house running out of room? Dave's idea may be answer to space shortage

by STEVE NOVICK

If your neighbor isn't talking to you because you have a behemoth camper parked in your driveway and he thinks it is ugly out there.

If you tend to agree with him. If you have lawn equipment, assorted junk and out of season clothes taking up space in your house where you'd like to put a pool table...

Dave Faestel might have the answer to your problem.

FOR THE HOUSE over run with so much hobby equipment that the living room is furnished with a work bench and a sewing table, Faestel might have an alternative.

And, the traveling salesman storing his wad of samples in the baby's nursery might be able to get them out of there if the local entrepreneur sees his plans become reality.

Faestel, 29, lives in Hoffman Estates and wants to build a warehouse-type building where people in the surrounding area can rent space cheap to store things when they don't need them.

The 46,000-square-foot building, proposed at the Barrington Square Park for Industry, Barrington and Hassell roads, is now up for consideration by the village's zoning board.

FAESTEL SAID there will be closed off areas, between 5-by-10 and 20-by-30 feet, available at costs now anticipated at 10 to 20 cents per square-foot per month.

People renting the space will lease it on a one-month, six-month or one-year basis. Each area will be enclosed with ribbed steel siding. The renter will have his own key to the locker area and will have access between 7 a.m. and 9 p.m. each day. There will also be 24-hour security.

The "self-storage facility" was successfully initiated in the southwest section of the country and has since spread across the land, said Faestel. They are operating or under construction in 75 locations throughout the United States, he added.

He personally plans five locations in the Chicago Metropolitan area and says there is another firm planning a self-storage facility in the northern suburbs.

WILL HE BE A success? To indicate he knows what he is doing, Faestel says he has four years experience in real estate sales and management during which he did $76 million in business.

Automobiles, furniture, boats, snowmobiles, camping equipment, business records, and small business inventories are just a few of the items he lists as acceptable for storage at the place he plans to build.

Space has been rented in facilities of this type as meeting area for Scout groups too, he added.

Anything combustible, explosives and unlawful items will be prohibited, he emphasized.

FAESTEL SAID the self-storage building isn't an asset because "it cleans up the community." There isn't a need for people to cover the open space around their house or apartment with sheds and vehicles, the whole area can become more attractive, he said.

"And the cost is lower than anyone else can provide," he said about alternatives... buying storage sheds from Sears, building an addition onto the house, or using storage space available from moving van lines.

Officials in the village are looking for a zoning category under which the self-storage facility can be classified.

"It doesn't exist," Bob Valentino, zoning board chairman said this week. Officials also want to see marketing data showing the proposal will be successful.

ANOTHER CONCERN is the limited amount of space in Hoffman Estates zoned for industry. Officials want to know what advantages the storage facility will bring compared to the tax dollars and jobs manufacturing businesses provide.

Faestel is researching these questions further and will report March 19, when the zoning board continues its hearing at 8 p.m. in the municipal building, 1200 N. Gannon Dr.

Stavros faces $1,000 fine on pool count

James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, faces a possible $1,000 fine for construction of a swimming pool at his Northbrook home without a county building permit.

Stavros paid a $25 county permit department penalty and $123 in permit costs March 1 after he was cited by the Cook County Department of Building and Zoning for failure to obtain a permit.

"We've decided to proceed further and go to court to seek a fine to protect the office... if someone is electrocuted in the pool," Asst. State's Atty. John Lee said yesterday. "I'll probably ask for a $1,000 fine."

A Circuit Court hearing on the charges is scheduled April 3.

LEE SAID HE will seek affidavits from firms that constructed the pool in the back yard of Stavros' home at 3705 Whirlaway Dr., unincorporated Northbrook. If the firms refuse or if the statements "show that something is wrong in the construction," Lee will seek a larger fine. Maximum penalty on the misdemeanor charge is a $200 per day fine or six months in jail.

County officials said the pool will be inspected before the hearing. "The biggest problem is telling if the electrical and plumbing work meet specifications. Once a pool is complete, it's impossible to tell," Lee said.

One Circuit Court judge ordered destruction of a pool last year that was built without county inspection, Lee said.

Tools reported stolen

Burglars entered the garage of Richard Iker, 1723 Cora St., and stole a set of tools valued at $200, said Des Plaines police yesterday.

According to reports, Iker noticed a white pickup truck drive away from his garage down an alley Monday morning and discovered the tools missing. The garage was unlocked at the time, said police.

Arrest 2 in Florida

in truck stolen here

Two 16-year-old youths were in custody by authorities near Melbourne, Fla., after they were reportedly picked up in a truck stolen from a Des Plaines auto dealer.

Police would not identify the juveniles, from Schiller Park and Chicago, but said they admitted taking the truck, a 1973 camper van, from Northwest Dodge, 1439 Lee St.

According to reports, the pair was stopped on a traffic violation Monday by Florida State Police who later traced the truck as having been stolen from Northwest Dodge.

Representatives from Northwest Dodge told police they had no idea how or exactly when the truck was stolen.

Sex education radio topic

FIREMEN directed water at the burning roof of an apartment at the Philippe complex in Palatine township yesterday where fire destroyed 10 units and left several families homeless. Fire officials had no immediate damage estimate, but personal property losses are expected to be high. No one was injured in the afternoon fire.

Fire guts 2-story apartment project

by TONI GINETTI

Fire gutted a two-story apartment building yesterday afternoon in unincorporated Palatine Township, causing extensive property damage and leaving several families homeless.

The blaze started in the basement of the 10-unit Philippe Apartments at 2707 Rohlwing Rd. just south of Campbell Street. No one was reported injured.

No immediate damage estimate was available, but Palatine Fire Chief Orville Helms said "damage will be extensive." Helms added state fire marshals had been called to investigate the cause.

The fire started at approximately 3:30 p.m. Joe Enochson, 2615 Rohlwing Rd., who resides in the building adjacent to the damaged building, called Rolling Meadows firemen after he saw smoke coming from the basement area.

"I was driving by and I saw smoke coming from the basement, so I called the fire department," Enochson said. He said Rolling Meadows firemen arrived within minutes of the call.

HELMES SAID THE Rolling Meadows department, located only blocks from the site of the fire, has an agreement that an engine from the city department will respond initially to fire calls in that unincorporated area.

Six engines and fire trucks from the Rolling Meadows, Palatine Rural and Schaumburg fire departments subsequently responded to the call.

Helms said all residents of the building had evacuated before firemen arrived. Several pets were feared trapped in the building, but were later found to be safe. A dog that had been trapped in one burning apartment survived.

Tenants left homeless by the blaze were notified by American Red Cross volunteers at the scene that shelter would be provided them for three days if the families had no place to stay.

MOST OF THE tenants lost all or most of their possessions in the smoke-filled, blackened apartments.

One tenant, Mrs. Laurie Huckin, said she was able to rescue a pet dog before the fire engulfed the building. "I was driving home on my way to pick up my son from nursery school in Palatine when I passed by and saw the fire," said Mrs. Huckin, who works at Northwest Community Hospital. "They let me go in there and get my dog."

Firemen, wearing oxygen masks, broke windows and tore a hole in the roof of the building as they fought for more than an hour to bring the blaze under control. Water hoses were aimed in the apartments and in the basement area to douse the fire.

Heavy smoke billowed out the roof and windows of the building and traveled through the first and second floor, blackening interior walls and destroying most of the apartments.

ROLLING MEADOWS Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty said the fire apparently started in the basement area and spread to the first and second floors.

There was an early unconfirmed report that an explosion was heard in the basement by one tenant just before the blaze broke out, but Helms said an exact cause would probably not be known until today.

He added he did not think a faulty washing machine started the fire, a report that had also been considered earlier.

The fire was the third in the past two years at the apartment site. Helms said two past fires were minor. The last was caused when fumes from a floor refinishing product being used in one of the first floor apartments in the other wing of the same building ignited a nearby gas heater.

THE FIRE APPARENTLY will renew attempts by homeowners living in unincorporated Palatine Township on Rohlwing Road immediately north of the apartments to annex to Rolling Meadows.

The homeowners have sought to annex to the city party to insure quick fire, ambulance and police service from the city departments located only blocks away, according to one homeowner, Robert Gorseger, 2207 S. Forest.

He said yesterday the Palatine Rural Fire Department took several minutes to respond to the call because of its distance from the area, but the Rolling Meadows department provided immediate aid.

"I've become quite concerned about this," he said. "We're in an area completely surrounded by Rolling Meadows, but when we've talked to the mayor (Roland J. Meyer) about this, he says we cannot be annexed because Ill. Rte. 53 is behind us, and that isn't part of Rolling Meadows."

He added Cook County Sheriff's Police did not get to the area until 20 minutes after the fire began.

Rolling Meadows police were on the scene almost immediately to provide traffic control until the county police arrived.

ROLLING MEADOWS Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty, standing on the second floor, helped direct firemen yesterday at the scene of the Philippe apartment fire. Ten apartments were destroyed at 2707 Rohlwing Road.

Equipment delays water, sewer bills

Water and sewer bill mailings have been delayed this month in Elk Grove Village and residents are calling the village hall to complain.

"It's not the lack of bills, but the worry that they may have to pay an overdue fine that's bothering them," said a clerk.

Finance Director George Coney said due to problems encountered in modernizing the billing equipment and a delay in receiving the newly-designed water bills, mailings have been delayed.

"There will be no late charges levied this month," said Coney. "The bills should be out shortly," he added.

In the future, bills should be out on time and residents will have 20 days in which to make timely payments, Coney said.

Dial-a-ride has 2 numbers

Elk Grove Village's 25-cent-a-ride Dial-A-Bus service has a new call number in addition to the one now in use and might get an additional bus. Riders can call 437-3769 or 593-9765 for service.

Elk Grove Village Trustee Nancy Vanderweel Tuesday told the board 108 people used the Dial-A-Ride bus in its first week of operation. "If this keeps up, we will be asked to give advice to the CTA and others," she quipped.

She said the dial-a-ride service is being well used by residents and demand is growing daily. Although the special ride service and commuter buses to Arlington Heights and Wood Dale stations are still on trial the trustees are considering expanding the dial-a-ride service.

"Residents have been begging for Saturday rides," said Trustee Vanderweel. At present the dial-a-ride service is available weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

We should discuss this further in committee but it certainly seems to be what our residents want," she said.

Mrs. Vanderweel said the Arlington Heights train station commuter bus had nine regular subscription passengers and 21 day ticket riders.

"The Wood Dale train station commuter bus will probably be discontinued next week because it has not had any customers," she added.

The transportation committee is considering scheduling a commuter bus to the Itasca Milwaukee Road Station instead of the Wood Dale station. "Time schedules will be available at the municipal building next week if the committee decides to start the Itasca run," said Mrs. Vanderweel.

Mrs. Vanderweel said the committee welcomes resident suggestions or comments about the bus service. People may call 439-3990.

Tools reported stolen

Burglars entered the garage of Richard Ilker, 1723 Cora St., and stole a set of tools valued at $200, said Des Plaines police yesterday.

According to reports, Ilker noticed a white pickup truck drive away from his garage down an alley Monday morning and discovered the tools missing. The garage was unlocked at the time, said police.

Two 'trailblazers' off to Indiana

Elk herd begins its move...

Moving day for a young elk brought a chance for a nap yesterday afternoon — but only after a tranquilizer dart put the young animal under.

Leaving the popular herd on Higgins Road yesterday were two young elk who were chosen to help begin a new herd in an Indiana state park. The entire herd will be moved late this year — but only down the road to a new pasture on the corner of Arlington Heights Road and Higgins to make way for a flood-retention basin.

Yesterday, forest preserve workers and wildlife experts moved in on the herd and selected a young male and female. One of the animals is said to be a direct descendant of the original herd, which came to the Northwest suburbs several decades ago.

The elk, sometimes known by their formal name of American Wapiti, didn't seem too concerned over the excitement. Forest preserve men say the herd is almost domestic, although the animals are big enough to hurt someone by accident.

For the young female, barely a year old, the trip meant getting stung with a tranquilizer dart in the rump and then a ride to greener grass and sweet water.

Dist. 214 wrapup

Drug discipline policy modified

Students who are caught in possession of illegal drugs in Dist. 214 high schools will no longer have to go to a doctor before they can return to school.

The board of education Monday agreed to eliminate the requirement that a student caught using or in possession of drugs in the school be suspended until he sees a doctor for a discussion of his drug problem.

The board took the action after Supt. Edward Gilbert told members the policy "is not really serving the purpose that we had in mind."

Because of the change, students found with drugs in the school will be suspended and their parents will be called in for a conference with the school principal. The change does not affect the board policy that students who sell or distribute drugs in school be expelled.

Sick pay for pregnant OKd

Pregnant teachers in High School Dist. 214 are now entitled to receive sick pay if their doctors certify they are unable to work.

The board approved a policy Monday which brings the district into compliance with a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision that pregnancy must be treated as an illness for the purposes of sick pay.

Under the policy, a pregnant woman may use her accumulated sick days and the district's sick-leave bank when her doctor says she cannot work because of pregnancy. The sick leave bank, set up by the board and Education Assn., allows a teacher to double the number of days she is normally entitled to.

Supt. Edward Gilbert said sick pay will not be available for teachers who choose to take a year's leave of absence to have their babies. Under board policy a woman can take the leave and retain her tenure and seniority in the district.

At the same time the board took the action on sick pay for pregnant teachers, it approved resignations from seven women who had taken maternity leave last year and who have decided not to return to work. Gilbert said, "I am not really sure what that means."

Parks can rent school site

The Prospect Heights Park District will be able to rent Dist. 214's ninth school site next year for $1 an acre — a possible total of $40 dollars.

The board Monday approved rental of the land, north of Camp McDonald Road and east of Wheeling Road. In the past the land, which may be used in the future for the district's ninth high school, has been rented to a private farmer.

Memorial Day May 30 here

The federal government, many businesses and banks may celebrate Memorial Day on May 27 this year, but High School Dist. 214 and the State of Illinois will celebrate it May 30.

The board changed the day for school closing in honor of Memorial Day from May 27 to May 30 because of action by the Illinois General Assembly changing the date. Schools are legally required to observe holidays declared by the legislature.

or six months in jail.

County officials said the pool will be inspected before the hearing. "The biggest problem is telling if the electrical and plumbing work meet specifications. Once a pool is complete, it's impossible to tell," Lee said.

One Circuit Court judge ordered destruction of a pool last year that was built without county inspection, Lee said.

Parking fees to pay off bonds

Village to sell $6 million in bonds to fund downtown parking garages

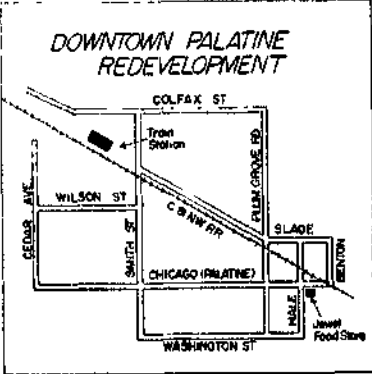

by JULIA BAUER

Palatine village officials are preparing to sell an estimated $6 million in revenue bonds to build multistory parking garages in downtown Palatine.

The bonds will be paid off with proceeds from parking fees, according to Palatine village Trustee James Shaw. No referendum or municipal bond issue will be needed to approve the garages.

The plan calls for the elimination of on-street parking in the downtown business district, replaced with pedestrian malls and parking on the fringe. That parking plan is the New Palatine Committee's top priority, committee members said yesterday at a press conference at Palatine National Bank.

Meeting for nearly three hours members of the New Palatine Committee — businessmen working on downtown redevelopment — hammered out boundaries for their study of the redevelopment, including the train station on Smith and Colfax streets, and the Jewel Osco grocery complex at Plum Grove Road and Washington Street.

IF NECESSARY zoning and financing is approved for the plans, ground could be broken for construction "within the calendar year 1974," said planner Will Battles.

Cost of the redevelopment, which will include specialty shops on a pedestrian mall, restaurants and a movie theater, high-rise apartments and eventually a new village hall, will cost between $50 million and $75 million.

April 9 is the committee's date to set down specifics for their plan, which was "greatly revised" in scope at Thursday's meeting, Battles said.

Possible single-family development has been ruled out in favor of 600 to 1,000 apartment units in high-rise buildings near downtown. Specific locations have not been set.

SHAW SAID THE committee's plans come very close to the village's concept of the downtown area.

"It's amazing how close it is. We left a hole and this fits right to it. There's no conflict at all," Shaw said.

The redevelopment is being handled by 11 downtown businessmen and bankers, and Shaw.

The fringes of the development will be geared to commuters who will be driving to the grocery store, train station or other "auto-oriented" business. Stores on the pedestrian mall will feature specialty items, and the entertainment area will be located north of the Chicago and Northwestern Ry. tracks.

"It's a much wider area than we began with. The commuters represent an economic force that we couldn't leave out," explained Lee Morrison, a member of the New Palatine executive committee and president of Palatine National Bank.

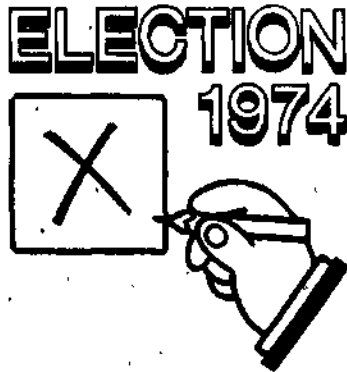

Some of the plans, particularly for parking, are being drawn with an eye on major apartment developments outside Palatine. Particular high-population areas will be near the Dundee Road-III. Route 53 intersection in the far northeastern corner of Palatine Township, and the vast Westbury housing development (formerly Howie-in-the-Hills) in Hoffman Estates west of Palatine.

People living in both of those areas will use Palatine's train station, Shaw said. The population of the township by 1990 is expected to be 120,000 he added, and Palatine's population is expected to double in that time.

The first public airing of the committee's plans is tentatively scheduled for April 6 in village hall. Details will also be presented at an upcoming village board meeting, but the date has not been set.

ROLLING MEADOWS Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty, standing on the second floor, helped direct firemen yesterday at the scene of the Philippe apartment fire. Ten apartments were destroyed at 2707 Rohlwing Road.

Residents evacuated from all 10 units

Fire guts two-story apartment building

by TONI GINETTI

Fire gutted a two-story apartment building yesterday afternoon in unincorporated Palatine Township, causing extensive property damage and leaving several families homeless.

The blaze started in the basement of the 10-unit Philippe Apartments at 2707 Rohlwing Rd. just south of Campbell Street. No one was reported injured.

No immediate damage estimate was available, but Palatine Fire Chief Orville Helms said "damage will be extensive." Helms added state fire marshals had been called to investigate the cause.

The fire started at approximately 3:30 p.m. Joe Enochson, 2615 Rohlwing Rd., who resides in the building adjacent to the damaged building, called Rolling Meadows firemen after he saw smoke coming from the basement area.

"I was driving by and I saw smoke coming from the basement, so I called the fire department," Enochson said. He said Rolling Meadows firemen arrived within minutes of the call.

HELMES SAID THE Rolling Meadows department, located only blocks from the site of the fire, has an agreement that an engine from the city department will respond initially to fire calls in that unincorporated area.

Six engines and fire trucks from the Rolling Meadows, Palatine Rural and Schaumburg fire departments subsequently responded to the call.

Helms said all residents of the building had evacuated before firemen arrived. Several pets were feared trapped in the building, but were later found to be safe. A dog that had been trapped in one burning apartment survived.

Tenants left homeless by the blaze were notified by American Red Cross volunteers at the scene that shelter would be provided them for three days if the families had no place to stay.

MOST OF THE tenants lost all or most of their possessions in the smoke-filled, blackened apartments.

One tenant, Mrs. Laurie Huckin, said she was able to rescue a pet dog before the fire engulfed the building. "I was driving home on my way to pick up my son from nursery school in Palatine when I passed by and saw the fire," said Mrs. Huckin, who works at Northwest Community Hospital. "They let me go in there and get my dog."

Firemen, wearing oxygen masks, broke windows and tore a hole in the roof of the building as they fought for more than an hour to bring the blaze under control. Water hoses were aimed in the apartments and in the basement area to douse the fire.

Heavy smoke billowed out the roof and windows of the building and traveled through the first and second floor, blackening interior walls and destroying most of the apartments.

ROLLING MEADOWS Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty said the fire apparently started in the basement area and spread to the first and second floors.

There was an early unconfirmed report that an explosion was heard in the basement by one tenant just before the blaze broke out, but Helms said an exact cause would probably not be known until today.

He added he did not think a faulty washing machine started the fire, a report that had also been considered earlier.

The fire was the third in the past two years at the apartment site. Helms said two past fires were minor. The last was caused when fumes from a floor refinishing product being used in one of the first floor apartments in the other wing of the same building ignited a nearby gas heater.

THE FIRE APPARENTLY will renew attempts by homeowners living in unincorporated Palatine Township on Rohlwing Road immediately north of the apartments to annex to Rolling Meadows.

The homeowners have sought to annex to the city partly to insure quick fire, ambulance and police service from the city departments located only blocks away, according to one homeowner, Robert Gorsegner, 2207 S. Forest.

He said yesterday the Palatine Rural Fire Department took several minutes to respond to the call because of its distance from the area, but the Rolling Meadows department provided immediate aid.

"I've become quite concerned about this," he said. "We're in an area completely surrounded by Rolling Meadows, but when we've talked to the mayor (Roland J. Meyer) about this, he says we cannot be annexed because Ill. Rte. 53 is behind us, and that isn't part of Rolling Meadows."

He added Cook County Sheriff's Police did not get to the area until 20 minutes after the fire began.

Rolling Meadows police were on the scene almost immediately to provide traffic control until the county police arrived.

For township committeemen

Peter J. Gerling:

'I would like to finish what I started'

by BOB LAHEY

Pete Gerling says he would like to finish what I started."

Gerling — it's Peter J. — refers to the 18 months he served as interim Democratic committeeman of Palatine Township before being defeated by the current incumbent, Richard J. Mugalian.

And Gerling charges that what he started is very similar to what Mugalian promised, but has failed to carry out in four years as committeeman.

Gerling complains that Mugalian promised to make the Palatine Township Democratic Organization one of wide-open participation. But he says that as committeeman, Mugalian used the post mostly to get himself elected to the Illinois House of Representatives, and is now attempting to hold onto it to expand his influence as a politician.

GERLING READILY identifies himself as an old-fashioned politician — he is often quoted for his remark, "You can't even run a factory without a boss." But, he says, Mugalian is trying to build his own machine in the guise of trying to eliminate the machine politics of the regular Cook County organization.

Nevertheless, he says that he would be cooperating with the incumbent today, instead of trying to unseat him, if Mugalian had carried out his promises as a committeeman.

One of those — which Mugalian made while running for the legislature — was that he would step aside in this election if a qualified successor could be found.

According to Gerling, he offered before filing for the post to help Mugalian find a successor who would be acceptable to both sides. "He told me, in effect, 'I'm going to be the committeeman,'" Gerling declares.

"I WOULD HAVE agreed to anybody who was a Democrat and an honest guy."

Having decided that Mugalian should be opposed, Gerling says he decided further to do it himself. "I'd like to finish what I started, to make a place in the party for all Democrats, to make a place for the young people and for women."

Gerling concedes that organizational work did not progress notably in his 18 months as committeeman, but he points out that in that brief tenure he was preoccupied with two elections — a presidential election and a township election.

He contends now that he has more time and that he has come around to the viewpoint that the committeeman should share the workload with an executive committee to encourage more people to get involved in the organization's work.

Richard A. Mugalian:

'Our organization works for people, not bosses'

by JOANN VAN WYE

Richard A. Mugalian has talked of stepping down as Democratic committeeman of Palatine Township for two years but his name will be back on the ballot in Tuesday's primary.

The problem he says — no "suitable successor."

The Chicago attorney announced during his 1972 campaign for a seat in the Illinois House of Representatives that if elected he would give up the committeeman post if another local party leader could be found. He was elected and two years later he is still searching for that party leader.

Mugalian's competition in March will be coming from Peter J. Gerling, the same man he wrestled control of the party away from four years ago.

AS COMMITTEEMAN, Mugalian says he has developed a volunteer and independent organization that "works for the people, not the political bosses."

"I am kind of a symbol of what we are doing here," said Mugalian, explaining that because of his name recognition it might be easier for him to beat back an attempt by the old-style politicians, represented by Gerling, to regain control of the organization.

Richard Mugalian

"I would still rather not have the obligation (of committeeman)," he says. But he is quick to add that he sees no conflict in holding both posts.

"I have the luxury of not having to go to any party leaders to ask for favors. I can be totally independent," he said. His campaigns for both posts are being kept free of the organization and any support from within is on an independent basis, he contends.

Instead of a monolithic system, Mugalian feels Palatine Township has an open organization where the legislators are free from political coercion.

SINCE TAKING OVER the top spot in the township democratic party Mugalian says he has:

- Opened the party to all interested persons.
- Rested decision-making power with a majority vote of the membership.
- Placed leadership in the hand of an elected board of directors.
- Kept open financial records.
- Made the local organization independent of the Cook County Central Committee.
- Eliminated the patronage system.

MUGALIAN says he has nothing against helping someone get a job and estimates he may have helped ten people find jobs while committeeman but always with the understanding there were no obligations. The alleged practice of patronage workers being required to give 2 per cent of their salaries to the committeeman and work in precincts was eliminated under Mugalian.

Ironically, Mugalian says, it's the patronage workers he helped free who are now ringing doorbells for his opponent.

"They figure if I am elected they still won't be fired but if they support me and Gerling is elected he may fire them," said Mugalian.

Bernard Pedersen:

'The organization has been successful'

by JULIA BAUER

Bernard Pedersen is going into Tuesday's Palatine Township Republican committeeman race with what he believes is one big thing in his favor — his record as committeeman for the past five years.

Pedersen is being challenged for the committeeman post by Anton Valukas. The incumbent has served as Palatine Township assessor since 1965, a job he sees as mostly a public service post. He also has his own Palatine Insurance firm.

"Basically, I think the Palatine Township Republican organization has been a very successful one. My record is a very successful one," Pedersen said of his committeeman job.

That record included election of an entire slate of party-backed officials to the township board and winning a five-to-two majority on the Palatine Village Board last year. The two minority seats will be up for election next year.

CAMPAIGN FUNDING amounting to $3,000 to $4,000 is being spent for Pedersen's campaign. Pedersen said the funds are coming from social functions and his own campaign efforts, not from the

Bernard E. Pedersen

Republican organization.

Pedersen denied charges by his opponent that the Regular Republican Organization is closed to many Republicans. As for the Village Independent Party (VIP's), a group of Republicans that split from the organization for local elections several years ago, Pedersen says he's "just not convinced that they're really interested" in working with his organization.

"There are lots of times when they (other Republicans) didn't do it the way I wanted to. But you can't get very far if you're not united," Pedersen said.

He hit what he calls the current coalition backing Valukas for the Republican committeeman spot, charging that in other areas, Democrats have moved into major positions via coalition ticket.

"ONE DAY THE Republicans wake up and it's no longer a Republican village. . . I'm just saying that when you have a coalition, you wind up building up the minority," he added, hitting the VIP position supporting local party labels.

Accusations that Pedersen has a conflict of interest by holding both the assessor post in the township government and the committeeman job for the Republican party are untrue, he said.

"You know, the committeeman job is non-pay, so I just don't see the conflict. I was elected twice to the assessor's office before I became committeeman," he said.

Pedersen does believe he's done a good job as committeeman, being responsible for electing Republicans, finding and electing candidates, and raising money for the organization.

"Basically, in my case, it comes down to experience and dedication to the job, and continuity," Pedersen said.

Anton Valukas:

'Party must have spectrum of opinion'

by DOUG RAY

Anton Valukas wants to become Palatine Township Committeeman to open up the Republican Party to a wider spectrum of opinion.

"I would like someone to tell me who is the better Republican — Barry Goldwater or Charles Percy. They're both good Republicans with different views on the same issues," Valukas says.

And this is what his campaign is all about. He feels many Republicans in Palatine and Rolling Meadows have been banished from the organization run by incumbent committeeman Bernard Pedersen.

"If I'm elected, I would call a meeting of all Republicans and tell them my philosophy . . . see if they agree or disagree and then try to heal the wounds."

He says that if the Republican Party is to exist, it must have a complete spectrum of opinion. He cites a poll that he says shows only 24 per cent of the people consider themselves Republicans and 34 per cent independents. "I am appealing to anyone who has the right to vote in Palatine Township."

VALUKAS AND PEDERSEN are at odds concerning whether national parties should become involved in municipal government. Valukas feels the national party label should be banned while Pedersen was the force behind the Republican election sweep of the Palatine Village Board last year.

"What bothers me," Valukas says, "is that if Daley can do it in Chicago, we can do it in Palatine."

Valukas also criticizes the fact that Pedersen holds an $8,000-a-year job as Palatine Township Assessor while also being the township's leading Republican. Valukas charges Pedersen has slated himself for the highest paying job in township government. Valukas pledges to hold only the job of Republican committeeman.

Regarding patronage jobs, Valukas says, "It sticks in my throat to see 60- or 70-year-old men having to swallow 10 tickets to a fund-raising dinner." He vows to have no patronage system, if elected, and adds the only responsibility of a patronage worker is to his job — not to the elected official who gave it to him.

SOME OF VALUKAS' primary supporters are the same persons who were defeated by the Republicans for the Palatine Village Board last year. He also has been endorsed by Mayor Roland Meyer of Rolling Meadows. According to Valukas' calculations, 100 votes in each precinct will make him a winner.

Valukas, former president of the Palatine Township Regular Republican Organization and former precinct captain is an 18-year resident of the township. He works as an attorney for the Commercial Union Assurance Companies.

Vocabulary plan tested at Addams

A new vocabulary program designed to improve youngsters' reading abilities is being piloted in fourth-grade classrooms at Jane Addams School in Palatine.

Based on an educational radio program, Plus 10 consists of 90 20-minute taped lessons, workbooks and an optional literature series. It was introduced in December.

Presently, fourth graders are only listening to the tapes and answering the questions in the workbooks. The literature series is being considered for next year, according to fourth grade teacher Jamie Nelson.

Each tape works on the pronunciation, spellings and meanings of several words. Every new word is used in a short story or fable and word games, also on tape.

The literature series consists of the same short stories and fables in the tapes. Mrs. Newman said that with the series, youngsters could follow along in the books and see the words as they hear them.

"WE FELT IT was a good enrichment program," Mrs. Nelson said. The course is being used in addition to the school's regular reading and spelling programs that include the study of various words.

The youngsters in the school are not having any significant difficulties with vocabulary, she added. "This is one area you can't emphasize too much," she said. A better vocabulary helps youngsters in reading and reading is an important part of all academic courses, Mrs. Nelson added.

The program was introduced into the fourth grades after repeated attempts to bring the radio program into the classroom failed because of poor reception, Mrs. Nelson said. Cost for the set of tapes and workbooks is $368.22, according to principal Robert Dellamaria.

He said that an evaluation of the program will be made next December.

MRS. NELSON said that the youngsters like the program because it's a variation on the regular teaching routine. Instead of listening to her, she said, the children listen to a tape for awhile.

"It's an exciting new approach," she added. She said she is using the program both for large groups consisting of the entire class and for small groups that need extra help in learning new words.

The local scene

LWV meeting set

The meeting is scheduled for 9:15 a.m. at the Presbyterian Church of Palatine.

Residents evacuated from all 10 units

Blaze guts Philippe Apartments on Rohlwing Road; many homeless

by TONI GINNETTI

Fire gutted a two-story apartment building yesterday afternoon in unincorporated Palatine Township, causing extensive property damage and leaving several families homeless.

The blaze started in the basement of the 10-unit Philippe Apartments at 2707 Rohlwing Rd. just south of Campbell Street. No one was reported injured.

No immediate damage estimate was available, but Palatine Fire Chief Orville Helms said "damage will be extensive." Helms added state fire marshals had been called to investigate the cause.

The fire started at approximately 3:30 p.m. Joe Enochson, 2615 Rohlwing Rd., who resides in the building adjacent to the damaged building, called Rolling Meadows firemen after he saw smoke coming from the basement area.

"I was driving by and I saw smoke coming from the basement, so I called the fire department," Enochson said. He said Rolling Meadows firemen arrived within minutes of the call.

HELMES SAID THE Rolling Meadows department, located only blocks from the site of the fire, has an agreement that an engine from the city department will respond initially to fire calls in that unincorporated area.

Six engines and fire trucks from the Rolling Meadows, Palatine Rural and Schaumburg fire departments subsequently responded to the call.

Helms said all residents of the building had evacuated before firemen arrived. Several pets were feared trapped in the building, but were later found to be safe. A dog that had been trapped in a burning apartment survived.

Tenants left homeless by the blaze were notified by American Red Cross volunteers at the scene that shelter would be provided them for three days if the families had no place to stay.

MOST OF THE tenants lost all or most of their possessions in the smoke-filled, blackened apartments.

One tenant, Mrs. Laurie Huckin, said she was able to rescue a pet dog before the fire engulfed the building. "I was driving home on my way to pick up my son from nursery school in Palatine when I passed by and saw the fire," said Mrs. Huckin, who works at Northwest Community Hospital. "They let me go in there and get my dog."

Firemen, wearing oxygen masks, broke windows and tore a hole in the roof of the building as they fought for more than an hour to bring the blaze under control. Water hoses were aimed in the apartments and in the basement area to douse the fire.

Heavy smoke billowed out the roof and windows of the building and traveled through the first and second floor, blackening interior walls and destroying most of the apartments.

ROLLING MEADOWS Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty said the fire apparently started in the basement area and spread to the first and second floors.

There was an early unconfirmed report that an explosion was heard in the basement by one tenant just before the blaze broke out, but Helms said an exact cause would probably not be known until today.

He added he did not think a faulty washing machine started the fire, a report that had also been considered earlier.

The fire was the third in the past two years at the apartment site. Helms said two past fires were minor. The last was caused when fumes from a floor refinishing product being used in one of the first floor apartments in the other wing of the same building ignited a nearby gas heater.

THE FIRE APPARENTLY will renew attempts by homeowners living in unincorporated Palatine Township on Rohlwing Road immediately north of the apartments to annex to Rolling Meadows.

The homeowners have sought to annex to the city party to insure quick fire, ambulance and police service from the city departments located only blocks away, according to one homeowner, Robert Gorseger, 2207 S. Forest.

He said yesterday the Palatine Rural Fire Department took several minutes to respond to the call because of its distance from the area, but the Rolling Meadows department provided immediate aid.

"I've become quite concerned about this," he said. "We're in an area completely surrounded by Rolling Meadows, but when we've talked to the mayor (Roland J. Meyer) about this, he says we cannot be annexed because Ill. Rte. 53 is behind us, and that isn't part of Rolling Meadows."

He added Cook County Sheriff's Police did not get to the area until 20 minutes after the fire began.

Rolling Meadows police were on the scene almost immediately to provide traffic control until the county police arrived.

Festival ticket sales booming

The sale of tickets for St. Colette's first parish festival, "As Times Go By," is going well, according to the festival's general co-chairman, Robert Ulbrich.

He said that tickets for the festival, which features five cabaret shows in a nightclub setting, are still available. The five shows span the eras from 1898 to 1960.

The shows will be shown at 7:30 p.m. March 22, 23, 29 and 30 in the church basement, 3900 Meadow Dr., Rolling Meadows. Cost per person is $5. Food and drinks are extra. Tickets can be obtained by calling 255-3829 or 253-8150.

Proceeds from the festival, will be used to improve St. Colette's School and reduce church debts. Part of the money will go towards a national organization which promotes the teaching of religion to children, Ulbrich added.

About 550 Rolling Meadows residents are involved in the productions. Almost 10 per cent are not members of the church, added festival publicity chairman Phyllis Pasczk. "The big thing is the community involvement," she said.

Vocabulary plan pilots at Jane Addams

A new vocabulary program designed to improve youngsters' reading abilities is being piloted in fourth-grade classrooms at Jane Addams School in Palatine.

Based on an educational radio program, Plus 10 consists of 90 20-minute taped lessons, workbooks and an optional literature series. It was introduced in December.

Presently, fourth graders are only listening to the tapes and answering the questions in the workbooks. The literature series is being considered for next year, according to fourth grade teacher Jarie Nelson.

Each tape works on the pronunciation, spellings and meanings of several words. Every new word is used in a short story or fable and word games, also on tape.

The literature series consists of the same short stories and fables in the tapes. Mrs. Newman said that with the series, youngsters could follow along in the books and see the words as they hear them.

"WE FELT IT was a good enrichment program," Mrs. Nelson said. The course is being used in addition to the school's regular reading and spelling programs that include the study of various words.

The youngsters in the school are not having any significant difficulties with vocabulary, she added. "This is one area you can't emphasize too much," she said. A better vocabulary helps youngsters in reading and reading is an important part of all academic courses, Mrs. Nelson added.

The program was introduced into the fourth grades after repeated attempts to bring the radio program into the classroom failed because of poor reception. Mrs. Nelson said. Cost for the set of tapes and workbooks is $368.22, according to principal Robert Dellamaria.

He said that an evaluation of the program will be made next December.

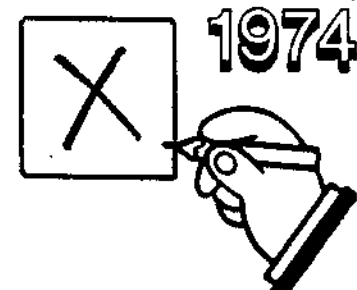

MRS. NELSON said that the youngsters like the program because it's a variation on the regular teaching routine. Instead of listening to her, she said, the children listen to a tape for awhile.

"It's an exciting new approach," she added. She said she is using the program both for large groups consisting of the entire class and for small groups that need extra help in learning new words.

State police to recruit women

by TONI GINETTI

The Illinois State Police are going to have to change their "man of action" slogan soon. The girls are moving in.

For the first time in the department's 52-year history, women will be eligible to take the battery of tests required of prospective troopers. The tests are given periodically, with the next testing expected to be given within four months, according to a spokesman for the State Police Merit Board in Springfield.

Duane Traynor, technical consultant for the merit board, Wednesday said the decision to permit women to apply for state trooper posts was made several months ago. The decision was coupled with another ruling eliminating the former 5-foot, 9-inch minimum height requirement.

"The height standards for the police departments are being challenged all the time, and rather than wait for a court suit, we decided to eliminate it," Traynor said of the ruling.

THAT RULING will also aid in recruiting women to the department since the height minimum, which is above the average female height, will no longer hinder applicants.

"Women will be eligible to take the next testing in the next four months," Traynor said. Women selected will be required to perform the same duties as fellow male officers.

"They're going to do exactly the same thing as a man does," Traynor said. "They'll be required to work three shifts and patrol alone in squad cars. We don't have special slots for women as some local police departments do. They'll be expected to do the same thing as a man."

The decision means Illinois will join several other states which already have women state police officers, including Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Connecticut.

There are no women in training at the Illinois State Police Academy in Springfield, Traynor said, but female troopers could be a part of the force by the end of the year if a recommendation from Gov. Daniel Walker to increase the number of state troopers is accepted by the state legislature.

THE STATE POLICE department is currently limited by law to 1,700 troopers, but Walker has asked for a 75-member increase in the proposed state 1975 fiscal budget.

"It's a matter of budgeting," Traynor said of the proposed manpower increase. "If the funds are available, the 75 troopers will be included in the budget."

There has been no decision made on whether a certain percentage of the new recruits will have to be women, Traynor added.

"The only thing definite is there will be women eligible," he said. "But they will be competing with the men on an equal level in everything."

TRAYNOR said there are apparently no reservations among state police officials about the quality of work a woman can perform or on the ability of a trained woman to handle the job.

"A qualified woman will do the same job a qualified man will do," he said. "The problem will be to find the qualified woman."

State police in Illinois handle primarily the enforcement of traffic laws rather than criminal matters. They are responsible for patrol of all state highways, expressways and tollways.

Sixteen state police headquarters are scattered around the state. District 3 in Des Plaines covers the northern portion of Cook County.

Village board wrapup

Developer must start flood work

Tony Greco, owner and developer of the Oasis Shopping Center in Palatine, has been given three weeks to produce "a constructive effort toward solution" of flooding problems in that area.

The village board said Greco should have no longer than three weeks to produce a flood prevention program, presumably plans for flood control ponds. According to Village Mgr. James Bennett, Greco has been trying to devise a single flood basin to serve other nearby property owners and the Commonwealth Edison Co.

But village officials this week, called flooding in that area "a long standing problem" and ordered the plans be submitted to solve it.

Work on ninth well resumes

Work again is under way on the village's ninth water well to serve residents in northwestern Palatine, but village officials say the well will not be completed until fall.

Construction had been at a standstill for more than two months while workers tried to pull out drilling equipment which had been lodged 650 ft. below ground. Village officials said the problem occurred in January when the Cook County Sheriff's Dept. ordered workers to stop drilling near Sterling Avenue in the Countryside Apartment complex because of noise complaints. Because of the delay, water pressure problems in that area will continue until the well is operational.

Girl Scout Week proclaimed

Village Pres. Wendell Jones has proclaimed March 10 to 16 Girl Scout Week in Palatine. He asked residents to support the Girl Scouts in their efforts locally.

Lake Louise to be one way

Lake Louise Drive will be a one-way street again. A representative of the Lake Louise PTA told village officials this week that residents are concerned about the safety of children in that area, because a one-way street sign was removed. The village board said an ordinance will be drawn up and approved March 18, making the street again one way.

The street had been one way for five years until a court challenge to a ticket issued a driver there revealed the village had not passed an ordinance authorizing only one-way traffic. The sign was then taken down.

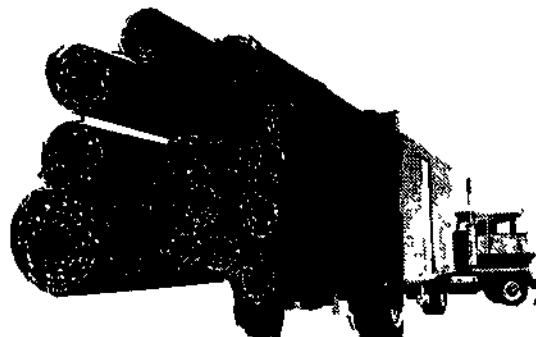

25-mph speed limit

The speed limit will be 25 miles per hour on two streets in the Willow Wood subdivision in Palatine. Residents in that area said traffic was traveling too fast in the neighborhood where there are many young children.

The new speed limit applies to Tahoe Trail from Rohlfing Road to Willow Wood Drive and to Stark Drive from Tahoe Trail to Rohlfing Road.

Village Mgr. James Bennett said another test of driving conditions on Willow Wood Drive will be taken in an attempt to lower the speed limit on that road. A recent test showed the speed should be 30 miles per hour but local residents hope a 25 mile per hour limit can be passed.

Residents evacuated from all 10 units

Blaze guts Philippe Apartments on Rohlwing Road; many homeless

by TONI GINETTI

Fire gutted a two-story apartment building yesterday afternoon in unincorporated Palatine Township, causing extensive property damage and leaving several families homeless.

The blaze started in the basement of the 10-unit Philippe Apartments at 2707 Rohlwing Rd. just south of Campbell Street. No one was reported injured.

No immediate damage estimate was available, but Palatine Fire Chief Orville Helms said "damage will be extensive." Helms added state fire marshals had been called to investigate the cause.

The fire started at approximately 3:30 p.m. Joe Enochson, 2615 Rohlwing Rd., who resides in the building adjacent to the damaged building, called Rolling Meadows firemen after he saw smoke coming from the basement area.

"I was driving by and I saw smoke coming from the basement, so I called the fire department," Enochson said. He said Rolling Meadows firemen arrived within minutes of the call.

HELMES SAID THE Rolling Meadows department, located only blocks from the site of the fire, has an agreement that an engine from the city department will respond initially to fire calls in that unincorporated area.

Six engines and fire trucks from the Rolling Meadows, Palatine Rural and Schaumburg fire departments subsequently responded to the call.

Helms said all residents of the building had evacuated before firemen arrived. Several pets were feared trapped in the building, but were later found to be safe. A dog that had been trapped in one burning apartment survived.

Tenants left homeless by the blaze were notified by American Red Cross volunteers at the scene that shelter would be provided them for three days if

THE FIRE APPARENTLY will renew attempts by homeowners living in unincorporated Palatine Township on Rohlwing Road immediately north of the apartments to annex to Rolling Meadows.

The homeowners have sought to annex to the city partly to insure quick fire, ambulance and police service from the city departments located only blocks away, according to one homeowner, Robert Gorsegner, 2207 S. Forest.

The shows will be shown at 7:30 p.m. March 22, 23, 29 and 30 in the church basement, 3900 Meadow Dr., Rolling Meadows. Cost per person is $5. Food and drinks are extra. Tickets can be obtained by calling 255-3829 or 253-8150.

Proceeds from the festival, will be used to improve St. Colette's School and reduce church debts. Part of the money will go towards a national organization which promotes the teaching of religion to children, Ulbrich added.

About 550 Rolling Meadows residents are involved in the productions. Almost 10 per cent are not members of the church, added festival publicity chairman Phyllis Pesczk. "The big thing is the community involvement," she said.

Vocabulary plan pilots at Jane Addams

A new vocabulary program designed to improve youngsters' reading abilities is being piloted in fourth-grade classrooms at Jane Addams School in Palatine.

Based on an educational radio program, Plus 10 consists of 90 20-minute taped lessons, workbooks and an optional literature series. It was introduced in December.

Presently, fourth graders are only listening to the tapes and answering the questions in the workbooks. The literature series is being considered for next year, according to fourth grade teacher Jarle Nelson.

Each tape works on the pronunciations, spellings and meanings of several words. Every new word is used in a short story or fable and word games, also on tape.

The literature series consists of the same short stories and fables in the tapes. Mrs. Newman said that with the series, youngsters could follow along in the books and see the words as they hear them.

"WE FELT IT was a good enrichment program," Mrs. Nelson said. The course is being used in addition to the school's regular reading and spelling programs that include the study of various words.

The youngsters in the school are not having any significant difficulties with vocabulary, she added. "This is one area you can't emphasize too much," she said. A better vocabulary helps youngsters in reading and reading is an important part of all academic courses, Mrs. Nelson added.

The program was introduced into the fourth grades after repeated attempts to bring the radio program into the classroom failed because of poor reception. Mrs. Nelson said. Cost for the set of tapes and workbooks is $38.22, according to principal Robert Dellamaria.

He said that an evaluation of the program will be made next December.

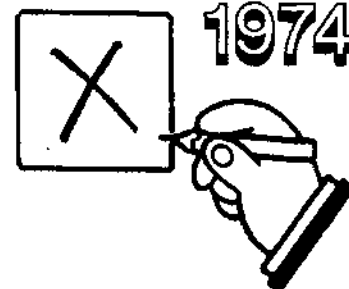

MRS. NELSON said that the youngsters like the program because it's a variation on the regular teaching routine. Instead of listening to her, she said, the children listen to a tape for awhile.

"It's an exciting new approach," she added. She said she is using the program both for large groups consisting of the entire class and for small groups that need extra help in learning new words.

A look at the races for committeemen...

ELECTION 1974

For township committeemen

Peter J. Gerling:

'I would like to finish what I started'

by BOB LAHEY

Pete Gerling says he would like to "finish what I started."

Gerling — it's Peter J. — refers to the 18 months he served as interim Democratic committeeman of Palatine Township before being defeated by the current incumbent, Richard J. Mugalian.

And Gerling charges that what he started is very similar to what Mugalian promised, but has failed to carry out in four years as committeeman.

Gerling complains that Mugalian promised to make the Palatine Township Democratic Organization one of wide-open participation. But he says that as committeeman, Mugalian used the post mostly to get himself elected to the Illinois House of Representatives, and is now attempting to hold onto it to expand his influence as a politician.

GERLING READILY identifies himself as an old-fashioned politician — he is often quoted for his remark, "You can't even run a factory without a boss." But, he says, Mugalian is trying to build his own machine in the guise of trying to eliminate the machine politics of the regular Cook County organization.

Nevertheless, he says that he would be cooperating with the incumbent today, instead of trying to unseat him, if Mugalian had carried out his promises as a committeeman.

One of those — which Mugalian made while running for the legislature — was that he would step aside in this election if a qualified successor could be found.

According to Gerling, he offered before filing for the post to help Mugalian find a successor who would be acceptable to both sides. "He told me, in effect, 'I'm going to be the committeeman,'" Gerling declares.

Having decided that Mugalian should be opposed, Gerling says he decided further to do it himself. "I'd like to finish what I started, to make a place in the party for all Democrats, to make a place for the young people and for women."

Gerling concedes that organizational work did not progress notably in his 18 months as committeeman, but he points out that in that brief tenure he was preoccupied with two elections — a presidential election and a township election.

He contends now that he has more time and that he has come around to the viewpoint that the committeeman should share the workload with an executive committee to encourage more people to get involved in the organization's work.

Bernard Pedersen:

'The organization has been successful'

by JULIA BAUER

Bernard Pedersen is going into Tuesday's Palatine Township Republican committeeman race with what he believes is one big thing in his favor — his record as committeeman for the past five years.

Pedersen is being challenged for the committeeman post by Anton Valukas. The incumbent has served as Palatine Township assessor since 1965, a job he sees as mostly a public service post. He also has his own Palatine Insurance firm.

"Basically, I think the Palatine Township Republican organization has been a very successful one. My record is a very successful one," Pedersen said of his committeeman job.

That record included election of an entire slate of party-backed officials to the township board and winning a five-to-two majority on the Palatine Village Board last year. The two minority seats will be up for election next year.

CAMPAIGN FUNDING amounting to $3,000 to $4,000 is being spent for Pedersen's campaign. Pedersen said the funds are coming from social functions and his own campaign efforts, not from the

Bernard E. Pedersen

Republican organization.

Pedersen denied charges by his opponent that the Regular Republican Organization is closed to many Republicans. As for the Village Independent Party (VIP's), a group of Republicans that split from the organization for local elections several years ago, Pedersen says he's "just not convinced that they're really interested" in working with his organization.

"There are lots of times when they (other Republicans) didn't do it the way I wanted to. But you can't get very far if you're not united," Pedersen said.

He hit what he calls the current coalition backing Valukas for the Republican committeeman spot, charging that in other areas, Democrats have moved into major positions via coalition ticket.

"ONE DAY THE Republicans wake up and it's no longer a Republican village. I'm just saying that when you have a coalition, you wind up building up the minority," he added, hitting the VIP position supporting local party labels.

Accusations that Pedersen has a conflict of interest by holding both the assessor post in the township government and the committeeman job for the Republican party are untrue, he said.

"You know, the committeeman job is non-pay, so I just don't see the conflict. I was elected twice to the assessor's office before I became committeeman," he said.

Pedersen does believe he's done a good job as committeeman, being responsible for electing Republicans, finding and electing candidates, and raising money for the organization.

"Basically, in my case, it comes down to experience and dedication to the job, and continuity," Pedersen said.

Richard A. Mugalian:

'Our organization works for people, not bosses'

by JOANN VAN WYE

Richard A. Mugalian has talked of stepping down as Democratic committeeman of Palatine Township for two years but his name will be back on the ballot in Tuesday's primary.

The problem he says — no "suitable successor."

The Chicago attorney announced during his 1972 campaign for a seat in the Illinois House of Representatives that if elected he would give up the committeeman post if another local party leader could be found. He was elected and two years later he is still searching for that party leader.

Mugalian's competition in March will be coming from Peter J. Gerling, the same man he wrestled control of the party away from four years ago.

AS COMMITTEEMAN, Mugalian says he has developed a volunteer and independent organization that "works for the people, not the political bosses."

"I am kind of a symbol of what we are doing here," said Mugalian, explaining that because of his name recognition it might be easier for him to beat back an attempt by the old-style politicians, represented by Gerling, to regain control of the organization.

"I would still rather not have the obligation (of committeeman)," he says. But he is quick to add that he sees no conflict in holding both posts.

"I have the luxury of not having to go to any party leaders to ask for favors. I can be totally independent," he said. His campaigns for both posts are being kept free of the organization and any support from within is on an independent basis, he contends.

Instead of a monolithic system, Mugalian feels Palatine Township has an open organization where the legislators are free from political coercion.

SINCE TAKING OVER the top spot in

Richard Mugalian

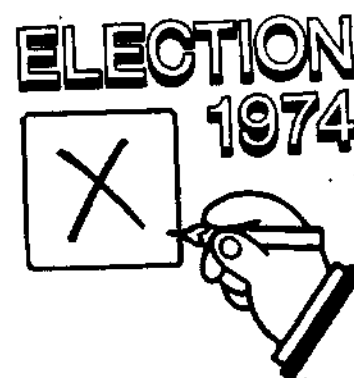

the township democratic party Mugalian says he has:

- Opened the party to all interested persons.
- Rested decision-making power with a majority vote of the membership.
- Placed leadership in the hand of an elected board of directors.
- Kept open financial records.
- Made the local organization independent of the Cook County Central Committee.
- Eliminated the patronage system.

MUGALIAN says he has nothing against helping someone get a job and estimates he may have helped ten people find jobs while committeeman but always with the understanding there were no obligations. The alleged practice of patronage workers being required to give 2 per cent of their salaries to the committeeman and work in precincts was eliminated under Mugalian.

Ironically, Mugalian says, it's the patronage workers he helped free who are now ringing doorbells for his opponent.

"They figure if I am elected they still won't be fired but if they support me and Gerling is elected he may fire them," said Mugalian.

Voters in Palatine Township will elect GOP and Democratic Palatine Township committeemen Tuesday. Seeking election as Republicans are Bernard Pedersen and Anton Valukas. Democratic candidates are Richard Mugalian and Peter Gerling. The stories were written by members of the Herald staff after interviews with each of the candidates.

Anton Valukas:

'Party must have spectrum of opinion'

by DOUG RAY

Anton Valukas wants to become Palatine Township Committeeman to open up the Republican Party to a wider spectrum of opinion.

"I would like someone to tell me who is the better Republican — Barry Goldwater or Charles Percy. They're both good Republicans with different views on the same issues," Valukas says.

And this is what his campaign is all about. He feels many Republicans in Palatine and Rolling Meadows have been banished from the organization run by incumbent committeeman Bernard Pedersen.

"If I'm elected, I would call a meeting of all Republicans and tell them my philosophy . . . see if they agree or disagree and then try to heal the wounds."

He says that if the Republican Party is to exist, it must have a complete spectrum of opinion. He cites a poll that he says shows only 24 per cent of the people consider themselves Republicans and 34 per cent independents. "I am appealing to anyone who has the right to vote in Palatine Township."

VALUKAS AND PEDERSEN are at odds concerning whether national parties should become involved in municipal government. Valukas feels the national party label should be banned while Pedersen was the force behind the Republican election sweep of the Palatine Village Board last year.

"What bothers me," Valukas says, "is that if Daley can do it in Chicago, we can do it in Palatine."

Valukas also criticizes the fact that Pedersen holds an $8,000-a-year job as Palatine Township Assessor while also being the township's leading Republican. Valukas charges Pedersen has slated himself for the highest paying job in township government. Valukas pledges to hold only the job of Republican committeeman.

Regarding patronage jobs, Valukas says, "It sticks in my throat to see 60- or 70-year-old men having to swallow 10 tickets to a fund-raising dinner." He vows to have no patronage system, if elected, and adds the only responsibility of a patronage worker is to his job — not to the elected official who gave it to him.

SOME OF VALUKAS' primary supporters are the same persons who were defeated by the Republicans for the Palatine Village Board last year. He also has been endorsed by Mayor Roland Meyer of Rolling Meadows. According to Valukas' calculations, 100 votes in each precinct will make him a winner.

Valukas, former president of the Palatine Township Regular Republican Organization and former precinct captain is an 18-year resident of the township. He works as an attorney for the Commercial Union Assurance Companies.

State police to recruit women

by TONI GINETTI
The Illinois State Police are going to have to change their "man of action" slogan soon. The gals are moving in.
For the first time in the department's 52-year history, women will be eligible to take the battery of tests required of prospective troopers. The tests are given periodically, with the next testing expected to be given within four months, according to a spokesman for the State Police Merit Board in Springfield.
Duane Traynor, technical consultant for the merit board, Wednesday said the decision to permit women to apply for state trooper posts was made several months ago. The decision was coupled with another ruling eliminating the former 5-foot, 9-inch minimum height requirement.
"The height standards for the police departments are being challenged all the time, and rather than wait for a court suit, we decided to eliminate it," Traynor said of the ruling.

THAT RULING will also aid in recruiting women to the department since the height minimum, which is above the average female height, will no longer hinder applicants.
"Women will be eligible to take the next testing in the next four months," Traynor said. Women selected will be required to perform the same duties as fellow male officers.
"They're going to do exactly the same thing as a man does," Traynor said. "They'll be required to work three shifts and patrol alone in squad cars. We don't have special slots for women as some local police departments do. They'll be expected to do the same thing as a man."
The decision means Illinois will join several other states which already have women state police officers, including Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Connecticut.

There are no women in training at the Illinois State Police Academy in Springfield, Traynor said, but female troopers could be a part of the force by the end of the year if a recommendation from Gov. Daniel Walker to increase the number of state troopers is accepted by the state legislature.
THE STATE POLICE department is currently limited by law to 1,700 troopers, but Walker has asked for a 75-member increase in the proposed state 1975 fiscal budget.
"It's a matter of budgeting," Traynor said of the proposed manpower increase. "If the funds are available, the 75 troopers will be included in the budget."
There has been no decision made on whether a certain percentage of the new recruits will have to be women, Traynor added.
"The only thing definite is there will be women eligible," he said. "But they will be competing with the men on an equal level in everything."

TRAYNOR said there are apparently no reservations among state police officials about the quality of work a woman can perform or on the ability of a trained woman to handle the job.
"A qualified woman will do the same job a qualified man will do," he said. "The problem will be to find the qualified woman."
State police in Illinois handle primarily the enforcement of traffic laws rather than criminal matters. They are responsible for patrol of all state highways, expressways and tollways.
Sixteen state police headquarters are scattered around the state. District 3 in Des Plaines covers the northern portion of Cook County.

City Council wrapup

City OKs $45,000 for traffic lights

Payment of $45,000 toward the installation of permanent traffic lights at the intersection of Algonquin and New Wilke roads were authorized Tuesday by the Rolling Meadows City Council.
The sum will represent the city's share of a joint funding agreement for the lights. The Village of Arlington Heights and the state highway department will provide the other needed funds.
The permanent lights will be installed when the extension of New Wilke south of Golf Road is completed later this year. Existing temporary traffic lights now control the intersection. The temporary lights were also paid for jointly by the municipalities and the state.

Scholarship plan reviewed

Aldermen reviewed the outline of a scholarship application which will provide high school seniors in Rolling Meadows an opportunity to apply for city-sponsored education grants.
The applications are available at the city hall and must be returned to high school guidance counselors by March 25. Rolling Meadows students graduating from Fremd, Rolling Meadows, Sacred Heart of Mary or St. Viator high schools are eligible to apply.
The city plans to award three $1,000 scholarship grants. Applicants will be judged by a six-member panel including five counselors from the four high schools and city administrative intern Charles Green, a graduate student at Northern Illinois University currently working for the city as part of his graduate studies.

Area will be subdivided

A land parcel located on East Frontage Road just south of Bobwhite Court will be subdivided into three lots. The site is owned by Harold Okon, who sought the subdivision in order to see the site to a developer.

Zoning commission created

A special city zoning commission was created by the council to consider a proposed rezoning for a development on land south of Golf Road adjacent to the Northwest Tollway.
The site is presently zoned for manufacturing use, but a developer is seeking to have the site rezoned for office use.
Mayor Pro-Tem William Ahrens, in the absence of Mayor Roland J. Meyer, appointed plan commission members Richard Schar, Walter Jacobsen, Patricia Jacobsen, Carl Couve, Elizabeth Brissenden, Keith Bane and Bernard Macklin to serve on the commission. Zoning board of appeals member Richard Kornatz was appointed an alternate commissioner.

Disaster preparedness month

March has been declared disaster preparedness month in Rolling Meadows. Ald. William Ahrens (2nd), made the proclamation, urging residents to become familiar with the services and work of the Civil Defense Department.

Schaumburg parks worker to be charged?

by PAT GERLACH

The Schaumburg Park District has been touched by a county investigation of bribes allegedly offered to municipal officials by chemical suppliers.

A park district employee may be indicted by a Cook County Grand Jury within the next week, according to sources in State's Atty. Bernard Carey's office.

The employee is one of as many as 24 public officials in at least 10 suburban communities, including the Village of Schaumburg, who could face county charges of bribery, official misconduct and conflict of interest in connection with kickbacks from chemical purchases.

PARK PURCHASES from United Laboratories and Precision Laboratories were confirmed late yesterday by Paul Derda, director of parks and recreation.

Derda also confirmed that representatives of the State Attorney's office have recently contacted one of his employees.

"Neither the park board members nor I were aware of this in any way," Derda said.

Sources have indicated that records of various chemical companies including United and Precision, as well as Misco International, Wheeling, Madison Chemicals, Franklin Park; Cole Chemical, St. Louis; National Chemsearch, Irving, Tex., and several others have been subpoenaed.

BOTH DERDA and Mayor Robert O. Atcher say their records have not been subpoenaed, but Atcher said the State's Attorney's office requested a list of vendors several months ago.

Village records indicate regular purchases of chemicals and cleaning supplies averaging about $1,000 per month from United Chemicals, and smaller, less frequent payments to Madison Chemicals from early 1970 through mid-1973.

Last week J. C. Smith, village supt. of public works, said he took "gimmicks," including fountain pens and pencils from suppliers but said he had never accepted "anything big."

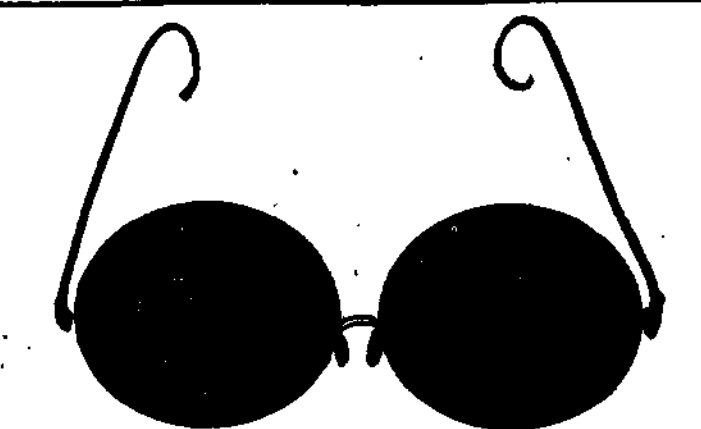

OFFICIAL SOURCES said there will be no immediate indictments in Hoffman Estates even though records indicate small purchases from several of the companies involved between 1969 and 1973. Those purchases averaged between $500 and $600 per year.

Alleged kickbacks in the form of merchandise certificates, cash or U.S. Savings Bonds to persons responsible for buying chemical supplies for villages, townships, schools and other tax-supported agencies have reportedly been confirmed by county officials.

In January, Ralph E. Wilkening, former Schaumburg Township highway commissioner, pleaded guilty to seven charges of official misconduct stemming from acceptance of merchandise certificates sent to him by a chemical company. He was subsequently fined $2,440 and received one year's probation on each of the charges, with the terms running concurrently.

Parks employee may be charged in kickback probe

by PAT GERLACH

County to probe alleged perjury by developer

County authorities have scheduled a meeting with Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board Pres. Donnie Rudd to explore the investigation of possible perjury charges against Schaumburg developer Ronald Benach.

Cook County Assistant State's Atty. Nicholas Ivarone will meet with Rudd Monday at Chicago's Civic Center to discuss the possibility of an investigation, said Laurie Granger, a spokesman for the state's attorney's office.

Mrs. Granger stressed yesterday that the meeting is "exploratory."

Rudd requested the probe in a Feb. 11 letter to Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey, with a carbon copy to U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson.

He contends that Benach, who plans to develop Lexington Green, a 480-unit condominium project on property owned by Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher and Chicago attorney Jack M. Pritzker, told school officials he did not have to make standard school district contributions because the mayor controls zoning. However, Rudd was not present when the

BOTH DERDA and Mayor Robert O. Atcher say their records have not been subpoenaed, but Atcher said the State's Attorney's office requested a list of vendors several months ago.

Village records indicate regular purchases of chemicals and cleaning supplies averaging about $1,000 per month from United Chemicals, and smaller, less frequent payouts to Madison Chemicals from early 1970 through mid-1973.

Last week J. C. Smith, village supt. of public works, said he took "gimmicks," including fountain pens and pencils from suppliers but said he had never accepted "anything big."

OFFICIAL SOURCES said there will be no immediate indictments in Hoffman Estates even though records indicate small purchases from several of the companies involved between 1969 and 1973. Those purchases averaged between $500 and $600 per year.

Alleged kickbacks in the form of merchandise certificates, cash or U.S. Savings Bonds to persons responsible for buying chemical supplies for villages, townships, schools and other tax-supported agencies have reportedly been confirmed by county officials.

In January, Ralph E. Wilkening, former Schaumburg Township highway commissioner, pleaded guilty to seven charges of official misconduct stemming from acceptance of merchandise certificates sent to him by a chemical company. He was subsequently fined $2,440 and received one year's probation on each of the charges, with the terms running concurrently.

The structure will be judged tomorrow long with other entries in a contest held as part of the industrial arts program at Eisenhower Junior High School, Jones and Hassell roads, Hoffman Estates. 75% must go directly to charity

Schaumburg to screen charity drives

Charitable organizations asking permission to solicit funds in Schaumburg will be required to prove that at least 75 per cent of their proceeds go directly to charity.

Stemming from a recent Citizens for a Better Environment inquiry, Schaumburg officials this week adopted new regulations for charitable solicitations.

Last fall CBE, an antipollution group operating in New York and Chicago, requested permission to collect funds within the village limits but the board deferred action since the governing ordinance was being revised and a moratorium had been placed on all soliciting.

TRUSTEES THEN took issue with the fact that nearly 50 per cent of funds collected the previous year went for CBE administrative costs, which included paid solicitors.

Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel said he recently served as special counsel to the village of LaGrange in federal action with CBE.

Siegel said a federal court found the LaGrange ordinance invalid because of "lack of standards" and granted a temporary injunction allowing the CBE operation to proceed there.

According to Mayor Robert O. Atcher and Clerk Sandy Carsello, CBE officials are again asking for an answer from Schaumburg.

"The whole thing boils down to CBE telling us they want approval to go ahead or they will sue us," observed Atcher.

THE ORDINANCE adopted this week makes it unlawful for persons or organizations to solicit contributions for a purported charity without complying with village requirements and obtaining a permit from the village board.

The permit application must name the organization, and give names and addresses of persons in charge of the local solicitation, as well as solicitors.

Dates and times of the planned solicitation and confirmation that the organization has complied with state law regarding solicitation and proof of tax-exempt status is also required.

THE ORGANIZATION will be required to submit a certified audit of the last full year's operations, which indicate distribution of funds.

Solicitation hours will be limited to 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays and a $10 permit fee will be charged.

Violators can be fined up to $500 for each offense, according to the new ordinance.

3 opponents in township Dem committeeman race

Morrissey sees himself as key issue

by PAT GERLACH

As an incumbent, John F. Morrissey sees himself as the key issue in the Schaumburg Township Democratic committeeman race.

He believes that any Democratic committeeman is traditionally subject to severe criticism in a staunchly Republican area. But he has decided to seek a second term in the township post.

But Morrissey considers his chief responsibility in the leadership role as serving as a member of the Cook County Democratic Central Committee and promoting support for party candidates at the state and national levels.

"I feel no obligation to run Democratic states in local elections," said Morrissey noting that Schaumburg Township has had a "uniquely active Republican thrust" in village matters.

THOUGH MORRISSEY freely admits he has "tried to support independent slates," he said he ran for mayor in Hoffman Estates in 1969 because it was clear to him that the old Village Party there "was going to be in trouble with the law."

On another occasion, Morrissey ran for state representative "as a last resort and a service to the party" because other

by STEVE NOVICK

Bill Holmes is a man seeking to become Democratic Committeeman on a write-in campaign. He'll beat the tremendous odds against a write-in candidate's winning because of his involvement in the community, he says.

"Let us be a service organization," he adds about how the Democrats in the Schaumburg Township can overcome the weaknesses they've experienced in the past.

There are as many as 90 people now gone from the Democratic Party who were active with the township organization before incumbent committeeman Morrissey became committeeman. "These are the people who are backing me," he said about a base of volunteer workers who would make the Democrats strong in Schaumburg Township.

They and others are behind him, he said, because he's lived the past 14 of his 42 years in Hoffman Estates and during that time he has shown interest and leadership in his community through activity in church and athletic activities.

HIS THREE YEARS service as president of the Democratic organization were fruitful too, Holmes added, except where he was limited by Morrissey, who as committeeman kept the organization

Carsello 'will run party like business'

by NANCY COWGER

John J. Carsello is a businessman who wants to turn the local Democratic Party into a businesslike organization.

And, at 71 years of age, he plans to bring vigorous new leadership to the party, recruit vital young members and take leave of the old way of doing things in the Regular Democratic Organization of Schaumburg Township.

Carsello moved to Schaumburg in September of 1971. His first formal introduction to local politics was the 1971 Presidential Ball of the Schaumburg United Party.

CARSELLO SAID he resisted overtures from local Democratic leaders until after the Schaumburg Township election last year. That contest convinced him the Democratic organization was failing in Schaumburg Township, he said, and he decided then he would become active to fight the party's demise.

The first action of Carsello if he is elected Democratic committeeman will be to change the site of party meetings from the back room of what he terms "a saloon" to the township library or a school building. The party now meets in The Ground Round Restaurant, 109 N. Roselle Rd., Hoffman Estates, which has a bar. Carsello maintains the bar deters

Signals to halt traffic tieups

Traffic bottlenecks will be a thing of the past when temporary signals are installed at Weathersfield Way and Roselle Road.

Schaumburg trustees authorized the expenditure of $45,000 in Motor Fuel Tax funds for the project this week, pointing out that the action was for state recording purposes.

Village Engineer Joe Zgonina said the project is expected to cost far less than that amount though he said the current estimate is to be kept "confidential" for competitive bidding processes.

Zgonina said the temporary installation can be easily converted to a permanent system in the future. He noted that several developers in the area have agreed to pay for a portion of the project.

Mayor Robert O. Atcher encouraged trustees to approve the MFT transfer but requested Zgonina to produce a breakdown of similar needs within "150 miles of village streets" to facilitate future planning.

In other business, Atcher reported correspondence from Hugo J. Stark, Cook County highway superintendent, concerning temporary signals soon to be installed at Schaumburg and Meacham roads.

Atcher said Stark has given an order to proceed with the work so that signals will be installed in the next few weeks.

Club gets liquor 'right'

Members of Schaumburg's Right Tennis Club will still be able to quench their thirst after a fast set thanks to village officials' action this week.

A liquor license formerly issued to the club was revoked when the facility was sold, explained Mayor Robert O. Atcher.

He told Theodore Reid, Woodridge, one of five new owners of the club, located on Hammond Drive just south of Algonquin Road, that licenses are not transferred in the case of a sale. The club was formerly owned by Marion Jayne, Inverness.

Reid assured Atcher and village trustees that no changes are planned in club operation and said the lounge will still be operated by Roger Eckenberg, Lombard. Beer and mixed drinks will be served at the bar and there will be sit-down service.

In related discussion, the village board had no objection to issuance of a liquor license to John Titus, of Dallas, Tex., who plans to build a Steak and Ale Restaurant just east of Schaumburg State Bank on Golf Road.

Titus said the building will be 16th Century English Tudor style architecture and will contain seven dining rooms, with a capacity of 200, plus a lounge for about 85 people.

He said the Schaumburg restaurant will be different in design from others planned in Willowbrook, Lombard, Highland Park and Niles.

$37,000 in vehicles OK'd

Purchase of $37,000 in vehicles was authorized by Schaumburg village officials this week.

The public works department will take delivery of three dump trucks from Oakton International Inc. at a total cost of $32,285.50. Vehicles are expected to arrive within 26 weeks.

Woodfield Ford will provide a four-wheel drive Bronco within 60 days. The cost of the vehicle is $4,888.

Stavros faces $1,000 fine on pool count

James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, faces a possible $1,000 fine for construction of a swimming pool at his Northbrook home without a county building permit.

Stavros paid a $25 county permit department penalty, and $123 in permit costs March 1 after he was cited by the Cook County Department of Building and Zoning for failure to obtain a permit.

"We've decided to proceed further and go to court to seek a fine to protect the office... if someone is electrocuted in the pool," Asst. State's Atty. John Lee said yesterday. "I'll probably ask for a $1,000 fine."

A Circuit Court hearing on the charges is scheduled April 8.

LEE SAID HE will seek affidavits from firms that constructed the pool in the back yard of Stavros' home at 3705 Whirlaway Dr., unincorporated Northbrook. If the firms refuse or if the statements "show that something is wrong in the construction," Lee will seek a larger fine. Maximum penalty on the misdemeanor charge is a $200 per day fine or six months in jail.

County officials said the pool will be inspected before the hearing. "The biggest problem is telling if the electrical and plumbing work meet specifications. Once a pool is complete, it's impossible to tell," Lee said.

One Circuit Court judge ordered destruction of a pool last year that was built without county inspection, Lee said.

Chorus seeking vocalists

Singers looking for an outlet for their voices are invited to join Hoffman Hallmark Chorus, a group of northwest suburban adults who meet weekly for practice and perform several times a year.

The chorus is seeking new members. Practices are held at 8 p.m. Wednesdays in Helen Keller Jr. High School, 820 W. Bode Rd., Hoffman Estates. Auditions are not required for membership.

women, whom he views as the mainstay of a political organization, from attending meetings without an escort.
Carsello also plans to change party structure. He would appoint a blue ribbon citizens committee as a board of directors, and a watchdog committee to examine taxation in the township. A quarterly newsletter would be mailed to registered voters, informing them of activities of Democrats and Republicans in the township.
Finances also are important to Carsello, who says there has been no accounting system for party coffers. Carsello feels formal accounting books should be kept, with three counter signatures plus his own required on each check drawn on party accounts.
DEMOCRATS SHOULD not be afraid to run for local office, said Carsello, and he plans to hold open conventions to slate candidates for village and township elections. Those candidates must be able to count on organization support, said Carsello, as he claims they have not been able to do in the past. Democrats who ran in the Hoffman Estates election in 1971 had no aid from the party, said Carsello, and independent township candidates in 1973 were denied a party endorsement, when an endorsement and campaign assistance could have reversed the election, he believes.

candidates could not be found.
He says he prefers to have idealists in his organization — "people who work for the Democratic Party because they believe in it." He claims he is "always out looking" for people who are "take-charge individuals."
He does not believe in a strict dues paying type of organization. Morrissey looks forward to "unification and coalescence" in further building the local party.
Morrissey, now building a private law practice, hopes to eventually leave the job with Cook County Forest Preserve District. "I don't really care to have a political job," he says. His political opponents have criticized his job holding.
AS COMMITTEEMAN, Morrissey says he does not "get jobs of any consequence" to pass out. "I don't build my organization on this basis."
Though Morrissey admits his wife accepted a cashier's job in the county treasurer's office "at a relatively low salary" because she was the only person he could find "willing to travel downtown with me every day for the kind of pay involved."

County to probe alleged perjury by developer discussion was held.

Benach later denied having made such statements while testifying under oath at a village zoning hearing, Rudd said.
Benach has repeatedly denied making the remarks but agrees that he did claim of being asked to make excessive voluntary contributions.
Anton R. Valukas, deputy chief of the official corruption section of the U.S. Attorney's office, has told The Herald he will not investigate Rudd's charges and said he had no proof of violation of federal laws in the matter.
Rudd could not be reached for comment on next week's meeting late yesterday.

Holmes will 'beat the odds' on write-in going "only around election times."

Activity year-round is how to keep it working, service activity and social activity, Holmes said.
He would have precinct captains out finding if people have trouble with their sewers and people who could help citizens get action from local government when they don't know where to go.
HE'D ATTRACT PEOPLE to the organization to answer questions on everything from scholarships to flooding, said Holmes, adding he would have office hours a few nights a week where people could come to him for help.
At election time, he'd let candidates know he'd get them an audience and that they're welcome to come speak in the community. In local elections he'd encourage party members to form independent slates and encourage others to work to get them elected.

Referendum on Rob Roy tract purchase coming soon

by MARCIA KRAMER

A referendum definitely will be conducted to determine the willingness of Mount Prospect residents to pay extra taxes in order to retain the Rob Roy Golf Course as open space.

The Mount Prospect Village Board, meeting in executive session Tuesday night, agreed to bring the question of whether the village should buy the golf course directly to the people.

A date has not been set for the referendum but Mayor Robert D. Teichert yesterday told The Herald "the sooner the better."

A firm cost on what it would cost to buy the course also is yet to be worked out, though Teichert told The Herald earlier this week he expects it would cost homeowners around $30 a year for 20 years, or a total of $600 each, to keep the golf course "green."

THE VILLAGE'S interest in buying the 180-acre course and adjoining 20-acre driving range was prompted by efforts announced by Kenroy Inc., Skokie, to build 4,500 apartment and condominium units on the property. Kenroy is contract purchaser of the golf course from the McDonald family trust, at an estimated cost of $8 million to $9 million. The property is east of Wheeling Road between Camp McDonald Road and Euclid Avenue in unincorporated Wheeling Township.

The village board at first planned to survey the village, offering three alternatives: to buy the course, at taxpayers' expense; to approve a scaled-down version of the Kenroy plans with less density and more open space; or to reject the plans altogether, forcing Kenroy to seek a zoning change from Cook County.

Teichert, however, earlier this week said he would prefer to skip the survey and go straight to referendum. The rest of the village board concurred with him Tuesday night.

A RANDOM sampling of interviews earlier this week by The Herald showed that many village residents who don't live in the immediate vicinity of the golf course would nevertheless support a referendum to buy it. An earlier survey, of residents of the immediate Rob Roy area, showed as expected, overwhelming desire to keep the golf course as open space.

The Prospect Heights Improvement Assn., on Tuesday night passed a resolution urging that Rob Roy be retained as open space and called upon two other agencies to buy it.

The PHIA, which itself has no bonding authority, suggested that the Prospect Heights Park District and Wheeling Township Board of Auditors open negotiations to purchase the golf course.

Joe Lesniak, president of the park district board, told The Herald yesterday, "We would like to help any way we can." However, he added: "We don't have the wherewithal to get the funds for it." He said he would discuss the matter with other park board members.

Ethel Kolerus, Wheeling Township auditor, was unavailable for comment yesterday.

Waukegan Airport; and several property owners who live west of Schoenbeck Road and south of Hintz Road.

AS JUDGE COMERFORD begins a two-week vacation on April 10, he also set aside April 29 for a continuation of the incorporation hearing. It is expected evidence will be presented on one of the two dates and a schedule for legal briefs will be determined on the other. Kreger said that several legal objections will have to be decided by Comerford.

Most of the homeowners who are objecting have filed for annexation to Wheeling. However, they filed after the incorporation petition was filed. Thus, Wheeling village officials have postponed consideration of the property owners' annexation request until after the incorporation issue is decided. Should the residents become a part of incorporation, they could disannex afterwards as they would be on the periphery of the new city.

Incorporation hearing continued to April 8

The Cook County Circuit Court hearing on whether Prospect Heights residents will be able to vote to form a city began yesterday, but almost immediately was continued to April 8.

During the brief opening hearing, Judge Harry G. Comerford did accept as evidence two exhibits presented by Donald Kreger, attorney for the incorporation-sponsoring Prospect Heights Improvement Assn. They were certificates stating the required legal notice had been published and that the name "Prospect Heights" was available for adoption by a new municipality.

Attending the hearing were six other attorneys, representing more than a dozen objectors to the incorporation effort. Listed as objectors were the municipalities of Wheeling, Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Northbrook; Krom Associates, a land company; All-gauer's Fireside Restaurant, 2855 N. Milwaukee Ave.; the owners of Pal-

Defensive driving course offered for police

Policemen from 13 north and north-west suburban departments will begin a two-day course in defensive driving today to be taught by Des Plaines police driving instructors.

The 16-hour lecture course is designed to teach police how to instruct the National Safety Council-sponsored program in their own communities.

Lt. James Scheskie and Off. Robert

Neil of Des Plaines police will moderate the sessions. Twenty-one officers from patrolmen on up to chiefs will take the course.

Rolling Meadows Police said Capt. Robert Evans and Traffic Supt. Off. Andrew Herbert will represent their department.

WHEELING POLICE Lt. Robert Nelson may also attend, while Arlington Heights police are also expected to send an officer. Scheskie said the Skokie Schiller Park and Streamwood Police Departments will be represented.

"We hope they will offer the course to people in their own communities," said Scheskie, who along with Neil has taught defensive driving techniques to nearly

THE GREGORY SCHOOL stock market is open for business and Sue Sell is ready to do some speculating. Students in fifth and sixth grade at the Mount Prospect school are participating in the project designed to teach them about the market. At the end of four weeks the best investor wins a real share of stock.

Gregory students enter the stock market —fortunately, not with their own money

by LUISA GINETTI

A special project now under way at Gregory School in Mount Prospect may turn average fifth- and sixth-grade students into financial tycoons.

Of course, this isn't the main purpose of the stock market course, but the school's mini-Wall Street is so complete, about the only thing missing is ticker tape.

The project, being directed and supervised by classroom teacher Eileen Cohen and learning resource center director Karen Geffert, has been under way since November, but the actual buying and selling of stock was only begun this week.

As a prelude to the start of actual business transactions, the students in the upper intermediate level of the school began learning about the New York Stock Exchange and how it works.

INFORMATION WAS obtained from the American Stock Exchange explaining what happens from the time a person purchases stock to the time he decides to sell it. Material was also received from various companies telling of their financial situations and stock and bond plans.

The students also learned how to read stock quotations in newspapers, what a stock portfolio is and how the market affects the financial and political picture of the country.

All this was in preparation for the part of the project in which the students were most interested — making their own stock investments.

Miss Cohen said at this point the project became practically a total creation of the students. They built an actual stock exchange window, they designed stock certificates and a seal to be stamped on each certificate, they built their own Big Board on which daily quotations are listed and they even designed their own money to be used to purchase stock.

TWELVE MAJOR companies listed on the New York Exchange have been selected by the teachers as companies in which the students can invest. Each student has been given $2,000 to spend and from here on each child is on his own.

Each day for the next four weeks, students will be able to buy and sell their stocks in the 12 companies until the project is ended or until they go bankrupt. If a student does happen to experience financial catastrophe in the project by losing all his money, Miss Cohen said he will receive a lot of sympathy but no more money.

"We've made it very clear to them that if they lose all their money, they can carry on all they want but they won't get any more to spend," Miss Cohen said. "We decided to do it this way because we want this to be as close to real life as possible and in real life if you go bankrupt, that's it."

THE STUDENTS have to follow some very careful guidelines in the stock market project. Each child is responsible for his own money and stock portfolio. He may buy and sell his stock as he chooses but it is up to him to figure out all the mathematical computations involved in his transaction before he makes his sale at the exchange window.

If he happens to figure wrong or not have enough money with him to purchase the stock, he is penalized by losing the privilege to enter any deals for one day.

A penalty is also assessed against anyone who fails to get his stock certificates stamped with the official seal.

Miss Cohen said the students take the project very seriously and every day the first thing each student does is check the Big Board in her classroom to see if their stock went up or down.

Miss Cohen is responsible for keeping the board up-to-date each day by recording the stock's high and low for the day as well as the closing change. In addition, the board also shows the weekly closing change of each stock.

A SCHEDULE OF times when the exchange window is open for business is posted on the window and transactions can only be made during those specific times.

The project has been so successful thus far that teachers and administrators have also begun participating in it. They may invest in the market but must follow the same rules that guide the students.

At the end of the four weeks, the teachers plan to award a prize to the student who has made the most money speculating in the market. The prize will be (naturally) one share of stock in a major company.

The teachers said the project has been successful not only because it has been greeted enthusiastically by the students, but because it has incorporated other areas of study.

Prospect Heights 'limited city' government urged

by TOM VON MALDER

A "limited form of city government" with a balanced budget is being projected for the City of Prospect Heights, should the unincorporated area form a municipality.

The "limited" government could operate on a budget of $437,500, according to Richard Wolf of the Prospect Heights Improvement Assn. board. Wolf has been studying the costs and income of the proposed City of Prospect Heights for many months. He estimates that existing taxes alone would produce income of $433,000.

According to Wolf, the yearly costs of running Prospect Heights would be $60,000 for an administrative staff (a secretary, secretary-treasurer, engineer and lawyer); $27,500 for office space and equipment; $125,000 for police protection (nine men and equipment through a contract with the Cook County Sheriff's police); $160,000 for road maintenance and public works (a continuation of a contract with Wheeling Township); and $65,000 left over for municipal improvements.

FOR INCOME. Wolf said, the county government already receives an estimated $106,000 in sales tax rebate, $110,500 in state income tax rebate, at least $47,840 in federal revenue sharing funds from the Prospect Heights area. Plus another $168,860 in other taxes such as the Motor Fuel Tax fund, Wolf added.

Wolf spoke on incorporation during Tuesday night's special town meeting called by the PHIA for all residents of unincorporated Wheeling Township. Several hundred persons attended the meeting at Hersey High School.

Other topics discussed at the meeting were the Regional Transportation Authority, the Cook County Wheel Tax and the PHIA's Environmental Action Force.

THE SIX-MONTH-OLD EAF proposed three resolutions, all of which were adopted. The first stated that the Rob Roy Golf Course be kept as open space and that the Prospect Heights Park District and the Wheeling Township Board of Auditors be asked to start negotiations for a purchase of the Euclid Avenue golf course. (The Mount Prospect Zoning Board of Appeals last week rejected proposed rezoning of the golf course for apartments, but annexation and rezoning petitions must still be heard by the Mount Prospect Village Board.)

The second EAF resolution called for the creation of a legal fund to be used to fight any development that would "violate" Prospect Heights residents' "environmental rights."

The third resolution extended the life of the EAF, as its six-month charter had expired.

On the RTA, the PHIA urged those attending the meeting to vote against the proposed transportation authority in the March 19 referendum. State Rep. Robert S. Juckett, R-Park Ridge, spoke out against the RTA. A proponent of the RTA, State Sen. John J. Nimrod, R-Skokie, failed to show up as scheduled. A resolution against the RTA was passed by the town meeting.

THOSE ATTENDING the meeting also supported the PHIA vow to bring its fight against the Wheel Tax to the U.S. Supreme Court. Residents were urged by the PHIA to mark their applications for the vehicle stickers "paid under protest" when purchasing them.

The Illinois Supreme Court recently overturned a lower court decision which had declared the Wheel Tax unconstitutional. Sheriff's police will begin ticketing residents for failure to have the stickers on April 1.

PHIA president Jack Gilligan said some $6,000 has to be raised for the Wheel Tax fight, but he said the PHIA and its attorney were confident the U.S. Supreme Court would strike down the tax.

Library budget up $62,495

The Mount Prospect Public Library Board last week adopted a 1974-75 budget of $316,500. As reported earlier in The Herald, the budget is $62,495 more than this year's.

Most of the increase, about two-thirds, will go for salaries. The library's budget must now be approved by the village board as part of the village's budget.

Also at the library, the 1974 "Thomas Register of American Manufacturers" and "Thomas Register Catalog File" have arrived. The 11-volume set is used heavily by businessmen. The various volumes list products and services, company names and addresses, and brand names.

Mount Prospect residents — and others — continue to make frequent trips to the public library, 14 E. Busse Ave. The library's counter showed 1,037 visitors Monday and the circulation figure for the day was 1,075.

Defensive driving class offered for area police

1,000 persons in three years.

During the classes, to be conducted at the Des Plaines Public works garage, Algonquin and Campground roads, Neil said the officers will take a modified version of the driving course and will learn instruction techniques Friday.

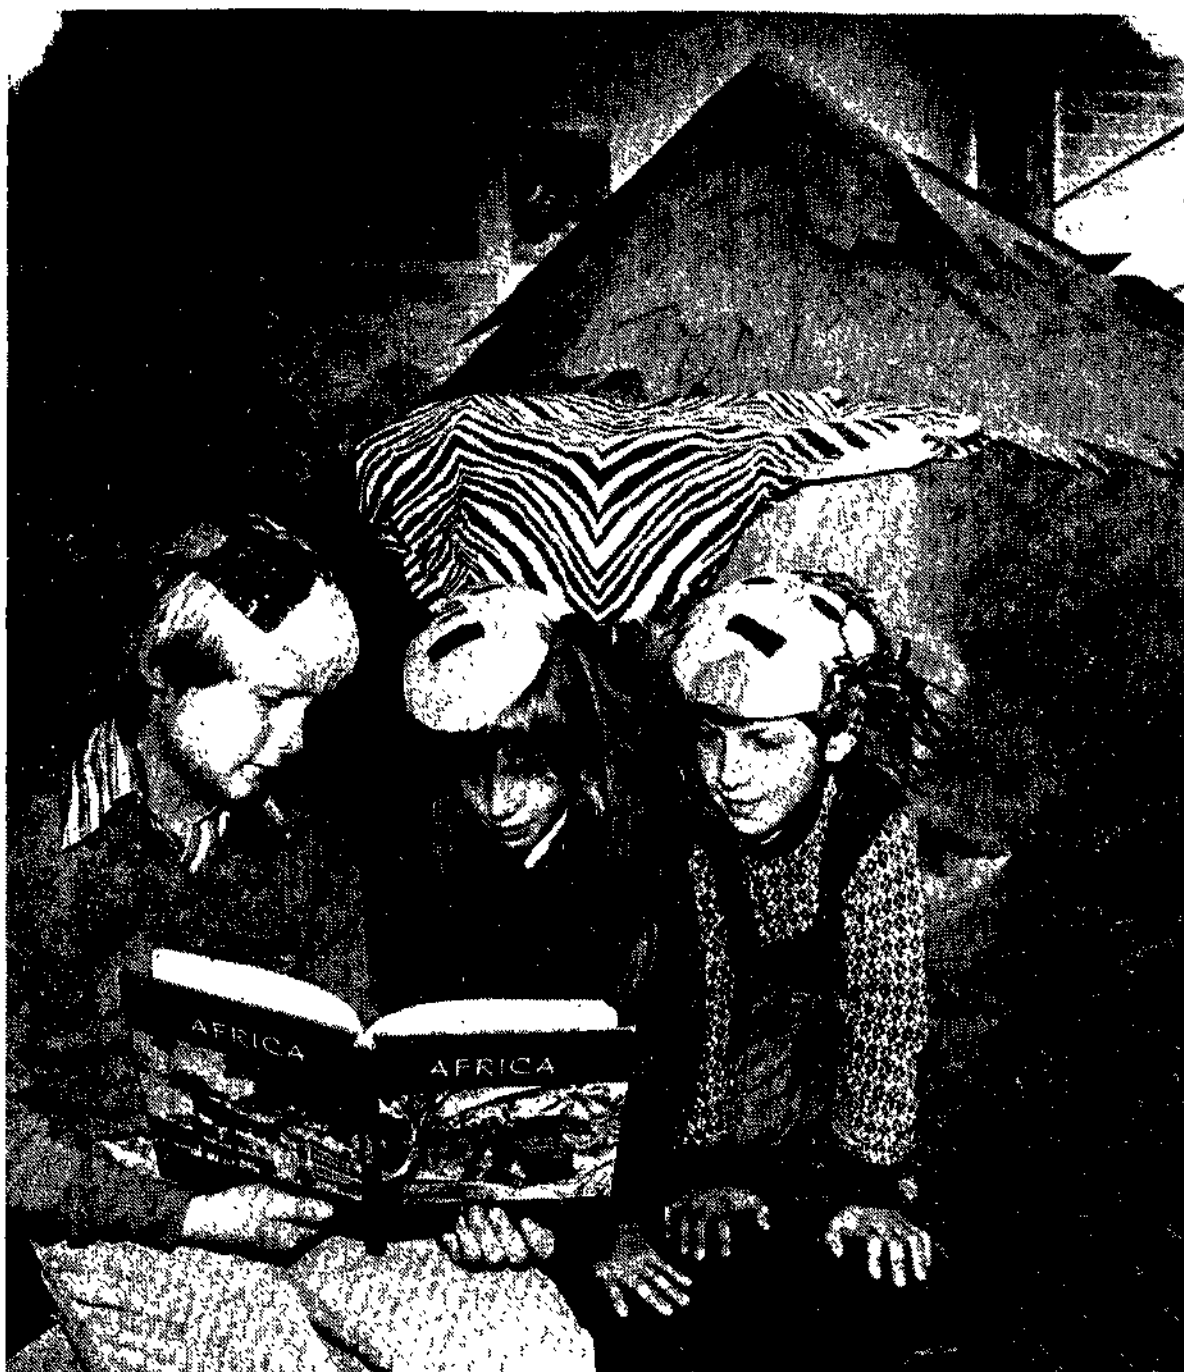

SCHESKIE SAID the idea for passing instructional methods onto other departments came during discussion of the plan at meetings of police chiefs from north and northwest suburban departments last December and February.

In addition to periodic courses offered to citizens, Scheskie and Neil are teaching defensive driving to employees of the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA).

Some 60 FAA workers recently completed the course and another 60 are currently taking in the program in accordance with regulations requiring employees driving government vehicles to take the driving course.

Scheskie said such programs have been a factor in an overall 21 per cent decrease in injury accidents in Des Plaines for 1973 as compared with totals for 1972. He added another course may be offered to Des Plaines residents in April.

THE JUNGLES OF Africa have been recreated in the third-grade class at Betsy Ross School in Prospect Heights. Here (from left), Jamie Reichel, Janet Blessing and Willie Dopp ponder a book on the dark continent as they sit in front of a homemade African hut, it's all part of an African study course.

Board, library officials to meet on land purchase

Mount Prospect village trustees and library directors will get together to discuss a possible land purchase in the central business district for a new library.

The joint meeting in executive session was initiated by the village board to consider purchase of the abandoned Central School site at Central Road and Main Street, among other downtown parcels.

The library board has indicated it needs a larger facility because the present library at 14 E. Busse Ave., is cramped for space.

The village board also is seeking downtown property because administrative offices in the village hall, 112 E. Northwest Hwy., are tight on space.

IN REGARD TO possible village purchase of the Mount Prospect State Bank building at 15 E. Busse Ave., Mayor Robert D. Teichert said: "We've had discussions, but I can't talk beyond that."

The village board's meeting with the library board, he said, will be "to explore several possible land acquisitions downtown," including the school and the bank buildings. A date for the meeting has not been set.

While library board members are elected officials, the library board must go through the village board for certain functions, such as issuing bonds if needed in order to build a library.

Prospect Bible church to conduct mission

The Mount Prospect Bible Church will begin its annual two-week mission conference Sunday with the Rev. David Green the guest speaker. The theme of the conference is "Reach More in '74."

March 23 a Men's Breakfast will be held at 8 a.m. where two missionaries from the West Indies Mission, Jerry Frost and the Rev. Herb Shoemaker, will be speakers.

A pot-luck banquet is planned for March 30 and Vernon Mortenson, director of the TEAM mission, will be the guest speaker.

by BOB LAHEY

For several years, Nathaniel Leighton of Arlington Heights has conducted a "shadow cabinet" of the Democratic Party in Wheeling Township.

Leighton and his organization, the Independent Democratic Coalition of Wheeling Township, want to come out of the shadows now.

Leighton believes that the time has come for them to take over the regular Democratic organization of the township, and so he is challenging incumbent committeeman Donald Norman for the top spot in the party.

The Coalition was organized formally in 1970, but Leighton says the work of the group dates back to the 1950s, when he and others, as independents, worked with former township committeeman James Stavros in support of specific candidates like Sen. Paul Douglas and State Rep. Eugenia Chapman of Arlington Heights.

LEIGHTON, HOWEVER, never joined the Democratic organization. He says today that he never signed up because he believed that Stavros ran the organization like a Chicago-machine ward organization, and he didn't care for such tactics.

He still does not belong to the organization, because he feels that the organization under former committeeman James L. McCabe, and recently appointed committeeman Donald L. Norman, has been "more of the same."

Leighton quickly offers that "I have no knowledge of any influence that Stavros (currently under indictment for extortion in the village of Wheeling) has anywhere." He also volunteers that he knows of nothing to connect Stavros with his successors, McCabe and Norman.

The point of the election, he says, is not what the organization has been in the past, but whether he or Norman best represent the viewpoint of the majority of the members of their party in the township. Leighton clearly believes that he does.

Two Arlington Heights residents are running for the Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman post in Tuesday's primary election. Donald Norman, the incumbent, is an attorney and prosecutor for the Village of Wheeling. Nathaniel Leighton, the challenger, is personnel manager for an industrial firm.

Nathaniel Leighton

HIS VIEWPOINT is one which he sees as being shared by such "independent" — the regulars call it "maverick" — committeemen as Lynn Williams in New Trier Township, and Richard Mugalian in Palatine Township.

In a nutshell, that viewpoint is one generally in opposition to the management of the Democratic Party as practiced by Cook County Chairman Richard J. Daley.

Leighton sees the township organization as one which has reflected the Daley mode of operation.

"Our efforts have been to search out the new Democrats," he says, "and I believe we have contributed to the growth of the party here to the point where we have gained the majority."

Leighton vows an "open party" if he is elected committeeman and said he will ask his opponent in the primary to work with him to increase its strength.

Stavros faces $1,000 fine on pool count

James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, faces a possible $1,000 fine for construction of a swimming pool at his Northbrook home without a county building permit.

Stavros paid a $25 county permit department penalty and $123 in permit costs March 1 after he was cited by the Cook County Department of Building and Zoning for failure to obtain a permit.

"We've decided to proceed further and go to court to seek a fine to protect the office . . . if someone is electrocuted in the pool," Asst. State's Atty. John Lee said yesterday. "I'll probably ask for a $1,000 fine."

A Circuit Court hearing on the charges is scheduled April 3.

LEE SAID HE will seek affidavits from firms that constructed the pool in the back yard of Stavros' home at 3705 Whirlaway Dr., unincorporated Northbrook. If the firms refuse or if the statements "show that something is wrong in the construction," Lee will seek a larger fine. Maximum penalty on the misdemeanor charge is a $200 per day fine or six months in jail.

County officials said the pool will be inspected before the hearing. "The biggest problem is telling if the electrical and plumbing work meet specifications. Once a pool is complete, it's impossible to tell," Lee said.

One Circuit Court judge ordered destruction of a pool last year that was built without county inspection, Lee said.

by BOB CASEY

"I'm proud to be a Democratic committeeman," said Donald Norman. "I'm happier than I've ever been in my whole life because I'm doing what I enjoy doing."

Norman, an Arlington Heights attorney, was elected head of the Wheeling Township Regular Democratic Organization last August, succeeding former committeeman James McCabe, who resigned a month earlier.

Faced with an independent challenge to his reelection, Norman emphasizes changes he said are being made to attract independent Democrats who have objected to the organizational style of the party in Wheeling Township.

"I consider all Democrats good Democrats who support somebody in the Democratic Party in this township," he said. Of his opponent, Nathaniel Leighton, Norman said: "Frankly, I wish Nat would come home."

"I CONSIDER him to be a fine, moral person having a fine, moral family. . . I do not want to hear anything bad said about him ever at any time," he said.

The issues in the committeeman election, according to Norman, are familiarity with the job and experience. He is just as eager as anyone, Norman indicated, to broaden the party appeal.

"I will do my utmost to serve all Democrats in the township. Just because you can only support one man or one issue," he said, that should be no reason to avoid party activity. "I say come in," he said.

Norman, who unsuccessfully opposed McCabe for the committeeman post in 1967, said he was "not satisfied with the organization as it was tendered to me." For one thing, he said, there were no active independents.

And "some precinct captains whose names I saw but I never saw their faces and I still don't know them." New captains have been added to most of their precincts and in one instance, Norman said a precinct captain was removed.

ANOTHER PROBLEM, he said, is the concentration of Democratic strength in the Village of Wheeling and the lack of

Donald Norman

party activity in other township communities such as Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Buffalo Grove and Prospect Heights.

Norman has begun to "beef up" party efforts in the other areas, he said, predicting an increased vote there in Tuesday's Democratic primary.

He said the party now has captains in 108 of the township's 117 precincts and promised to release a list of their names when all precincts are finally staffed. To do so beforehand, Norman said, would cause embarrassment to the organization if party officials downtown saw a list indicating that some precincts aren't being manned.

Norman refused to comment on the federal indictments of James Stavros, Democratic committeemen from 1968 to 1967 who picked McCabe as his successor over the objections of Norman. Stavros used his organization to gain control of village government Wheeling during the 1960s. He has been charged with 10 counts of extortion and conspiracy in connection with shakedowns of developers and businessmen in the village.

BECAUSE HE IS an attorney, Norman said he can't make any comment on the allegations against Stavros and five men indicted with him. At one point in an interview Norman denied that the Democratic organization controls Wheeling village government but he admitted he got his current job as village prosecutor on the recommendation of Stavros.

Structure features twin 9-story towers

High-rise apartment-office plans for downtown told

by JOE SWICKARD

Plans for a twin-towered nine-story apartment-office complex in downtown Arlington Heights have been presented to the village. Douglas W. Dodds, president of the First Arlington National Bank, would be the developer of the project.

The 50,000-square-foot complex, featuring an enclosed mall with skylight and fountain, would take most of the block bounded by Highland, Vail, Campbell and Sigwalt Streets. The complex would extend through the block and would front on Highland and Vail streets.

The southern part of the block is occupied by Illinois Bell Telephone Co. There are also two houses and several parking lots in the area.

According to Dodds' drawings, there would be twin nine-story towers connected by an enclosed mall. The mall would have shops clustered around the center fountain and would be illuminated by the dome skylight.

The second floor would feature office space and a garage for some of the residential and commercial tenants.

THE REMAINING seven floors of each tower would have one and two-bedroom apartments. According to the plans, there would be 182 apartment units in the two towers.

Three major problems could block the development of the complex, according to Joe Kesler, village planner. He said the plans, as submitted, show a density more than twice what is permitted in that zoning district.

Kesler said the traffic generated by such a building might overburden streets in the downtown area. He pointed out the central business district has narrow streets with a slow traffic flow.

Potentially the biggest roadblock is the parking problem. Dodds' plans show spaces for 52 cars in the complex, while the village requires 310 parking spaces for a development of that size.

Dodds has said he would lease the additional spaces in the proposed municipal garage. Kesler said Dodds' parking requirements would necessitate a garage of five or six stories to meet the needs of commuter and shopping parking. He said this doubles the size of proposed garages in the central business district.

JOHN BEST, village engineer, said the parking garages would have to be built at the same time as construction of the complex.

Darryl Kenning, assistant village manager, said the complex "could very well be" the impetus for the village to construct the long-proposed garages.

"The village board has said in the past the garages would be built when a major development was planned for the central business district," Kenning said.

He said several plans for garages as well as methods of financing them are under consideration by the village.

One method of funding under consideration would be a special taxing district in the central business district. Assessments would be levied on new constructions to finance the initial construction and a continuing levy would pay for maintenance and bond retirement obligations, he said.

Kenning is presently considering the parking problem and will include recommendations about it in a letter to be sent to the village board of trustees. Resolution of the parking problem is necessary before Dodds' plans can be approved, he said.

FIREMEN DIRECTED WATER at the burning roof of an apartment at the Philippe complex in Palatine township yesterday where fire destroyed 10 units and left several families homeless. Fire officials had no immediate damage estimate, but personal property losses are expected to be high. No one was injured in the afternoon fire.

CTA driver rips RTA during Chamber debate

A driver for the Chicago Transit Authority blasted the proposed Regional Transportation Authority at a debate sponsored by the Arlington Heights Chamber of Commerce.

"The city of Chicago will dominate this board — they control the CTA," said the driver, who declined to give his name. He said he was forced to donate $5 to pro-RTA forces through a union deduction on his paycheck, even though he is against the referendum on March 19.

"The CTA has done one thing — reduce transportation," the man said. He charged the CTA caused the loss of thousands of jobs when it took over Chicago's mass transit links in 1944. The driver also accused the CTA of wasting money, such as by renting office space in the Merchandise Mart instead of accepting free office space from the city.

STATE REP. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, said taxpayers in the state of Illinois will continue to pay for the CTA, through state subsidies, even if the RTA fails, and nothing will be done for the suburbs.

State Representatives Harold Katz, D-Glenview, and Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie, spoke in favor of the RTA referendum and the provisions in the RTA bill at last Tuesday night's debate.

Opponents were State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and representatives Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, and Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates. They presented no new arguments, but defended claims that the RTA will run into huge deficits by 1980, that representation in the outer counties is unfair, and that the board's powers of operation and taxation are too broad and vaguely defined in the RTA bill.

Totten said he would like to see public transportation operated under a free enterprise system instead of government control and mandates.

Record $395,540 budgeted

A record $395,540 Arlington Heights street repaving program has been outlined for the summer months.

Street work is scheduled in a variety of locations, and will include seal coating, asphalt resurfacing and asphalt overlays on older concrete streets.

Bids for the maintenance work will be reviewed by the Arlington Heights Village Board next month. The village uses state motor fuel tax money to pay for the resurfacing.

A detailed schedule of when the repaving will take place has not been worked out yet, according to Village Engr. Allen Sander. However, the road work generally goes on throughout the summer months.

THE GIANT CUTLER repaver will roll over some 74,000 square feet of streets, spreading a new asphalt surface.

Old concrete streets in the Stonegate subdivision and at a number of other locations are scheduled to be resurfaced with asphalt. Stonegate resurfacing was started last year.

Slurry Seal, a new street sealing treatment used for the first time in the central business district last summer, will be used to coat some 95,000 square yards of village streets.

Priorities for street resurfacing are determined by the village's public works and engineering departments after an annual spring inspection.

Streets tentatively scheduled for repaving are:

Earth Week

Youth council to sponsor event that brought poor '73 turnout

The Arlington Heights Youth Council is attempting to carry the torch for Earth Week this year, after the Environmental Control Commission dropped its sponsorship of the observance.

Poor attendance and general apathy from residents during last year's Earth Week prompted the ECC's decision to take a non-leadership role this year. Frank Charlton, village health director and village liaison to the ECC, said they would, however, "support other people's programs."

Earth Week was first observed in 1971 with activities planned to call attention to the problems of pollution.

JIM EWART, of the youth council, said the council will concentrate its efforts in local high schools through student representatives to the council.

Ewart said this year's plans are tentative at this point because the dates for national observance of Earth Week have not been set. He said he has contacted Senators Adlai Stevenson and Charles Percy in an effort to discover the date.

Arlington Heights held its own Earth Week last year prior to the national observance. Charlton said this earlier week was marred by poor weather for outdoor activities and did not coincide with other ecological drives by other organizations such as scout groups.

WHILE THIS year's program has not been set, Ewart said he plans to work with the federal Environmental Protection Agency to coordinate efforts.

"We'll probably check with the village and the park district to see if they have any trees to plant. We're going to call it to the attention of students and may try to work in something after schools if the schedules permit. It may just have to be an informational drive," Ewart said.

Ewart said the youth council will not be striking out on its own. "We're going to be working through established groups."

Many qualified persons unaware of U.S. program

Information campaign for poor begins

A public information campaign on a new cash supplement program for low-income senior citizens, blind and disabled persons is being organized by an Arlington Heights woman.

Pat Gardner, 408 S. Bristol Ln., will head up publicity throughout the Northwest suburbs for the federal government's Supplemental Security Income program which provides cash grants up to $195 a month to eligible persons.

People who have little or no regular cash income and who do not own other property such as stocks, bonds or jewelry that can be turned into cash may qualify for the program, if they are over 65. Blind or disabled persons of any age may also be eligible.

PAYMENTS RANGE from $130 a month for one person to $195 a month for a married couple.

The program is administered by the U.S. Social Security Administration and information and applications are available at Social Security offices, including the Arlington Heights office at 120 W. Eastman St.

Mrs. Gardner said that she is in the process of forming an advisory group to reach people who might qualify for the Supplemental Security Income program.

Working in cooperation with the Red Cross in Evanston, Mrs. Gardner said she hopes to send mailings on the program to interested groups, and has already enlisted the help of Esther Rabchuk, senior citizens advisor for Harper College.

Owning property does not in all instances exclude a low-income person from the programs. In most cases, for example, a house, car, personal items and insurance policies do not count.

THE SIZE OF the supplemental cash payments will vary according to individual incomes and circumstances.

Thousands of aged, blind or disabled people who were receiving state income assistance were automatically transferred to the new federal program last December. But Mrs. Rabchuk feels there are others who could qualify for the money but are unaware of the program.

"Our main job is to let people know about supplemental income and lay out the general qualifications," she says.

Mrs. Gardner is also a member of the Arlington Heights Housing Commission.

ELECTION 1974

by BOB LAHEY

For several years, Nathaniel Leighton of Arlington Heights has conducted a "shadow cabinet" of the Democratic Party in Wheeling Township.

Leighton and his organization, the Independent Democratic Coalition of Wheeling Township, want to come out of the shadows now.

Leighton believes that the time has come for them to take over the regular Democratic organization of the township, and so he is challenging incumbent committeeman Donald Norman for the top spot in the party.

The Coalition was organized formally in 1970, but Leighton says the work of the group dates back to the 1950s, when he and others, as independents, worked with former township committeeman James Stavros in support of specific candidates like Sen. Paul Douglas and State Rep. Eugenia Chapman of Arlington Heights.

LEIGHTON, HOWEVER, never joined the Democratic organization. He says today that he never signed up because he believed that Stavros ran the organization like a Chicago-machine ward organization, and he didn't care for such tactics.

He still does not belong to the organization, because he feels that the organization under former committeeman James L. McCabe, and recently appointed committeeman Donald L. Norman, has been "more of the same."

Leighton quickly offers that "I have no knowledge of any influence that Stavros (currently under indictment for extortion in the village of Wheeling) has anywhere." He also volunteers that he knows of nothing to connect Stavros with his successors, McCabe and Norman.

The point of the election, he says, is not what the organization has been in the past, but whether he or Norman best represent the viewpoint of the majority of the members of their party in the township. Leighton clearly believes that he does.

Two Arlington Heights residents are running for the Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman post in Tuesday's primary election. Donald Norman, the incumbent, is an attorney and prosecutor for the Village of Wheeling. Nathaniel Leighton, the challenger, is personnel manager for an industrial firm.

Nathaniel
Leighton

HIS VIEWPOINT is one which he sees as being shared by such "independent" — the regulars call it "maverick" — committeemen as Lynn Williams in New Trier Township, and Richard Mugalian in Palatine Township.

In a nutshell, that viewpoint is one generally in opposition to the management of the Democratic Party as practiced by Cook County Chairman Richard J. Daley.

Leighton sees the township organization as one which has reflected the Daley mode of operation.

"Our efforts have been to search out the new Democrats," he says, "and I believe we have contributed to the growth of the party here to the point where we have gained the majority."

Leighton vows an "open party" if he is elected committeeman and said he will ask his opponent in the primary to work with him to increase its strength.

Don Norman: 'Working to broaden party strength'

by BOB CASEY

"I'm proud to be a Democratic committeeman," said Donald Norman. "I'm happier than I've ever been in my whole life because I'm doing what I enjoy doing."

Norman, an Arlington Heights attorney, was elected head of the Wheeling Township Regular Democratic Organization last August, succeeding former committeeman James McCabe, who resigned a month earlier.

Faced with an independent challenge to his reelection, Norman emphasizes changes he said are being made to attract independent Democrats who have objected to the organizational style of the party in Wheeling Township.

"I consider all Democrats good Democrats who support somebody in the Democratic Party in this township," he said. Of his opponent, Nathaniel Leighton, Norman said: "Frankly, I wish Nat would come home."

"I CONSIDER him to be a fine, moral person having a fine, moral family... I do not want to hear anything bad said about him ever at any time," he said.

The issues in the committeeman election, according to Norman, are familiarity with the job and experience. He is just as eager as anyone, Norman indicated, to broaden the party appeal.

"I will do my utmost to serve all Democrats in the township. Just because you can only support one man or one issue," he said, that should be no reason to avoid party activity. "I say come in," he said.

Norman, who unsuccessfully opposed McCabe for the committeeman post in 1967, said he was "not satisfied with the organization as it was tendered to me." For one thing, he said, there were no active independents.

And "some precinct captains whose names I saw but I never saw their faces and I still don't know them." New captains have been added to most of their precincts and in one instance, Norman said a precinct captain was removed.

ANOTHER PROBLEM, he said, is the concentration of Democratic strength in the Village of Wheeling and the lack of

Donald
Norman

party activity in other township communities such as Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Buffalo Grove and Prospect Heights.

Norman has begun to "beef up" party efforts in the other areas, he said, predicting an increased vote there in Tuesday's Democratic primary.

He said the party now has captains in 108 of the township's 117 precincts and promised to release a list of their names when all precincts are finally staffed. To do so beforehand, Norman said, would cause embarrassment to the organization if party officials downtown saw a list indicating that some precincts aren't being manned.

Norman refused to comment on the federal indictments of James Stavros, Democratic committeemen from 1968 to 1967 who picked McCabe as his successor over the objections of Norman. Stavros used his organization to gain control of village government Wheeling during the 1960s. He has been charged with 10 counts of extortion and conspiracy in connection with shakedowns of developers and businessmen in the village.

BECAUSE HE IS an attorney, Norman said he can't make any comment on the allegations against Stavros and five men indicted with him. At one point in an interview Norman denied that the Democratic organization controls Wheeling village government but he admitted he got his current job as village prosecutor on the recommendation of Stavros.
